In the Russian bowls which are so delightful for the service of fruits and nuts for Hallowe'en and Thanksgiving Day, are bargains, which are good for one's own use, or for gifts. The bowls are of good size and 49 cents from 75. The lacquer is so good in them that some people use them for salads, and even cake making.

***

There are all sorts of bargains in trays, and many of them are beauties. One, for instance, porcelain with a wooden frame, has a design of maple leaves and pretty seed pods, and is only 80 cents. A pretty, narrow one of walnut, with handles for carrying glasses, is 65 cents, and a larger one of the same wood, $1. They are all shapes and sizes, many imported, and selling at half price.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong; Call Money Easy, 7-8@1 Per Cent.

Profit Taking Checks the List at Last—Selling Overpowers Buying, Both on a Large Scale.

Yesterday's market met expectations regarding activity, but fell below hopes regarding buoyancy. The distinction is worth noting, for it weakens the inference regarding the culmination of a movement on a volume day. The breadth of the market satisfied requirements in this respect, since the second largest day's business of the year was not excessively massed upon favorites—although necessarily favorites did absorb most of the business—but was widely distributed. But the failure of the market to advance showed that the upward tendency was still opposed by the irreconcilables, and movements of the proportions and distinguished support which this one has enjoyed usually run until something like unanimity is reached. That this is not the present condition appears from the volume of stock which was supplied to meet almost unlimited buying orders which were thrown upon the market at its opening, the first hour's business alone being enough for a full ordinary day's quota. But the attempt to rush the list up several points was a failure. The absorption was excellent but inadequate, and the pressure of sales finally overpowered the buying, powerful as it was. The tone of the market passed from uncertain to soft, and practically the entire list yielded about a point on the average for leading stocks, the most conspicuous exception being Southern common. In that the buying in both the local and London markets was irresistible, the business done reaching nearly a quarter million shares.

There were reasons enough for the change in sentiment, and the weakness of the Granger shares pointed plainly at perhaps the chief factor. Probably the conditions of the money market will become more efficient, as they have been the most stimulating hitherto, but the unruffled money market shows that this factor is still in the future tense. A rise of wheat by 4 cents here, and the Chicago bulls' excited shouts, "Two-dollar wheat before May," with a disproportionate drop in the railways relying especially upon grain freights, sufficiently indicates what most were thinking about. It does not follow that the majority were right, even if the market does support them. The most quoted experts have predicted a wheat yield 39,000,000 bushels smaller than the Government figures, which are above the decade's average, and seem small only by comparison with exceptionally large yields. The Granger railways, which declined ostensibly upon yesterday's report, have seen great prosperity upon smaller yields. The corn crop lends itself to depreciation even less easily, and the aggregate yield in dollars remains unprecedented. The export outlook is more sobering. August's exports of breadstuffs decreased $7,689,292, and the year's decreased $64,963,308. Next year there will be less correction of the deficiency in breadstuffs by the increase in cotton, and the change in our exports which began abruptly in May and has continued ever since is likely to be exaggerated unless relieved by exports of manufactures. But we export manufactures largely only when domestic consumption is depressed and at "dumping" prices. Altogether the outlook is more confused than recent one-sided sentiment in the stock market has indicated.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Market Suffers a Reaction—Liquidation and Crop Scares Responsible for the Decline.

The much-heralded reaction overtook the stock market yesterday, forcing declines of from one to two points almost through the entire active list. Brokers were divided as to whether it was what is called a "healthy reaction" or whether it was the first movement in a continuous decline. The best sentiment seemed to favor the former view. Big commission houses said that, while the reaction might extend for another point or so they felt sure that the advance could not be permanently delayed. The pools who have been pushing the market up and who took some profits yesterday cannot possibly have closed out all their lines even though they have been selling on balance for three days. It is a long lane and an uninteresting one that has no turning, and a market that can advance without a setback for weeks at a time has yet to be discovered.

Big Commission House Orders.

The houses with out-of-town wire connections reported a big accumulation of buying orders from the dear public over Sunday. The close of Saturday following the great activity of the week had made the public hungry for a share of the profits. If this appetite, to create which Wall Street has been trying all kinds of remedies for over a year, is to be nursed along, the market will have to be advanced again, otherwise the public will imitate the ground hog and retire for another six months or more.

***

A Million Share Day.

For the second time this year the sales of stocks exceeded the million-share mark, the total transactions aggregating 1,267,637 shares. Most of this represented profit taking induced to some extent by the reports of crop damages. The Government crop report of Saturday supported the argument of the crop experts. It is a curious coincidence that the estimate of the wheat crop based on the Government report confirms to within a few thousand bushels the estimate of J. J. Hill, President of the Northern Securities Company, who had placed it at 540,000,000 weeks ago. It would seem that another charge of leakage from disappointed speculators would be in order.

One Feature of Strength.

The one strong stock was Southern Railway common, which advanced to 34⅞ on buying of 207,785 shares, closing at 33⅞. There was no particular news, and the advances must be laid to pool manipulation. Earnings of the road are said to be the best in its history. The buying was phenomenal, especially at the opening, when a six-inch strip of tape recorded sales of 27,000 shares.

Metropolitan Securities.

That lovely financial invention which is known on the tape as "MSY" slumped a few more points yesterday. It somehow recalls the Indian who had died and who was awaiting burial. Under the Indian code this could not be done until some one had said something good about him. Those who knew thought for days, and finally some one said he smoked good tobacco, and they buried him. MSY has burned up good money, and if reports are true may burn up some more, for another assessment is talked of.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

According to Chicago dispatches, the Deering, McCormick, and Plano branches of the International Harvester Company have shut down until Oct. 1.

Watertown (N. Y.) dispatches state that the Raymondville Paper Company of that city has purchased from the Canton Lumber Company 20,500 acres of spruce and hemlock timber lands for $3,000,000.

Live stock receipts at Chicago last week were the smallest in over a month, aggregating 189,262 head, a decrease of 53,496 from the previous week and of 127,109 as compared with last year.

The Lake Superior production of copper during August was 18,200,000 pounds, which is stated to be the largest on record.

Receipts of all kinds of grain at Chicago during the past week amounted to 8,438,111 bushels, an increase of 957,940 bushels over the previous week and 1,530,135 bushels more than during the same week last year.

Spencer Trask & Co. have issued a circular which gives a selected list of bonds of street railway, electric lighting, and coal properties which yield 5 per cent. and over. A copy of the circular will be forwarded upon request.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—In the early trading to-day, local prices regained the weakness displayed in New York, but as the day advanced and the pressure to sell stocks was not relieved in Wall Street, the purely local issues declined, although so slowly as to indicate that local operators were loath to give up their position on the bull side of the market. Trading was very active and again was the business well distributed. In different parts of the list, however, there were developed signs of realizing and some losses were sustained. Cambria Steel ⅝, Electric Storage Battery 1½, Philadelphia Electric ¼, Philadelphia Company ½, Philadelphia Rapid Transit ⅝, United Gas Improvement ⅞, and Union Traction ⅜. Cold Storage Plant Burned.

MANASQUAN, N. J., Sept. 12.—Fire destroyed the main building of the cold storage plant of Bennett & Hight this morning. Thirty-five carloads of frozen fish were saved. A ton of meat was destroyed. The loss is about $45,000 and the insurance $30,000. The Manasquan fire companies were unable to do effective work, because of the ammonia fumes from the broken and melted pipes.

COTTON MARKET DECLINES.

October Option at One Time Touches the 10-Cent Mark.

The cotton market yesterday declined to near the 10 cent mark, and one option, October, actually touched that figure, but later recovered. Receipts continued big, and they offset the sentimental effect of the reports of deterioration which are now beginning to come in from the eastern belt. In spite of the expectation of an 11,000,000 bale crop, some of the best cotton experts profess to believe in 13-cent cotton a little later in the season, probably by December. There is, however, no reason to expect an upward turn in the market in the immediate future.

The range of prices yesterday was as follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Net Chgs.

The market closed steady, with transactions of 300,000 bales. W. P. Brown, the New Orleans cotton man, is still here, but Frank P. Hayne of the same city has returned to his home.

Health Department Enlisted in Imitation Fruit Juice Crusade.

Will Co-operate with New York Fruit Exchange in Fight Against Use of Spurious Articles.

Progress in the crusade against the use of citric acid or lemon juice and other bogus fruit juices, recently started by the New York Fruit Exchange, was reported at the meeting of the Board of Trustees of that organization yesterday. President Victor L. Corn announced that the Health Department had taken the matter up and that Dr. Darlington had instructed Supervising Inspector Bayard C. Fuller to devote his attention to this subject. The Health Department is empowered by law to confiscate and destroy all such preparations when found in the possession of dealers.

Mr. Zorn, therefore, recommended, and the Board of Trustees concurred in the recommendation, that the policy of independent prosecutions by the Fruit Exchange be dropped. The Exchange will continue to collect evidence against sellers of the imitation and adulterated fruit juices, and will turn it over as collected to the Health Department.

Collector Must Follow Proclaimed Rate of Exchange—Other Decisions.

In a decision written by General Appraiser McClelland, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustained protests by M. J. Brandenstein, Balfour, Guthrie & Co., and C. D. Bunker & Co. against the action of the Collector at San Francisco in assessing duties on importations of Singapore pineapples at that port. It was shown that the goods were purchased in Mexican currency, then reduced to pounds sterling, and thence to American gold for convenience. They were invoiced, however, in Mexican dollars, and the importers protest at the action of the Collector in liquidating the entries at a rate of exchange other than the proclaimed value of the Mexican dollar for that quarter. Mr. McClelland decided that the Collector was in error.

Gen. T. S. Sharretts is the author of a decision sustaining a protest by the Herman Keck Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati against the classification as split half pearls at 60 per cent. of certain Japanese pearls resembling split pearls. They are made by drilling a hole in the oyster shell and inserting a small plug of mother of pearl, the end of which, projecting into the cavity, irritates the oyster, and causes it to cover the point with successive layers of nacre in the same way that the true pearl is formed. This process takes two years, and at the end of that time the oyster is opened and the half pearl thus formed cut off. Gen. Sharretts holds that this is a natural process, and sustains the protest.

Protests overruled yesterday were by M. Henderson, Niagara Falls; the San Francisco Glove Import Company, San Francisco, and L. Johnson & Co., New York. Protests by the California Feed Company, Honolulu, and C. H. Ruegger, New York, were sustained, and one by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, partly sustained.

MAY APPEAL TO PLATT.

Counsel for Pottery Importers Threatens Congressional Investigation.

It was reported at the Appraisers Stores yesterday that W. Wickham Smith, counsel for George Borgfeldt & Co., who charges that the Board of United States General Appraisers gave him no opportunity to refute evidence presented by domestic potters to show that importations of Holland ware by Borgfeldt & Co. were invoiced at less than their market value, has announced his intention of appealing to Senators Platt and Depew to demand a Congressional investigation of the whole matter.

The evidence on which the board advanced Borgfeldt & Co.'s goods 10 per cent. was furnished by William Burgess, Secretary of the American Potters' Association, who, it is alleged, went to Holland and, representing himself as a merchant from Manila, bought small quantities of similar goods at a higher price than that paid by Borgfeldt & Co., who declare that he made no effort to get the best prices obtainable.

CONNORS STOOD ON PRINCIPAL.

That Car Tracks on the Bridge Were for Milk Wagons.

The first arrest made by the mounted patrol recently detailed by Commissioner McAdoo to regulate down-town traffic early yesterday morning was productive of much strong language and sour milk.

John Connors, who has driven a milk wagon along Park Row every morning for years, was the prisoner. John was never in trouble before. He does not know much about the law courts, because, as he says himself, "Ol'm a dacent, p'ace-abidin' citizen, an'nyway." He did not know, for instance, that it is against the law to drive on the car tracks when the rest of the street is free. So John, the milkman, has always tried to keep to the smooth metals, for, as he says himself, "Milk's a produce that's as tinder as the babbies it feeds, an av ye juggle wid it at all, ye'd bist churn it some more an' sell it f'r butther!"

His intention being a good one, he thought he did not hear aright when Equestrian Patrolman Donahue cantered alongside and yelled:

"Git off them rails—you!"

"The same to yerself!" replied Connors pleasantly, "and may yer shadow niver grow less!"

The patrolman grabbed the bridle of the milkman's horse. Connors asked somewhat vehemently for an explanation, and refused to leave the tracks until the law had been carefully recited by the mounted policeman. Then John opined that it was a foolish kind of a law, anyway, and voted to keep to the metals, whereupon the patrolman placed him under arrest.

Connors was fined $1 by Magistrate Mayo in the Tombs Court and promptly refused to pay it.

It was the principal of the bridge allowed Connors from the cage, and he didn't care how sour his milk turned; it couldn't get any sourer than he.

Last evening the milk wagon was still standing before the City Hall Police Station and John's dollar, his stubbornness, and the "principal" of the bridge were still intact.

Young man with good education desires position

AN ARMY OF 580,000 INVADES CITY SCHOOLS

No Official Figures Yet—May Be 90,000 on Part Time.

TROUBLE OVER AGE RECORDS

Parents Storm Board of Health for Certificates, but Supt. Maxwell Says the Rule Is Good.

If statistics and averages, official and semi-official, and computations based thereon do not err, the registration of pupils at the public schools of this city this school year, begun yesterday, will be about 580,000. On this basis, on the ratio of increase of former years, the attendance yesterday, taking the average attendance for the school year 1902-3 as a factor, was about 495,000. None of these figures, however, are officially indorsed.

City Superintendent Maxwell firmly declined yesterday to compute the registration of the three days last week and yesterday, and no officer of the Department of Education consented to hazard a guess at the number of part-time pupils. Dr. Maxwell said that he had no available factor for an optimistic or pessimistic statement on the subject. The number, it may be safely estimated, will not be less than 87,557, that on Sept. 14, 1903, and it is not expected to exceed 95,000. It is pointed out that by taking children from schools where the classes are congested and placing them in schools where the full sittings are not taken up, the number of pupils on part time will be materially reduced. Official figures on the registration this school year may be given out by Dr. Maxwell to-morrow. Those on attendance and part time will not be forthcoming for several days.

One official datum in regard to the registration is that of last year, as follows:

Borough.	Pupils That Could be Properly Accommodated June, 1903.	Number of Pupils on Register Sept. 30, 1903.	Deficiency on Sittings.
Manhattan	248,487	264,090	15,603
The Bronx	44,722	44,681	41
Brooklyn	169,650	181,916	12,266
Queens	30,654	31,626	972
Richmond	11,985	11,208	787
	505,508	533,521	28,013

Another is the May, 1904, registration of 529,854. In each case 50,000 should be added for increase of school population. The official figures of attendance of Sept. 14, 1903, are 475,123. The average attendance of 1902-03 was 439,028. The part-time record of May last was 75,396, against 87,557 Sept. 14, 1903. Another way of estimating with official figures is: Registration as of Sept. 14, 1903, 535,102, plus rational increase 40,408, makes the total on Sept. 12, 1904, amount to 575,510.

As to part time, no bureau in the Department of Education would vouch for any statement as complete. Superintendent of Buildings C. B. J. Snyder replied to inquiries as to full sittings by the following résumé of work in hand:

Total new sittings under contract:

Elementary schools	80,850
High schools	12,135

Estimated to be completed Sept. 12, 1904, 15,700

Sittings to be ready February, 1905, number 24,975, divided as follows: Manhattan, 9,350; the Bronx, 4,200; Brooklyn, 6,225; Queens, 4,500; Richmond, 60. Half of the total of 92,985 sittings have been delayed by strikes; the remainder depend on contracts which will expire between now and the Fall of 1905.

To meet criticism of and objection to the rule requiring evidence from parents as to the ages of children for whom admission to the schools is asked, Dr. Maxwell yesterday made this official statement:

"The number and character of complaints against the requirements of the Board of Education that parents should furnish birth certficates or baptismal certificates as evidence of the age of children seeking admission to public schools indicate that the purposes of this rule are not at all understood. In one case a parent who had neither evidence insinuated that in some vague way the acceptance of a baptismal certificate had some sort of religious connection. This is too absurd to need answer. The baptismal certificate is of interest to the school authorities solely as documentary evidence of the child's age, and its acceptance is merely for the convenience of parents who have this record but not a certificate of birth.

"If parents would consider the question without prejudice they would see in this regulation provisions that safeguard their own interests by preventing many seats in the schools which are required for older children from being filled by children below the school age. For many years before these requirements were adhered to strictly, it was a mater of common knowledge that many parents who wished to be relieved of the care of their young children during the day would send their children three or four years of age were six or seven years old. The effect of this was to put into classrooms children entirely too young to follow the course with benefit, and who were consequently a detriment to the other pupils of normal age. They were a nuisance to the teacher, inasmuch as they required a nurse rather than an instructor.

"In order that children who evidently are of school age but whose parents cannot supply documentary proof of the fact, may not be kept out of school, I have issued instructions to Principals to admit children who, in their judgment, are six years of age and to require presentation of proof at a later date. This will enable parents whose children were born elsewhere to secure records.

"In line with Dr. Maxwell's statement a circular was issued telling the Principals of elementary schools at what times parents could obtain certificates from the Board of Health, whose offices have been besieged already by thousands of parents applying for records to secure the admission of children to school. The circular directs the Principals "to register and admit children who in your judgment are six years of age, and if they have not presented a record of birth, et cetera, you may inform the parents that at a future time to be specified, application must be made to the Board of Health for a certificate."

An illustration of the difficulty found yesterday in complying with the age evidence rule was furnished at Dr. Conroy's school, in West One Hundred and Second Street. A mother desired to enter her child in that school, and learning of the conditions, said that she had come from the Klondike and that hers was the first white child born in that region, where such things as birth certificates were then not considered. She was told to send the child around to the school next Friday, when its case would be taken up.

The crowd of parents seeking certificates at the main office of the Health Board has been so large that the eight clerks employed in searching the birth records have been simply swamped. The clerks were handicapped by the fact that the records were neither indexed nor properly catalogued. Eight men are all that can be employed on the work at one time, and as each man can only issue about 100 certificates in the course of the day, the work is of necessity progressing slowly.

Health Commissioner Darlington says that he will ask for an appropriation of $75,000 to have the records indexed and thus prevent a repetition of the trouble.

Reports received last evening at the headquarters of the department were to the effect that the opening of the schools proceeded even more smoothly than last year, even in the crowded districts.

MOLINEUX TO "NAN" PATERSON

Sends Sympathetic Note to Girl in the Tombs on Her Birthday.

Roland B. Molineux sent a note of sympathy yesterday to "Nan" Patterson, the chorus girl, who is in the Tombs accused of the murder of Bookmaker "Caesar" Young. It was her twenty-second birthday, and Molineux, who had called on her at the Tombs before, stated that he had the utmost faith in her innocence and hoped she would enjoy at least twice as many more birthdays outside of prison walls.

The prisoner also received large bundles of presents from her father, J. Randolph Patterson, and her brother, Charles Henry Patterson, who called upon her.

Abraham Levy, her counsel, announced that District Attorney Jerome had promised to consider reducing her bail from $20,000 to $10,000.

AS TO THE COTTON LEAK.

J. S. Bache & Co. Offer to Help Prove Nothing Was Wrong.

Regarding the complaints of a leak in the recent Government cotton report, J. S. Bache & Co. sent a telegram to Washington yesterday. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the other day asked the Savannah Cotton Exchange for the name of "the prominent wire house" that bulletined the report's crop figures thirty minutes ahead of their official release. The Savannah Exchange's President said that a Savannah firm had posted a bulletin signed "Bache" and reading: "Government looks like 84.1." Those were the official figures.

Bache & Co.'s telegram to Secretary Wilson was as follows:

The morning papers published a telegram from the Savannah Cotton Exchange to you stating that they had written you that we had sent out the Government report at 12.45 on the day it was made public. We did send out a telegram that day giving our views of what the Government figures would be. As you probably know we get out an estimate every month on the condition of the cotton crop. We issued a printed circular on Aug. 30, three days before the Government report came out, estimating that if your returns on deterioration corresponded with ours your figures on condition would be 84.1. All New York papers were furnished with a copy of your circular on Aug. 30, and many of them used same. We stand ready to help you in any way to prove to the Savannah Cotton Exchange that there was no leak. Can we serve you?

Secretary Wilson acknowledged the receipt by wire. As a matter of fact Bache & Co. three days before the Government report was issued sent out the following with a private crop estimate they had compiled:

We submit herewith advanced copy of our Septembr report. As you will observe, it shows a deterioration of 7.5 per cent. as compared with last month. Should the Government report on next Friday show the same falling off it will make a condition of 84.1 per cent.

410-POUND PATIENT LEAVES.

Took Two Coats for Bellevue Hospital's Heaviest Man.

When Michael Glynn left Bellevue Hospital yesterday he left behind some lame backs and aching muscles to be remembered by. Glynn is only twenty-four years old, and 5 feet 9 inches in height, but he weighs 410 pounds, and is the heaviest patient remembered by even the oldest in the hospital.

Glynn, who is a watchman, living in East Seventy-sixth Street, fell from a car on Sept. 4 and hurt his knee. First they took him to the Presbyterian Hospital, and the next day a creaking, groaning ambulance took him to Bellevue. After a day or so it became necessary to transfer him out of the surgical ward to another seventy-five yards away. Four of the strongest men about the institution were panting with exhaustion when they landed him by the side of the heaviest bed in the new ward on a stretcher reinforced with heavy bars. When they lifted him in, however, the bed springs collapsed, and Glynn fell through to the floor, and the bed, too, was then braced with iron.

Glynn was coatless when hurt, and yesterday, when it was decided to transfer him to Blackwell's Island the clothing room was ransacked in vain for one that he could wear. Two coats were then ripped apart and fashioned into a garment which he put on to meet the inflexible rule that every patient leaving Bellevue must have a complete suit of clothing.

Glynn told the doctors that he was only ordinarily stout up to his twentieth year.

TRUST COMPANY DEPARTURE.

Brooklyn Institution Will Make Specialty of Small Loans.

A new trust company, which will do business on lines somewhat different from the large financial institutions already in the field, is being organized by ex-Borough President J. Edward Swanstrom and other prominent Brooklynites. It will probably be named the Home Trust Company of New York, and, in general, will operate like the Bank of France, which makes a specialty of small loans of 100f. and upward to merchants. The new company aims to cater chiefly to the large Scandanavian business in this city, that class of the population being estimated at about 125,000. It is also planned by the promoters of the company to secure the businesss of the Swedish and Norwegian Consuls.

Among the men who are said to be interested in the enterprise are Henry Batterman, Niels Poulson, Ludwig Nissen, A. E. Johnson of the Scandinavian Steamship Company, George W. Moon, President of the Manufacturers' Association; James Weir, Jr.; ex-City Works Commissioner William C. Redfield, ex-Park Commissioner Richard Young, Herbert F. Gunnison, Dick S. Ramsey, and Audley Clarke. Joseph C. Hendrix, ex-President of the National Bank of Commerce, and ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieren have also been asked to identify themselves with the new company, which, it is said, will be capitalized at not less than $1,000,000.

NO DOWN-TOWN COURT HOUSE.

Commission Fails to Select a Site South of Franklin Street.

The announcement was made yesterday that the members of the commission appointed to select a site for the new Civil Court House had decided to abandon all of their previous selections and go back to the State Legislature for power to select a new site as far up as Twenty-third Street. In accordance with the legislative act under which the commission was appointed they were limited to the selection of a site below Franklin Street.

The majority of the members of the commission favored the building of the new Court House in the vicinity of Mulberry Bend Park. One of the members of the commission, however, was in favor of having the city purchase the old Stewart Building site at Broadway and Chambers Street. Many lawyers claimed that the Mulberry Bend site was undesirable, while the Stewart Building site would be too costly. In addition to this it was argued that a court house on Broadway would mean that the voices of Judges, lawyers, and witnesses would be interrupted by the noise of Broadway traffic.

Many persons having business in the courts and many of the Justices are in favor of building the new court house in the vicinity of Union Square.

SAMMY'S THIRD BURGLARY.

He's Only Eight Years Old—May Have to Suffer Now.

Arrested for the third time for burglary, eight-year-old Samuel Fatman of 93 Goerck Street, who is hardly three feet tall and so thin that he hardly casts a shadow, was remanded, with two companions, in the Children's Court yesterday. He is known as "Sammy the Burglar" in the block where he lives, and, according to Detective Sergt. Leonard of the Delancey Street Station, he confessed that last Thursday night, with his fifteen year old brother Isadore and Benjamin Schramm, fourteen years old, he broke into the premises 95 Goerck Street, next door, and stole enameled ware, spoons, cutlery, and crockery worth $100. Part of this they sold to a junk dealer in Lewis Street.

Sammy was forgiven for his first burglary because he was so little; for the second he was convicted, but released under a suspended sentence, which may now descend upon his young shoulders.

BRITISH SAILOR DECORATED.

Royal Humane Society Medal for Menantic's Second Officer.

Acting British Consul General Clive-Bayley yesterday presented a bronze medal to Second Officer Adrian M. Kelley of the British tramp steamship Menantic, now in this port. The medal is of the Royal Humane Society of Great Britain, of which the Prince of Wales is Chairman, and is given for bravery displayed by the officer in London a few weeks ago.

Second Officer Kelley jumped into the Thames in a vain effort to save Chief Engineer Scurr of the Menantic, who had fallen off the stringpiece of the pier alongside which the steamship was lying.

JEROME AGAIN TALKING ABOUT POLICE "SYSTEM"

Many Detectives He Wouldn't Let Feed a Mangy Dog.

PINOCHLE AFTER HOURS

District Attorney Thinks There's Too Much of It—Blames the System Most.

District Attorney Jerome had a few things to say yesterday on the activities of the police in detecting crime in general. He declared that the main fault was with the system, and admitted that in his opinion it would always be that way.

"My views on the subject of police protection," said the District Attorney, "are well known, because I have expressed them so frequently. Every one who knows anything of the city knows that after midnight it is a rare thing indeed to see a policeman, not in one or two blocks, but in many.

"A friend of mine, a Commissioner, recently made a trip in an automobile in certain parts of the city to see how many policemen he could find doing duty after midnight. He did not see one. The whole trouble is that there is too much pinochle among the members of the force after hours. It will always be that way on account of the organization. No Commissioner serving two, or four years, can know the department, because he is necessarily hampered by too much routine.

"Any policeman paid $1,400 a year, with the privilege of retiring on a pension of half pay when passed by a board of physicians, has a good job, and he should be taught to do his duty to the public and to his position.

"There are lots of detectives whom I would not let take care of or feed a mangy dog. Anything like ability among detectives is a rare thing. I mean by that that if you get an honest policeman he has usually no ability as a detective, and if you get police and detective ability in one man, he is a wonder in the department, because with this ability he could do something else where he would be much more successful."

Mr. Jerome's attention was called to the large number of mysterious deaths reported in the newspapers about which the police are alleged to have done little or nothing, and was reminded that there had been ten such deaths within a week recently.

"I don't know that they are anything but deaths," the District Attorney rejoined. "It's up to the police to find out. It is not our duty to look up evidence. In some instances, such as a big disaster, public clamor for an arrest is heard. It ought not to be hard for the police to discover the people who are directly responsible. In a recent case a police defendant has not been arrested."

Mr. Jerome would not specify the case to which he referred.

"There are policemen," he continued, "who could not catch a fire engine rushing through the streets with whistle blowing and gongs ringing, because they don't want to.

"That's it; they don't want to. They are demoralized."

McADOO INSPECTS THE LID.

Visits Chinatown—Doesn't See Much, for They Know Him.

Those policemen who have gone along serenely thinking that Police Commissioner McAdoo is taking it for granted that "the lid" is down tight on New York wicked-ness merely because the police say so may be disappointed with a bump.

Following Mr. McAdoo's unheralded raids into the Tenderloin and to Brooklyn a few days ago, he visited the "Chinatown" and the Bowery district early yesterday morning. He did not first go to the police stations for his information, but looked things over in a quiet way, aided by no guide. He soon found out, it is said, that his face was known, and he did not succeed in getting into several places where he asked admission.

One of those who saw Mr. McAdoo on his trip said yesterday, however, that the Commissioner could hardly have failed to get ample evidence that the district was fairly "wide open" and that the dives and resorts that were reported as closed were actually doing all the business that they could ask for.

BEE MADE DOG "MAD."

Sting Not Hydrophobia Made Animal Scare School Children.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Sept. 12.—A small fox terrier, after giving a sudden yelp and jumping from a woman's grasp, ran yelling down the street to-day, dashing through a crowd of school children, who ran in all directions. He was followed by a crowd that shouted "mad dog."

The dog was finally cornered and the village constable was preparing to kill the animal with his revolver, when its owner came running up, out of breath, and managed to gasp that the dog was not mad. The woman explained that the dog had been stung by a bee.

DOUBT "DYNAMITER'S" STORY.

Little Credence in Confession of Cripple Creek Outrage.

LA JUNTA, Col., Sept. 12.—Robert Romaine, the prisoner at Topeka, Kan., who has confessed to complicity in the explosion at the Independence station, Cripple Creek, on June 6, was, it has been discovered, in La Junta on that day. He worked in the Santa Fé shops at La Junta for about two months, it is said, going under the name of I. O. White.

But little credence is now placed in his confession, in which he implicated several mining union officials.

BANKERS COMING TO TOWN.

Nearly 4,000 Delegates and Friends Expected at the Week's Sessions.

During the next four days this city is to entertain the largest assemblage of American financiers ever gathered together. They represent all the States and Territories of the Union, and the purpose of their visit is to attend the American Bankers' Association Convention, the Trust Company section of which will convene to-day, while the main body will meet to-morrow. The bankers and their friends, some of whom have arrived already and are registered at different hotels, will number nearly 4,000.

The first to arrive included several hundreds, and many of the great financial institutions of Wall Street were visited by them yesterday. There will be numerous entertainments for the visitors, and one bank has set aside $10,000 for looking after its guests. At the National City Bank a daily free luncheon will be served to the members of the association. Rooms at the best hotels have been engaged months ahead, and as fast as the delegates arrive they are expected to register at the association's temporary office in the Waldorf-Astoria. The meetings will be held in the grand ballroom of the hotel.

To-day's meeting of the Trust Company section will be opened by the Chairman, Breckinridge Jones of St. Louis, and George W. Young of the New York State Trust Companies' Association will make a speech of welcome. This will be followed by addresses by F. H. Fries of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Jordan J. Rollins of this city, and Edward T. Perrine, General Manager of the Audit Company of New York. After the morning session there will be a luncheon given by a number of local delegates. In the afternoon the Savings Bank section will meet in the myrtle room.

The meeting here is not to be altogether for business. Besides the private dinners galore, arrangements have been made for a reception to the delegates and their friends to-morrow evening, and for theatre parties and trips to Luna Park Thursday and Friday nights. The visitors are also invited to inspect the Metropolitan Museum of Art and American Museum of Natural History.

But Platt Will Put the "Odell Tag" on the Nomination.

HINTS OF CUTTING TICKET

Bomb Was Thrown When Odell Called Conference and Platt Refused to Attend.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Sept. 13.—Gov. Odell's plan for a harmony convention was completely upset to-day when Senator Platt refused to go into conference on the nomination for Governor. Both the Governor and the Senator have been declaring for several days that it was their desire that a candidate for Governor should be agreed upon at a conference of leaders, and that one name should be presented to the convention for that place. Yesterday Gov. Odell announced that the conference of leaders would be held to-day at the convenience of Senator Platt.

This afternoon, after Lieut. Gov. Higgins had arrived on the scene and had had interviews with both the Senator and the Governor, the latter walked over to Senator Platt's cottage and announced:

"Senator, I have called that conference for you."

"Have you?" responded the Senator. "Well, I hope you will have a pleasant time."

"You are coming, are you not?" inquired the Governor, suspecting from the Senator's reply that something was wrong.

"Not by a damned sight," replied the Senator with considerable asperity.

The Governor was dumfounded. He inquired what had caused the change in the Senator's purpose. Mr. Platt said he thought Woodruff was the man who should be nominated, and as he now knew that the Governor was for Higgins he would appeal to the convention.

Odell Accepts the Issue.

The Governor left the cottage mad clear through. He saw that it was the purpose of Senator Platt either to have him yield to his judgment or take the responsibility, which he has been desirous of avoiding, if possible, of naming a candidate without Mr. Platt's approval.

The Governor, however, did not hesitate a minute about his course. He promptly announced that he would pick up the gage of battle which the Senator had thrown down to him.

He at once sent for the leaders on whose support he thought he could rely, in order to get an absolutely correct estimate of the strength he would be able to command in the convention in support of Higgins as against Woodruff. The only notable absentee from the Governor's round-up was ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, but it developed later in the evening that his absence had no significance. Mr. Black, George W. Aldridge, and Louis F. Payn, the only leaders of prominence who are understood to have been weak on the nomination of Higgins, announced to-night that they would line up with the Governor behind Higgins in the convention.

As the leaders of the various counties came to his room Gov. Odell had his secretaries prepare a roll-call of the counties showing the respective strength of Higgins and Woodruff. The result showed 794 votes for Higgins and 280 for Woodruff.

End of the Hendricks Boom.

Gov. Odell then made this announcement:

"The sentiment of the convention seems to be in favor of the nomination of Lieut. Gov. Higgins for Governor, and I think he will be nominated. I believe the majority of the delegates are for him.

"The name of Superintendent Hendricks will not be presented to the convention."

Mr. Woodruff when informed that a poll of the delegations had been issued which showed over 700 delegates for Higgins, said that he would not make a poll, and had no time to make one. "I am going into the convention," he said, "and I expect to be nominated."

Michael J. Dady, who has been one of the most earnest supporters of Woodruff, said:

"I think the Governor probably has that many delegates for Higgins. It has made no change in our plans. Mr. Woodruff's name will go before the convention."

The Woodruff men affected a confidence which their manner belied. They did not seem at all happy over the outlook. Privately they admitted that there was very little chance of nominating their man, but they seemed to take some consolation out of the fact that even though they went down to defeat the man nominated would have to bear the "Odell tag."

"There is a whole lot of difference," remarked one of the chief Brooklyn leaders, "between nominating a man and electing him. Of course the organization will be for whoever is nominated, but there are a great many voters whom the organization cannot control."

Everywhere there was speculation about the motive which Senator Platt had in deciding upon the course which he has seen fit to take. Some thought that the Senator was vindictive enough to wish to label the

CIRCUS ACT STOPS RUNAWAY.

Policeman Jumps from His Bicycle to Horse's Back.

After racing at a lively rate for four blocks on Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon a runaway horse attached to an express wagon was stopped by Bicycle Policeman Anthony Debes of the West Thirtieth Street Station, who jumped from his wheel, caught the bridle, and brought the animal to a stop. Debes was loudly cheered by the people who saw his act.

Debes was at the corner of Eighteenth Street and Fifth Avenue, fixing the pedal of his machine. Looking up the avenue, he saw the runaway, mounted, and rode in the middle of the avenue, just in front of the horse. The driver of the wagon, losing the reins, jumped to the asphalt and was slightly injured. The horse continued in his run, and Debes rode between the animal and the sidewalk.

In front of the home of Street Cleaning Commissioner John McGaw Woodbury there was a light runabout with a liveried groom on the box. The policeman managed to make the runaway swerve from the team. At Seventeenth Street the animal started for the sidewalk, and the pedestrians ran into hallways and on stoops.

When the runaway reached Sixteenth Street Debes reached the head of the animal. He rode close to the horse's head, and, steering his machine with one hand, grabbed the bridle of the runaway. Going in this manner for about half a block, Debes managed to throw his left arm over the animal's neck. Then, with a good grip on the bridle, he jumped and landed on the horse's back. He grabbed the reins and turned the animal into a pole at the corner.

That was the end of the runaway, and Debes, who had cut his thumb badly in making his jump, coolly remounted his wheel and rode to the New York Hospital to have the wound dressed.

RICH FIND OF DERELICT.

Steamship Picks Up Lumber-Laden Schooner Theta—Crew Missing.

The steamship Pathfinder, from Norfolk, arrived in port yesterday with the abandoned schooner Theta in tow. A prize crew of seven men from the steamship manned the derelict outside of Sandy Hook and brought their prize loaded with pine lumber into the harbor.

The steamship picked the schooner up at sea on Sunday near the Five Fathom Bank Lightship. The schooner was drifting along with all sails set and with not a person aboard. All signs pointed to her having been hastily abandoned after a collision with an unknown vessel. Her starboard quarter was stove in, but no other damage could be found about her. Some of her seams had started, and her hold was almost filled, but she was kept afloat by her cargo.

No report of any collision has been received recently from the quarter in which the vessel was picked up, and what has become of the crew is a mystery, since no ship has yet reported them. When the derelict arrived inside Sandy Hook Capt. Parse of the Pathfinder called for tugs and had the ship towed up the bay, and she now rests on the Jersey flats. She is a three-masted schooner of 420 tons. She left Brunswick, Ga., on Sept. 1 for Dorchester, N. B.

The officers and sailors on the Pathfinder will make a good thing out of the salvage on the vessel. She can be repaired at a very small cost, and, being only three years old, will be worth alone a good sum. Her cargo also will bring several thousand dollars. Having been abandoned, all of the money realized on her will go to the crew of the steamship.

MRS. PHIPPS GETS $500,000.

Tells of Agreement with Her Husband—Divorce Case to Go On.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Laurence C. Phipps to-day told of the agreement reached yesterday with her husband.

"It is not true that I surrender any stocks and bonds," she said. "They remain mine, and I receive about $500,000 for the transfer to Mr. Phipps of the Denver and Pittsburg residences. Mr. Phipps has visited us and brought the children, dining with us and talking over all the plans in a friendly manner. At first he offered me the children for four weeks in the year. You know that was impossible to consider. I want them with their father and older brother and sister part of the time.

"Mr. Phipps and I could never live together again. There must be a separation. He has charged me with desertion. This is the only charge on which I am to make answer. My lawyers will answer for me, and I will deny the charge. It is not true."

DONNED HER SON'S CLOTHES.

Mother Exchanged Attire with Prisoner in Cell and He Escaped.

BRISTOL, Va., Sept. 13.—Wiley Gibson, a youth being held in the Lee County Jail at Jonesville, Va., to await conveyance to the penitentiary at Richmond to serve a five years' sentence for robbery, made good his escape by departing from the prison clad in the dress and bonnet of his old mother, who had been left alone with him that she might say good-bye.

Gibson's escape was discovered when a fellow-prisoner, marking the departure of the supposed woman, went to the robber's cell to comfort him, and there found the mother dressed in the clothes her son had discarded.

NEW ROCHELLE DOCTOR HURT.

F. W. Dalrymple Thrown from Buggy in Runaway—Collarbone Broken.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Dr. F. W. Dalrymple, a prominent New Rochelle physician and yachtsman, was thrown from his buggy this afternoon in a runaway accident and had his collarbone broken and head badly bruised.

The accident occurred at Wildcliff-on-the-Sound, where Dr. Dalrymple's horse shied at a piece of paper and ran into a wagon. The physician and his colored coachman were thrown out and dragged several hundred feet. The coachman was but slightly hurt. Dr. Dalrymple was carried into the home of W. L. S. Jackson, Fleet Captain of the New Rochelle Yacht Club. He was taken afterward to a sanitarium at Stamford, Conn., suffering from nervous shock.

M'ADOO AROUSED BY POLICE CONDITIONS

To Send "Murphy" Detectives Back on Patrol.

CREATES AN ITALIAN FORCE

With This He Hopes to Wipe Out "Black Hand" Outrages—Inspectors Report To-day.

Police Commissioner McAdoo spoke out plainly yesterday about conditions in the Police Department, and, in the course of an extended interview on his plans for the rehabilitation of the force in the public esteem, announced two important moves, one in the shape of a reform of existing conditions, and the other a new departure.

The reform is to consist in relegating the "Murphy" Detective Sergeants, who have long been worse than an incumbrance to the detective force, to the work of outside Roundsmen in the precincts. These men, eleventh-hour appointments by the late Michael C. Murphy, and numbering upward of seventy-five, since recent decisions of the courts have lately been doing desk duty in part, and in part working as "detectives." In their new job of pounding the pavements they will still draw the $2,000 a year which they have enjoyed since their appointment.

The departure consists in the organization of an Italian branch of the police service to deal with the peculiar problems constantly arising in the Italian districts. This will be instituted at once, and Commissioner McAdoo has high hopes for its success.

To-day all the district Inspectors will report to the Commissioner in detail on the conditions in their commands. He declined yesterday to discuss Mr. Jerome's latest comments on police work. Of the plan to utilize the "Murphy" Sergeants he said:

"This section of the detective force was pitchforked into the department. Its weakness is also well known. The Detective Bureau, with the detectives I refer to, has been carrying a big load of lead. Some of the men that were created without adequate demand could not even catch their breath. There are 289 of them all told, and of this number only a small proportion have real detective ability.

FULL DETERMINED APPOINTMENTS.

"Not a few of the present number were appointed for purely personal and other reasons. Many of them did not even come in under the civil service as patrolmen, and no civil service examination ever can practically determine whether or not a man will make a good detective.

"It is an outrage on the Police Department and the city that the courts, instead of diminishing this force, feel compelled continually to increase it for various technical reasons. I have already had handed over to me twelve men, and several actions are now pending in the courts to increase this number. These men receive a salary of $2,000 a year, and have all the rights of a Police Sergeant who has worked himself up from the ranks. Worse than that, what might be called the Sergeants of the regular line will not receive these men as belonging to their grade and entitled to hearty co-operation.

"There are some very excellent detectives attached to this department—honest, intelligent, and capable men. In order to utilize a portion of this large force with some advantage to the department I have determined to make patrol sergeants of a number of them, putting them in a uniform and giving them outside roundsmen's work in precincts. A radical remedy would have to come from the Legislature."

The Commissioner made the following statement about his plan for an Italian branch of the police service:

"I have made arrangements to utilize the Italians on the police force in the congested Italian districts. We have also established a small staff of Italians for general work under the direction of Detective Sergeant Petrosino. The number of Italians on the force is not large, and I would be glad to see more of these people take the civil service examination for appointment as patrolmen, so that their numbers on the police force would be somewhat proportionate to the large Italian population.

WANTS ITALIANS TO CO-OPERATE.

"The trouble now is that an Italian criminal at once seeks refuge behind racial and national sympathy, and many of his countrymen, otherwise honest, believe it a sort of patriotic duty to shield him from the officers of the law. The police work with the Italians, even at its best, will not get the results desired, unless it is followed up by a moral movement on the part of the better class of Italians and the Italian newspapers.

"The honest Italian must be made to understand that the police are not his enemies, but his friends, and that his first duty as a good citizen is to help us in enforcing the law, especially against his own countrymen. Decent, honest and hard working Italians ought to ostracize those men of their nationality who go around habitually carrying pistols and knives. No honest Italian needs a knife or pistol in New York. The police duty at present is to unrelentingly pursue this criminal element. I invite any Italian who is threatened to come to this headquarters or the nearest police station, and we will give him every possible protection. The worst about it now is that they conceal these threats and yield to the blackmail. I hope for good results from this police Italian organization, which I am this day putting in force. We hope to be able to list the criminal Italians the same as we do with suspected places."

NO POLITICS IN DEPARTMENT.

Mr. McAdoo denied absolutely the charge that politics was a factor in present police conditions.

"If there are any screws loose in the machine," he added, "I'd tighten them up if they have not been tightened when I come to them, and I'm going to get all the good out of it it's possible to get."

Mr. McAdoo denied that he was in Chinatown "inspecting the lid" recently. "I was," he remarked, smiling broadly, "there some time ago and met 'Chuck' Connors, whom I recognized from his pictures in the newspapers. I told him so, and 'Chuck' replied promptly:

"'Well, they bumped you up a few all right, all right, didn't they?'"

East side conditions, the Commissioner asserted, were not what some published account made them. The statement of Louis Gordon of 150 Grand Street and reports from Inspector Schmittberger and the Captains of the precincts in his district are correct.

Every district Inspector will furnish Commissioner McAdoo a report to-day on the conditions in his command, based on personal observation and reports from the Captains. Drastic action is expected when the head of the department shall have fully considered the reports, which he will supplement by personal observation and information from sources that are free from suspicion of collusion with the rank and file of the department.

JEROME PLAYS LONE HAND.

And Never Had "Cold Feet," So He Reiterates Police Strictures.

District Attorney Jerome yesterday amplified his interview of Monday, in which he indulged in strictures on the conduct of the Police Department. He was told that Police Commissioner McAdoo had taken exception to some of his statements.

"Isn't what I said true?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"If it isn't true, then I am very sorry and I want to apologize, but I don't think that I shall have to apologize. Policemen getting $1,400 a year ought to be where they belong, and it's a well-known fact that you can't find them when you want them. Patrolmen on the sidewalk should be in evidence."

Mr. Jerome was reminded of the criticism that the present time was inopportune for him to make such criticism.

"What's the time got to do with it?" he replied. "If it's true, it's time to say it, and now is the time to put on the remedy. I'm not looking for any gratuities from anybody. I've always played a lone hand, and I've always played the limit when I had the money, without getting cold feet. That's where I stand to-day.

"I will not tell the name of the Commissioner whom I mentioned as the man who made an automobile trip to see how policemen patrol and didn't see them. It makes no difference whether it was the highest Commissioner in this city or whether it was a street car driver or a minister of the Gospel, or whether it was a newsboy who told me. The question is, 'Is it true?' and not 'Who told me?'"

MRS. CLARKE TO WED AGAIN.

Got Divorce Two Weeks Ago from Charles S. Clarke.

A dispatch from Atlanta yesterday said that Mrs. Alline Stocking Clarke will be wedded to Charles Donnelly, Jr., son of a Pittsburg millionaire.

Mrs. Clarke got a divorce from her husband, Charles S. Clarke, about two weeks ago, after having remained with him through all his numerous financial reverses. When Clarke married her in Atlanta his mother's wealth was estimated at $700,000. This she lost in litigation, but the young Mrs. Clarke offered no complaint because of her husband's change of fortune. She tried to regard the matter lightly and did all she could to cheer him up in his difficulty.

"Never mind, 'Chick,'" she said, "we will rent two or three rooms, and I can cook on an oil stove."

This they did in Allegheny, while the couple occupied two rooms. Mrs. Clarke assisted her husband in every way she could. When the big steel corporations combined the Clarke mills in Pittsburg, which practically had been out of business, started up and were bought in by the trust. The plant sold for $600,000, and Clarke's share of this was about $400,000.

With this money he purchased a newspaper plant and failed. Then he invested in another newspaper and was unsuccessful. Later on he made other business ventures, and these, like the others, proved failures.

After receiving his share from the sale of the Clarke mills, he abandoned the oil-stove and shortly afterward his wife abandoned him.

MAINE PLURALITY, 27,000.

Democrats, Though, Gain 24 Per Cent. to Republicans' 5—President's Message.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 13.—Returns from the towns in the backwoods to-day and a careful revision of last night's figures place the Republican plurality in yesterday's State election at about 27,000.

Returns from 450 cities, towns, and plantations out of 522 give William T. Cobb, Republican, 75,954; Cyrus W. Davis, Democrat, 50,017. The same places in 1900 gave Hill, Republican, 72,541; Lord, Democrat, 39,714. The Republican gain over 1900 is now estimated at 5 per cent. and the Democratic gain at 24 per cent. Additional returns in the Congressional districts have not altered the result, all four Congressmen being returned by pluralities ranging from 5,000 to 7,000.

Next year's Senate will probably stand 27 Republicans and 4 Democrats, as against 29 Republicans and 1 Democrat in the last Legislature. It is estimated that the House will be 121 Republicans and 30 Democrats. The last House stood 131 Republicans and 20 Democrats. The heaviest Democratic gains were in Cumberland County. The noticeable feature was the falling off in the Republican plurality in Portland from 2,602 four years ago to 1,389 yesterday. This Republican loss in Portland, together with the election of a Democratic Sheriff and a Democratic Senator was held by the Democrats to be a virtual sweep of Cumberland County.

Chairman Simpson of the Republican State Committee telegraphed President Roosevelt that the party had carried the State by more than 25,000.

The President replied as follows:

"I am delighted with the result, and congratulate you and those who have worked with you most heartily."

GOODWIN'S GAME AT SEA.

Kronprinz Wilhelm Passengers Say the Actor Lost $2,500.

Nat C. Goodwin, the actor, is said to have engaged in a game of cutting cards on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm of the North eGrman Lloyd Line during the voyage which ended yesterday at this port with the result that he swelled the purses of two other men aboard, one of whom is recognized as a professional gambler, to the amount of $2,500. Mr. Goodwin would say nothing of his losses, but other passengers, who said that they had watched the card-cutting game, reported his loss.

According to these folks, the actor thought he would stand no chance in a poker game, knowing that there were several professional players aboard. He would not sit in the game, and when the gamblers noticed this they proposed other means of getting money.

Finally the card-cutting game was suggested at $25 a cut. Goodwin and the other two sat in. At first, it is said, the actor lost without showing any feeling. Finally, however, when he was out a considerable amount he became angry and demanded that the amount be raised. The gamblers consented to the raise, and at length $100 was the wager on each cut.

Goodwin sat at the game all of one day. When he had lost all the ready money he had he rose from his seat, remarked "I'm through," and, lighting a cigar, walked out on deck with not a word.

J. D. Rockefeller Enables It to Erect a Building in Cleveland.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 13.—At a meeting of the Building Committee of the Young Women's Christian Association to-day the announcement was made that John D. Rockefeller had doubled his gift of $50,000 to the association. This means that the Young Women's Christian Association will be able to erect its building.

When Mr. Rockefeller first offered to help the Young Women's Christian Association he promised $50,000 if the association would raise $200,000. The time limit expired with the association still $50,220 short of the necessary amount, and an extension of time to Nov. 1 was asked for and obtained. Now comes the news that he has decided to give most of the sum still needed.

TO DISMANTLE THE LENA AT 'FRISCO

Russian Ship's Crew Also May Stay There Till End of War.

U. S. WARSHIPS ON GUARD

Authorities in St. Petersburg Profess Surprise at the Transport's Presence on the Pacific Coast.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—It was stated to-night by a high official in the Administration that the Lena would be dismantled and lie at San Francisco until after the close of the war between Japan and Russia.

The solution of the problem that was suddenly thrust on this Government by the appearance of the Lena at San Francisco is now in the hands of the State Department. The confusion as to the authority of the State, Navy, Treasury, and Commerce and Labor Departments was to-day straightened out.

The proclamation of the President issued Feb. 11 was promulgated to collectors and other officials by Secretary Cortelyou as a matter coming directly under the navigation laws, and therefore the Collector of San Francisco should have reported to the Department of Commerce. The Treasury and Commerce Departments will hereafter act in an auxiliary capacity in the matter, the State Department taking charge of the incident, and the navy being looked to to enforce any decision that may not be obeyed by the Captain of the Lena.

Acting Secretary of State Adee and Secretary Morton had a long conference this afternoon, but no final decision in the case was reached. Further information as to the condition of the vessel will be sought before any notification is given to the Captain of the Lena. It is the opinion of Secretary Morton and his advisers that the Russians will elect to stay in San Francisco rather than try to put their ship in a seaworthy condition and undertake to prey on commerce.

Doubt as to Her Errand.

There is a good deal of doubt as to just what the errand of the Lena this way may have been. There is a disposition to think, as one navy official expressed it, that at first she started to prey on merchantmen, and later, being unfit for sea, she began to pray for a harbor.

A telegram from Admiral Goodrich, at San Francisco, shows that on his own initiative he had caused one of his expert officers to make a premilinary examination of the Lena, and that temporary repairs would occupy six weeks' time, and new boilers would involve eight months' delay.

The Russian Ambassador has not been heard from at the State Department. Minister Takahira had a long talk with Mr. Adee to-day, and stated the position of his Government very much as it was manifested in the Shanghai case. Japan expects us to send the Lena to sea within a brief time or compel her to dismantle.

The question as to what will be done with the crew of the Lena has been considered without any conclusion being reached. It is not unlikely that the men will be kept at San Francisco with the vessel until the end of the war. Japan would object to their being allowed to go home to be sent again to fight the Japanese Navy. An alternative will be allowed to the Captain of the Lena. He may coal his ship and take a reasonable time, probably two months, to repair his boilers, and then depart, no restrictions being placed on what he may do after he is outside the three-mile limit; or he may dismantle.

A prominent business man from the Pacific Coast called on Secretary Morton to-day to urge that the Lena be allowed to dismantle and lie at San Francisco until after the war, this being a solution of the matter that would give instant relief to the business interests of the Pacific Coast, now somewhat disturbed by the thought of molestation by the Lena.

Secretary Morton's visitor said he had received many dispatches from business men in San Francisco and Seattle, and it was the general suspicion that the Lena was sent this way to draw off one or more Japanese cruisers from Vladivostok and Port Arthur, so as to weaken the blockade at those points.

Repairs Would Occupy Some Time.

By The Associated Press.

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 13.—All official reports relating to the arrival of the auxiliary cruiser at San Francisco have been transmitted to President Roosevelt. The reports indicate that the ship is not seaworthy. Her boilers are in such condition as to render it dangerous for her to proceed further without repairing.

The Chief Engineer of the American Pacific Squadron and the Chief Inspector at San Francisco of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service have been ordered to make a thorough examination of the Lena and submit a written report to the authorities. The Lena is still guarded by several vessels of the United States Navy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 13.—The authorities here profess ignorance of the circumstances surrounding the case of the Russian transport Lena, now at San Francisco. A high officer of the Admiralty says that her appearance at San Francisco was a surprise, as Vice Admiral Skrydloff had not notified them that the Lena was going to San Francisco from Vladivostok, and they have no information of the purpose of her cruise. The Foreign Office also states that it is without advices on the subject.

In unofficial quarters there are two versions of the Lena's mission. According to the one which is most generally accepted the Lena was sent out to stop contraband of war bound for Japan, possibly, as in the case of the Russian Volunteer Fleet steamers Petersburg and Smolensk, under the direct orders of Grand Duke Alexander Mikhailovich, (head of the Department of Mercantile Marine, and brother-in-law of Emperor Nicholas,) and was driven by stress of weather, exhaustion of her coal supply, or fear of returning to Vladivostok after the defeat of the Vladivostok squadron by the Japanese squadron commanded by Vice Admiral Kamimura to seek shelter at San Francisco.

The other version of the Lena's mission is that she is to examine into the possibilities of the Cape Horn route for the Baltic Squadron.

BALTIC FLEET HELD BACK.

Is to Remain at Reval Pending Further Orders.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—The Tageblatt's St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that the departure of the Baltic squadron has at the last moment been deferred for several days, apparently to await news from the Far East. The fleet will remain for the present at Reval.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 13.—A report published in Paris to-day that Rear Admiral Prince Ouktomsky had been tried by court-martial, sentenced to death, and shot for disobeying the order not to return to Port Arthur after the sortie of the Russian squadron Aug. 10, is untrue. He has not been tried by court-martial, but will be recalled.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Che-Foo reports that 300,000 Chinese coolies are engaged upon Japanese entrenchments between Dalny and Port Arthur.

GIRL KILLED PLAYING TAG.

Ran in Front of Truck in Tenth Avenue—Driver Arrested.

Seven-year-old Lizzie Burke of 59 Tenth Avenue, while playing in the avenue near Twentieth Street last night, was run over by a truck and was so badly injured that she died an hour later in the New York Hospital. The driver of the wagon, Michael Coyne of 285 Tenth Avenue, was arrested.

The little girl, with several of her companions, was playing tag, and ran into the middle of the street in order to prevent herself from being "tagged." She failed to notice a large truck going up the avenue at a lively rate, and before the driver could stop the horse she was knocked down and both wheels passed over her body.

TOURED AFRICA IN AUTO.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Bishop Home from Long Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Bishop were passengers on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm, which arrived here yesterday from Bremen. They have been abroad since early in the year, and have spent their time in touring Europe and Northern Africa in a twenty horse power automobile.

Mr. Bishop said yesterday that they had covered over 50,000 miles. He said that at no time had they been molested or interfered with, and that the roads throughout had been excellent. Mr. Bishop said that he went to some parts of Africa never visited before by auto, and that in these places the people received him with mingled suspicion and curiosity, but always with kindness.

ASKS MORGAN TO RETURN COPE

Italy Communicates with the Banker's London Representative.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Italian Ambassador, Signor Pansa, has communicated with the representative in London of J. Pierpont Morgan, reciting the facts in connection with the theft of the ancient cope, stolen in 1892 from the Cathedral of Ascoli, Italy, and requesting that arrangements be made for its return to Ascoli. The cope was purchased by Mr. Morgan, and is now on exhibition in the Kensington Museum.

A reply has been received by the embassy from Mr. Morgan's local representative saying that he is not in a position at present to discuss the matter. The embassy reported the facts to the Government at Rome, and is awaiting further instructions.

BISMARCK'S END NEAR.

Family Summoned to Prince Herbert's Bedside at Friedrichsruhe.

FRIEDRICHSRUHE, Sept. 13.—Prince Herbert Bismarck's condition is most grave. His sister, Countess von Rantzau, who was summoned to join the rest of the family at Friedrichsruhe, has arrived here from Dobersdorf, near Kiel.

The Prince's malady is now pronounced to be cancer of the liver, and though he is slightly better to-day Profs. Schweninger and Von Norden pronounce his case to be hopeless.

FIGHT FOR WALLACE FORTUNE.

Daughters of Shoe Man Demand Accounting from Their Brothers.

ROCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 13.—What is considered to be one of the most important contests over the settlement of an estate ever tried before the courts of New Hampshire is that which is now pending as the result of proceedings instituted by Mrs. Carrie H. Hussey, Miss Anne Wallace, and Mrs. Josephine W. Sweet, daughters of the late E. G. Wallace, a shoe manufacturer of this city, against their brothers, Albert and Sumner Wallace, executors and trustees of their father's estate.

Albert Wallace was formerly a State Senator. His brother was a member of the Executive Council under Gov. Rollins's administration. Their father died in 1893, leaving an estate estimated in value at several million dollars.

The daughters allege that the estate has not been managed in their interest, and that they have been unable to obtain a satisfactory accounting.

HURT IN MOTOR CAR SMASH.

Dr. Russel G. Andrew, Jr., of Highlands May Not Survive Injuries.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., Sept. 13.—Dr. Russel G. Andrew, Jr., a Coroner of Monmouth County, and a practicing physician at Highlands, N. J., was seriously, if not fatally, injured this morning while returning from a visit to a patient at Sandy Hook.

A private motor car in which Dr. Andrew was riding at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour jumped the rails opposite The Cedars on Sandy Hook. Dr. Andrew was thrown with terrific force to the ground. He was taken unconscious to his home an hour later, where his father, Dr. R. G. Andrew, Sr., a physician of Navesink, was summoned. Dr. Andrew found that his son had sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, was suffering from severe bruises on the head and hips, and probable internal injuries.

SUPERB SPECTACLE AT NIGHT

Inhabitants of Villages Fled En Masse from the Field Where the Armies Grappled.

GEN. KUROKI'S HEADQUARTERS, Monday, Sept. 5, via Tien-Tsin Sept. 12.—The battle of Liao-Yang was concluded this morning after almost seven days of continuous fighting. Gen. Kuropatkin was defeated, but, after holding his ground for four days, he effected a masterly retirement along the railroad, probably with his army almost intact, and taking away the bodies of half of his men who were killed in action.

The part that the Japanese force under command of Gen. Kuroki played in the conflict was remarkable. From Aug. 25 to Aug. 30, when he effected a junction with the other Japanese armies around Liao-Yang, he advanced night and day over almost roadless mountains, pushing the enemy before him. He then made a rapid change of base from Anping to a point on the eastern side of the railroad, with his left wing ten miles north of Liao-Yang, thus leaving a wide gap between his troops and the main body of the Japanese. The purpose of Gen. Kuroki was to cut the railroad, which was Gen. Kuropatkin's only possible avenue of retreat, and attempt a surrounding movement.

Kuroki Held at Bay.

On the night of Sept. 2 his force reached a position two or three miles from the railroad, with the right division ready to strike, but Gen. Kuropatkin was able to send a superior force against him and hold him at bay while the Russian Army made good its retreat. For two days it seemed possible that the Russians might assume the offensive on a large scale and perhaps force the Japanese right army, as the command of Gen. Kuroki is called, to abandon its position. This morning, (Sept. 5,) however, Gen. Kuroki is following Gen. Kuropatkin's rear guard, and a brisk action is in progress.

No estimate of the casualties can be obtained at this writing, but during the forty-eight hours in which the right army was engaged in desperate fighting the dead and wounded doubtless totaled several thousand.

During Sept. 1 and 2 the army under Gen. Kuroki advanced to the westward from a line between the village and the stone fort of Kwang-tung, with the division forming the right wing extending to the north and the division on the left in a bend of the Tai-Tse River.

Right and Centre's Struggle.

The right and centre of Gen. Kuroki's line were fighting with determination and gaining every foot of their advance at great cost. On the morning of Sept. 1 the Japanese artillery was close to Kwang-tung. It advanced several times during these two days, shifting its positions, and taking advantage of low bluffs.

During this time the Russians shelled the Japanese artillery furiously. Their fire was concentrated principally upon the batteries located near Kwang-tung, but it never disturbed the Japanese gunners, who continued coolly to man their pieces. With the advent of darkness on Sept. 2, the right division of Gen Kuroki's army had occupied some hills which the Chinese aptly call the "Five Headed Hills," situated five miles to the north of Kwang-tung, and overlooking the railroad station at Yen-tai, which is two or three miles to the west of them.

One brigade on the extreme right had gained a position a mile or two further north and to the northwest of Coal Mine Hill, where foreign buildings could be seen. The Japanese centre division held a long, low hill, five miles to the west of Kwang-tung and above the village of Syk-wan-tun. Between Kwang-tung, where from a Manchu stone fort on a bare and rocky hill Gen. Kuroki observed the conflict for four days, and the hills which formed the Japanese advance line, beyond which they gained but little ground until the night of Sept. 4, there lies a rolling country with several low ridges of hills and many groves, giving cover to both armies.

Under Constant Russian Fire.

The Russians had cut away the grain and trees from in front of their intrenchments on these hills, leaving the approaches open and bare. In the advance movement over this section the Japanese troops were under fire constantly, and they could work forward only by the digging of successive rows of trenches. The suffering was great. The men, already exhausted by several days of the hardest kind of fighting and marching, were obliged to work unceasingly with their rifles, or with trenching tools. They were unable to cook rations for fear that their fires would disclose their positions to the enemy.

The taking of these hills, particularly the one at Heiyingtai, cost the Japanese heavily. After cannonading this hill during the day of Sept. 1 and gradually forcing back the Russian infantry on the plain without being able to dislodge them, the Japanese again resorted to their favorite operation, a night attack, and drove the Russians out at the point of the bayonet. They also stormed the "Five Headed Hills," to the northwest, during the afternoon of Sept. 2.

While this engagement was going on, the left division made a demonstration against the high hills at Syk-wan-tun, to the south of Heiyingtai, and facing a bend in the Tai-Tse River, where the Russians had strong fortifications and batteries.

A part of the left division, supported by the fire of the batteries on the plain, attempted to advance in extended formation across the wide graveled flats south of the river and bordering the fields. They came under a heavy fire from the Russian guns.

The only possible protection was the depressions in the flats, and their ranks were raked by the enemy's shrapnel. The Japanese soldiers lay flat on their faces and were under the Russian fire until 5 o'clock that afternoon, at which hour the movement was suspended.

A member of the staff described this movement as a demonstration. It probably was intended to support the advance of a part of the centre division on the same hills.

One of the bloodiest affrays of the entire war developed that night on the lower ridges of these same hills. A part of the Japanese centre division was engaged in another night assault. Upon approaching the Russian trenches they encountered an unexpected defense.

Russians' Electric Wire Defense.

The Russians had strung along the ground heavy wires highly charged with electricity, and as the Japanese soldiers ran against the wires in the darkness they received severe shocks. In addition to this the Russian troops defending these trenches threw hand grenades, or shells, among the stormers. The effect was terrifying, and many of the Japanese were wounded. The attempt to seize this hill, which was an important vantage ground to either army, was not successful.

One Japanese battalion which fought its way into the trenches exhausted its ammunition. It attempted to cut its way out with the bayonet, but it was almost exterminated.

On Sept. 3, the Russians withdrew and the Japanese occupied these positions in the evening without opposition.

The fighting which took place the night of Sept. 2 along the entire line was the fiercest of the whole battle. The Russians were determined to retake Heiyingtai Hill, which was necessary for the protection of the railroad.

All day long two or three Russian batteries had enveloped the trenches on the hill with a continuous rapid fire, shrapnel and common shells bursting along the summit and western slopes. The trenches were deep and the single Japanese regiment occupying them stuck to its position and withstood and repulsed two or three infantry assaults.

Combat Almost Hand to Hand.

Toward dusk the Russians attacked in great force, and for two hours there followed steady and hard infantry fighting. During most of this time the combatants were so close to each other that the artillery could not be used. Throughout that night the tenure of the hill hung in the balance.

The Russians made two assaults, and once the Japanese were driven from the trenches down onto the nearer slopes. They refused to yield and returned to the struggle, and finally succeeded in driving the Russians away. The slaughter in this fighting was great on both sides.

In the meantime the Russians attempted to overwhelm the Japanese on the "Five-Headed Hills," throwing a large body of infantry against them. A hard battle was waged for several hours, but the Japanese lines were not broken.

The scene at night was like a remarkable display of fireworks. The Russian bombardment of the hills, which had been steady all day long, increased toward sunset, and when darkness fell the bursting shells over hilltop and plain resembled flashing electric lights. The summits of the hills were outlined by continuous and thin streams of fire from flashing rifles. In the nearer plain, under the protection of low hills, the camp fires of the reserves glowed like the lights of a city. In the distance great beacons of light showed where the dead were being cremated.

Kuropatkin Reinforced.

The morning of Sept. 3, the fifth day of the battle, was an anxious time at the headquarters of Gen. Kuroki. The Russians' bombardment of the hills was proceeding and the Japanese batteries had taken up new positions in the lowlands. It was evident that the Russians confronting the army under Gen. Kuroki had been heavily reinforced. The members of the General Staff were silent concerning the situation. Little firing was heard from the direction of Liao-Yang. Whether Gen. Kuropatkin was holding his ground there and bringing further reinforcements against Kuroki or shifting the main strength of his army against the Japanese General, who menaced his retreat and was within striking distance of the railroad, were matters of conjecture.

Hundreds of Chinese, men, women, and children, all heavily laden with their possessions, were seen fleeing from the villages on the plain and disappearing in long lines over the eastern hills. Up to the present time an ordinary engagement between Russians and Japanese, with a few batteries throwing shells back and forth, has not sufficed to drive these enterprising Manchurians from their homes. They hover about the scene of fighting, playing the part of scavengers.

Manchurians Rob Wounded.

They strip the battlefields of every vestige of débris, rob the wounded, and take the clothing from the dead. They even have been seen between the firing gathering cartridges. This morning their exodus was taken to indicate that they expected even greater dangers.

Some of the newspaper correspondents and military attachés who were assigned to Gen. Kuroki's headquarters rode forward to division headquarters. Here they were requested to return, and the reason given was that it was too dangerous for them. This request to go back led to surmises that the Japanese were considering the possibility of retreat, and that they did not want to be incumbered with unnecessary persons.

Most of the villages had been turned into hospitals, and hundreds of wounded were seen, who told fearful stories of the night fighting.

The afternoon of Sept. 3 was comparatively quiet, and the Russian fire decreased. Japanese officers thought from the haphazard way in which the Russians threw their shells where there were no targets that they were trying to frighten the Japanese to cover their retreat. To this the Japanese guns made occasional reply. The work of the previous four days must have been a severe strain on the guns and gunners of both armies, and must have depleted the supplies of ammunition.

Kuroki in Difficult Position.

There was almost no infantry firing during the day of the 3d. It was explained that the Japanese advance had been hampered by the high corn, which made it impossible for them to see the Russian positions.

The Japanese line advanced to the westward only a half mile during the day, and it became evident that the Russian Army facing Gen. Kuroki was too large to warrant the Japanese in attempting to attack it, and that Kuroki probably would be fortunate if he were able to hold his ground.

The night of the 3d a great glow shone over the hills to the southwest, and it was surmised that the Russians were burning Liao-Yang. The morning of the 4th was intolerably hot, and an ominous quiet reigned. The Russian guns beyond the hills in front of Gen. Kuroki's army boomed at intervals. The members of the General Staff obviously were worried. They spent the morning, as they had the previous afternoon, in looking through telescopes toward the northwest, and it was evident that they expected a movement in that direction.

Japanese Communications Cut.

It became known that Gen. Kuroki's communication with the other Japanese armies had been cut. There was no knowledge as to how the tide of battle went with them, but the Russian force in front of Gen. Kuroki was estimated to number at least five divisions, (75,000 to 100,000 men.)

The situation of the brigade on Gen. Kuroki's extreme right became critical. It was thought that the Russians might attempt to cut off Gen. Kuroki by a turning movement through the gap between his and the fourth army (Gen. Nodzu's) toward Anping, where the only Japanese forces for several miles were some regiments of cavalry patrolling the valley of the Tai-Tse River.

In the course of the afternoon the prospect brightened, and it rapidly became known that a fresh brigade had reinforced the right of the line. Gen. Kuroki concentrated his army by ordering in the left division to reinforce the troops then holding the front from Syk-wa-tun to the "Five-Headed Hills." The left division made a forced march as fast as it could under the extreme heat, crossing the Tai-Tse River over a pontoon bridge to the left of the hill, where Gen. Kuroki had stationed himself, and pushing forward into the plain. During all the 4th the firing was suspended.

Kuroki Begins Pursuit.

The silence and suspense came to an end at 5 o'clock in the evening. At this hour the members of the staff became galvanized into activity. Couriers galloped forward, and Gen. Fujii announced that the army would begin the pursuit of the enemy.

Close upon his words the Japanese batteries began a brisk pounding. The left wing swept toward the railroad and the entire line advanced, meeting a lively rifle-fire from the Russian rear guard. To this the Japanese replied, and the engagement was continued until nightfall.

On Sunday morning Gen. Kuroki rode forward to Heyingtai Hill. He passed through the Chinese villages deserted by their inhabitants and filled with Japanese wounded. He passed many mounds where fires burned over the dead, and hundreds of fresh and hastily dug graves. The fields had been trampled into bogs by the fighting men, and were strewn with the débris of both armies.

The top of this hill is less than a quarter of a mile long; the crest of it, as well as the slopes and ravines, was literally honeycombed with trenches, ditches, and furrows for shelter.

Trenches and counter-trenches ran in every direction, testifying to the number of attacks made, and the different points from which these assaults had been attempted. Close to the summit of the hill were the bodies of two hundred dead Russians. They lay as they had fallen, their rifles in their hands or on the ground near them. It appeared that these men had attempted to advance in open order, and that the entire line had been mowed down by the Japanese fire when it was almost upon the trenches.

Many other corpses strewed the fields below the hills. Many shells had fallen on the hill, tearing pits and furrows in the ground. Fragments of steel were everywhere under foot. Several Russian drums, two or three hundred Russian rifles, and a number of cooking pots, all torn and shattered by shot and shell, were lying around. Bayonets were twisted and broken, and on the ground there were the remains of uniforms and soldiers' caps torn by shot and soaked in blood. It was impossible to take a step without treading on bullets. During the Japanese occupation this hill was under a cross fire from the Russian batteries at Syk-wan-tun.

The deep ravines on the eastern slope of the hill, where there had been galleries of shelter pits, had been honeycombed and indescribably disfigured by the fierce shell fire. It was difficult for an observer to believe that an area of equal extent had ever before been the scene of such carnage, and Heyingtai Hill was only a single point of the battlefield, every part of which had been bitterly contested for two days and two nights.

LOSS OF COAL MINES SERIOUS.

Russia Depended on Them for Fuel for Manchuria Railway.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Sept. 13.—It is noted in Tokio that Russia depends for coal for the Manchurian Railway on three mines at Kai-Ping, Yen-Tai, and Wu-Shun. The first two are no longer available, the third is twenty-three miles east of Mukden, and probably soon will fall into the hands of the Japanese.

News has been officially received at Tokio that over forty junks laden with beans and cereals have descended the Liao River to Ying-Kow since the Russian defeat at Liao-Yang. If the Russians retire from Sing-min-Tung, the river trade will be completely restored.

The Japanese press, while congratulating the country on the Liao-Yang victory, admits its indecisive character and acknowledges that the Russians showed themselves foes worthy of all respect. Kuropatkin, the newspapers say, proved himself an able strategist. It is claimed, however, that greater results could not reasonably have been expected, considering the equality of numbers and the enormous superiority of the Russian position.

RUSSIANS' STRONG DEFENSES.

Formidable Intrenchments Overcome by Advancing Japanese.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND JAPANESE ARMY, via Tien-tsin, Sept. 13.—The Russian positions in the hills south of Liao-Yang were stronger than those at Nanshan Hill, and more stubbornly defended.

A wait of a few days would have allowed the Japanese to outflank these positions with comparatively small losses, but the desperate straits of the other Japanese armies to the north required that the Russian forces facing the second army under Gen. Oku be disposed of instantly, in order to prevent the sending of reinforcements to the Russians opposing the other commanders.

The capture of Liao-Yang was accomplished only after nine days of desperate fighting on the part of the second, or left, Japanese army under the command of Gen. Oku. During this time, while the artillery arm carried out its part of the greatest artillery duel the world has ever seen, there occurred the hardest fighting and the most desperate infantry charges of modern times.

After the retirement from Anshanshan on Aug. 26, the main force of Russians reached in safety the strongly fortified positions in the Shou-shan-pao hills, eight miles south of Liao-Yang. This Russian position was the strongest the enemy had held up to that time. It consisted of three hills, averaging 300 feet high, all fortified with very strong intrenchments, connected each one with a covered way leading back to a bomb-proof capable of holding all the men engaged in working the guns. This bomb-proof was so skillfully hidden that the Japanese could not locate it accurately during the three days' fighting that ensued.

The Japanese guns on Aug. 31 were hidden under ripening corn eight feet high, and they were hardly visible to the enemy, who searched the cornfields with shrapnel. As the morning wore on, the Japanese brought into action four fifteen centimeter guns captured from the Russians at Nanshan hill, using in them against the Russian position ammunition taken from the enemy. These guns and their ammunition had been drawn by hand over the railroad for nearly 200 miles.

When the Japanese had gained the hill on the Russian extreme left, in spite of strong wire entanglements, military pits, and exploding mines, they attacked on Sept. 1 the centre Russian position. This was a hill defended by three lines of intrenchments. The bottom of the hill was defended by wire entanglements, pits, and ditches. Japanese engineers cut the entanglements after terrible slaughter, one detachment losing seventy-seven out of eighty men. The men of Nagoya, the flower of the second army were assigned to charge this hill, and took the trenches at the point of the bayonet.

As the Japanese left advanced the night of Sept. 2 it discovered a strong Russian position on the plain, and at the same time it was learned that these defenses ran across the plain for several miles. The Russian position on the plain was scored with trenches and fortifications. At one potnt the trenches occupied by the Russians were permanent works of immense strength, capable of protecting an entire brigade and absolutely unassailable. It was only by forcing back the Russian right by a desperate rush that the Japanese were able to make the Russians retire from this excellent position. Fully five miles of covered and connecting trenches gave the Russians an opportunity to retire to the city with little loss.

The gun position on the plain was elaborately protected. There was a portable railroad from the city to the [illegible] for the transportation of [illegible] supplies.

SECRET UNDERSTANDING OF RUSSIA AND GERMANY

Writer in London Times Says It Concerns the Far East.

DEPENDS ON JAPAN'S DEFEAT

Kaiser In That Event Looks for Free Hand in China at the Expense of Great Britain.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Times this morning publishes an article entitled "Russia and Germany," in which the writer discusses the relations between the two countries, chiefly with respect to the Far Eastern war.

He says that in all that concerns the Far East these relations are growing much closer and more intimate than those between St. Petersburg and Paris. Germany, he says, has had opportunities which France has not enjoyed of rendering valuable services to Russia, and he adds:

"Certainly everything a most benevolent and elastic interpretation of neutrality could possibly allow has been done by Germany to help Russia in her hour of need."

The writer thinks the foundations of the rapprochement he speaks of were laid by the Emperor and that the understanding took definite shape at the time of the commercial negotiations Witte conducted with the German Chancellor in July.

German friendliness for Russia may be said to be based on the expectation that Russia eventually will triumph over Japan and be a great ruling power in the Far East, and thus be in a position to aid Germany in securing to her a free hand for carrying out her scheme of weltpolitik on the lines of least resistance in China, where she will come in contact only with British interests. The writer concludes:

"Official démentis no doubt will be issued to controvert this statement, but students of contemporary history have not forgotten that Germany already once before concluded a reinsurance treaty with Russia, of which the secret was for years preserved by the two contracting parties until the old German Chancellor, after his fall, revealed it for his own purposes.

"The importance of the new engagements between Berlin and St. Petersburg exceeds that of Bismarck's reinsurance treaty in the same measure and scope as William's weltpolitik exceeds that of old Bismarckian diplomacy, which mainly was confined to the European balance of power."

KUROPATKIN, FALLEN IDOL.

Discredited in Eyes of Public—Battle at Mukden Expected.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The continued delay in the receipt here of anything like a detailed official account either of the battle of Liao-Yang or of the present situation at the front is proving more irritating to the public of St. Petersburg than any previous phase of the war, and has given rise to numerous alarmist stories of the alleged precarious situation of Gen. Kuropatkin's army.

None of these stories, however, is traceable to any authentic source. The fact seems to be that military operations in the neighborhood of Mukden are almost suspended on account of the effect of the rains upon the roads.

There is no current news to record, while if Gen. Kuropatkin has transmitted any full account of the recent great battle it has not been allowed to circulate. The persistent silence is doing more than anything else to discredit the Russian Commander in Chief in the eyes of the public, with whom he has heretofore been an almost deified hero.

Apprehensive of China.

Reports that the Chinese are making preparations to occupy conquered territory are creating some uneasiness, for China has been all along an uncertain quantity from which any development or complication might be expected.

The logical belief always has been that China would endeavor to the utmost to refrain from taking sides in the present conflict in order that she might be in a position to make the best terms possible with the ultimate victor; but it is realized that a continued Japanese advance into the heart of Manchuria might exert a powerful influence upon both the Chinese peasantry and the near-by, ill-controlled regular troops, which the weak central Government at Peking might find it difficult to curb, thereby precipitating serious complications upon the scene of actual hostilities.

The authorities here are unanimously of the opinion that Gen. Kuropatkin will not withdraw from Mukden without accepting battle. It is expected that he will leave 50,000 men to defend Mukden while the remainder of his army retires to Tie Pass. It is believed that he has over 200,000 men. The General Staff said to-day that since the battle of Liao-Yang he had been reinforced by two army corps. It is supposed that the reinforcements of artillery amount to fully 300 guns.

The report persists, although there is nothing official to confirm it, that Gen. Kuropatkin has recommended the trial by court-martial of Major Gen. Orloff, upon whose failure to carry out his orders the unsuccess of Gen. Kuropatkin's plans against Gen. Kuroki at the most critical hour of the battle of Liao-Yang is attributed.

Czar Keenly Disappointed.

According to a statement made by a personage connected with the Emperor's surrounding, Kuropatkin had assured his Majesty of his ability to accept battle and defeat the Japanese at Liao-Yang, and for this reason the Emperor's disappointment is all the more keen and his dissatisfaction at the outcome all the greater.

The War Office denies the report circulated by The Morning Post of London yesterday to the effect that 3,000 men of Lieut. Gen. Sassulitch's Corps have been captured; also, the report from the same source that he has been wounded; also, the statement from Tokio that dumdum bullets were used by the Russians at Liao-Yang; also, that Gen. Linevitch has marched into Northeastern Korea from Vladivostok and cut Gen. Kuroki's communications with Feng-wang-Cheng, as reported in a dispatch from Tien-Tsin to The London Daily Mail.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Morning Post's correspondent at Shanghai hears that the calling out of a portion of the Japanese territorial army is imminent.

From Tokio the correspondent of The Standard telegraphs that the Chinese Government is becoming uneasy over the fate of Manchuria. An unconfirmed report, he says, is current that Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Assistant Foreign Minister, [illegible]

HEAVY JAPANESE CASUALTIES.

Nearer 30,000 Than 17,000 Lost in Battle, Says Mr. Burleigh.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Bennet Burleigh, cabling from Tien-Tsin to The Daily Telegraph, insists that the Japanese casualties in the battle of Liao-Yang were nearer 30,000 than 17,000. Mr. Burleigh declares that there is no evidence that the Russians used dum-dum bullets.

The dispatch says: "The Japanese, who are bad horsemasters, have many thousands of animals foundered, terribly galled, and sored. Reinforcements both of men and horses, however, are being hastened northward. The Mikado's troops hold secretly but strongly all the districts to the north along the Liao River up to Sinmintin. I believe the Chunchuses are organizing for some important operations north of Mukden.

"Oyama was overheard to say at Liao-Yang that stubborn as Kuropatkin is, he must now be in a desperate condition and aware that his game will not do. Whatever corps Russia may mobilize, Japan can duplicate them with better troops put into the field more quickly."

Mr. Wallace, correspondent of a San Francisco newspaper, who has just recovered from a dangerous illness, complains of gross neglect at the hands of the Japanese army doctors. He says that it is part of a plan to be rid of all foreigners.

GREAT DROUGHT IN EUROPE.

Long-Lost Treasure Laid Bare in the Elbe—Mills and Factories Closed.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—A report to the American Board from the Rev. J. S. Porter, its missionary in Schemmel, Bohemia, states that the whole heart of Europe, particularly Bohemia and Moravia, is suffering from the most severe drought within the memory of any one living. Potatoes and many other crops are a failure. The sugar beet crops are so light that many sugar factories will not be opened this year. The price of flour has increased over 30 per cent.

Forest fires are of frequent occurrence.

The Elbe is so low that for six weeks no steamers have been able to move, and in many places one can wade across the river. Considerable long-lost treasure is being found in the river bottom. Near Bodenbach, in the Elbe a rock has been uncovered which bears the inscription in German, dating back to 1800: "When you see me then weep."

Mills and factories stand idle and thousands who usually find employment on all sorts of boats on the Elbe are now out of work.

HANS AN EQUINE WONDER.

German Scientific Commission Examines the Educated Horse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—A scientific commission which has been making a careful study of Hans, the educated horse, reports that the evidences he gave of comprehending handwriting, his musical and color discrimination, and mathematical work were performed under circumstances excluding the possibility of a trick.

Herr Bush, a member of the commission and a well-known authority on the training of horses, says the results obtained in the tests would be impossible by the usual drill methods.

The methods of the horse's owner, Herr von Osten, are pronounced to be those of a pedagogue rather than of an animal trainer.

MALARIAL FEVER IN PANAMA.

Newly Arrived Negroes Easy Victims—Colon's Population.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—A report received by the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service from Chief Sanitary Officer Gorgas, at Colon, says that the census of Colon now being computed will show a population of from 7,500 to 8,000. The population is steadily increasing owing to the arrivals of Jamaican and other West Indian negroes on every ship from Jamaica and the South and Central American coasts, although there will be no work for them perhaps for a year. The new-comers are found to be easy victims of malarial fever.

The report says that the permanent improvement of Colon will be an engineering feat of some magnitude—that at this season the greater part of the town is a morass, "to which is added the accumulation of rubbish and filth of a population utterly indifferent to ordinary cleanliness."

JAIL BREAKERS FRUSTRATED.

Baltimore Guard Attacked Chokes Assailant Into Insensibility.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13.—A daring attempt at jail breaking, in which three or more prisoners, headed by Roland B. Rigor, the Lakeside car bandit, were involved, occurred in this city to-day. When Jail Guard H. A. Le Cron went into a cell occupied by a prisoner named Harold Brewer, held on a charge of passing a bogus check, he was struck on the back of his head with a club in the hands of Rigor.

Le Cron, though partially stunned, grappled with his assailant, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in choking him into insensibility. In the meantime Brewer, who reached the yard and was making his way to the outer gate, was captured. He confessed that he and Rigor and another prisoner, Charles A. Eaton, had conspired to disable Guard Le Cron, take his pistol, lock him in a cell, and fight their way to freedom.

STRAYED, A CHURCH ORGAN.

Carnegie $1,500 Gift Lost Between Chicago and Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—A fifteen-hundred-dollar organ donated by Andrew Carnegie to the St. John's German Lutheran Church of Millvale has been lost somewhere between this city and Chicago. While half the congregation is looking for the missing musical instrument the other half got together to-day and announced that all arrangements for dedicating the new church were off until the organ is found.

Two weeks ago an Illinois firm shipped the organ from Peoria. It passed through Chicago safely, but then disappeared. No trace of it has been discovered.

BELLEVILLE, Ontario, Sept. 13.—The private bank of A. W. Carscallen, member of the Dominion Parliament for North Hastings, at Marmora, was robbed early this morning. The safe and vault were blown to bits, and cash and stock securities valued at $80,000 stolen.

Marmora is a remote mining village, and several suspicious characters were seen loitering about the place yesterday.

POWERS ASKED TO STOP RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR

Inter-Parliamentary Union Urges Offer of Mediation.

APPEAL TO MR. ROOSEVELT

President Requested to Summon Second Session of Hague Conference—Called Champion of International Justice.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13.—The Inter-Parliamentary Union, whose mission to the United States is to advance the cause of peace and bring about, if possible, universal international arbitration, took up in earnest to-day the important matters before it. The session was held in the Hall of Congresses at the World's Fair.

The following telegram was sent to President Roosevelt:

The twelfth Inter-Parliamentary Congress, composed of representatives of fifteen parliaments, at the commencement of its deliberations sends its respectful and cordial salutations to the President of the great American Republic. It considers itself most fortunate to have the opportunity of holding its sessions in a country whose Chief Magistrate is considered by all the nations a champion of international justice.

RICHARD BARTHOLDT, President.
DR. GOBAT, Secretary.

Comte Goblet d'Alviella of Belgium presented this resolution calling for intervention in the Russo-Japanese war. It reads:

The Inter-Parliamentary conference, shocked by the horrors of the war that is being waged in the Far East between two civilized states, and deploring that the powers signatory of the convention of The Hague have been unable to have recourse to the clauses thereof, which direct them to tender their mediation immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities, asks the powers signatory of the convention of The Hague to intervene either jointly or separately with the belligerents in order to facilitate the restoration of peace, or instruct the Inter-Parliamentary bureau to bring the present resolution to the knowledge of said powers.

Comte d'Alviella, in presenting the resolution, used these words:

"I trust we shall render Russia a great favor in helping her out of her difficulties. As to Japan, I am one of those who have thought from the outset that the existence of a strong Japanese empire in the Far East may become a factor in the equilibrium of the world, provided this empire stands, not as a new factor of war, but as an element of peace and civilization."

In closing he urged that the President of the United States was quite the proper person to tender mediation. The resolution was adopted.

Congressman Burton of Cleveland presented a resolution asking President Roosevelt to call a second session of The Hague Conference. The resolution was enthusiastically adopted.

With the two important questions of the day disposed of, the real labors of the conference ended. There will be a final session to-morrow, however.

SEIZURE ON LA TOURAINE.

Twenty Bolts of Silk and 600 Cigars Discovered on Board.

The French Line steamship Touraine, which arrived here on Saturday, was thoroughly searched by special Treasury agents last night for goods intended to be smuggled ashore. Agents Hooley and O'Neill, who conducted the search, unearthed 20 bolts of fine silk and 600 cigars. Not satisfied that they have found everything, they will go over the ship again this morning. No one would claim the goods found last night.

The search was made primarily because two boxes containing $20,000 of imported gowns of which the Custom House had no record were found on the French Line pier. The rind was an accident, and though the higher officials at the Custom House do not believe that any of the Inspectors are involved in the attempt to get the boxes ashore, an investigation will be made with the idea of securing a more strict and careful handling of the trunks of returning dressmakers.

BANDITS HOLD UP TRAIN.

Detach Engine and Escape—Men and Hounds After Them.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 13.—Five bandits effected a successful hold-up of a passenger train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway near Letts, Ia., early this morning. The safe was blown open and the contents taken. The officers say that the safe contained merchandise of some value, but no money.

Three special trains, on one of which are posses of railroad and express employes and a number of officers, were rushed to the scene of the robbery immediately upon receipt of the news. Mounted men with bloodhounds are now scouring the country for miles in every direction.

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 13.—The Cape Town municipal election returns include one man of color, Dr. Abdurrahman, a Mohammedan graduate of Edinburgh and a very able man.

It is believed that this is the first instance of the return of a man of color to any European representative body in South Africa.

Rio Grande Still Rising.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 13.—Reports received here to-day from Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Laredo, Carrizo, and Rio Grande City, all situated on the Rio Grande, covering the course of that river for 500 miles, say that the flood is unprecedented. The report that only one house remains standing in Presidio del Norte is confirmed.

Many smaller Mexican settlements in the valley of the river in Texas and Mexico have been destroyed, but so far no reports of loss of life have been received.

Eleven Poisoned at Wake.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 13.—Eleven persons were poisoned at the wake of Peter H. Baxter, in Naugatuck on Saturday, and Miss Calesta Furri is dying to-day, while Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bunniell of Waterbury, Miss Margaret Daly and Austin Murphy of Naugatuck are critically ill. The others have not recovered from the effects.

They all ate catsup, and the following day a corps of physicians was summoned.

MILITIA OFFICERS TO BE TRIED.

Court-Martial for Five Who Failed to Stop Statesborough Lynchers.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 13.—Gov. Terrell has ordered the court-martial of all the State militia officers save one who were in command of the troops at Statesborough at the time the mob disarmed the militia and burned the negroes Reid and Cato.

The court-martial will take up the cases of Capt. Hitch, who was in command of all the troops, and of Lieuts. Melt, Griner, Morrison, and Cone. Lieut. McIntyre, the only officer who made any real resistance, and who was badly wounded while fighting the mob, was completely exonerated by the report of the board of inquiry.

The conclusion of the board is that the troops could have taken the prisoners from the mob, even after they left the Court House had vigorous efforts been used instead of no attempt at all.

The court-martial will begin in Savannah on Sept. 29. Col. Clifford L. Anderson of Atlanta, who commanded a Georgia regiment at Manassas, will preside.

THE AYLESMERE,
58 West 76th St.

Sept. 4, there lies a rolling country with several low ridges of hills and many groves, giving cover to both armies.

Under Constant Russian Fire.

The Russians had cut away the grain and trees from in front of their intrenchments on these hills, leaving the approaches open and bare. In the advance movement over this section the Japanese troops were under fire constantly, and they could work forward only by the digging of successive rows of trenches. The suffering was great. The men, already exhausted by several days of the hardest kind of fighting and marching, were obliged to work unceasingly with their rifles, or with trenching tools. They were unable to cook rations for fear that their fires would disclose their positions to the enemy.

The taking of these hills, particularly the one at Heiyingtai, cost the Japanese heavily. After cannonading this hill during the day of Sept. 1 and gradually forcing back the Russian infantry on the plain without being able to dislodge them, the Japanese again resorted to their favorite operation, a night attack, and drove the Russians out at the point of the bayonet. They also stormed the "Five Headed Hills," to the northwest, during the afternoon of Sept. 2.

While this engagement was going on, the left division made a demonstration against the high hills at Syk-wan-tun, to the south of Heiyingtai, and facing a bend in the Tai-Tse River, where the Russians had strong fortifications and batteries.

A part of the left division, supported by the fire of the batteries on the plain, attempted to advance in extended formation across the wide graveled flats south of the river and bordering the fields. They came under a heavy fire from the Russian guns.

The only possible protection was the depressions in the flats, and their ranks were raked by the enemy's shrapnel. The Japanese soldiers lay flat on their faces and were under the Russian fire until 5 o'clock that afternoon, at which hour the movement was suspended.

A member of the staff described this movement as a demonstration. It probably was intended to support the advance of a part of the centre division on the same hills.

One of the bloodiest affrays of the entire war developed that night on the lower ridges of these same hills. A part of the Japanese centre division was engaged in another night assault. Upon approaching the Russian trenches they encountered an unexpected defense.

Russians' Electric Wire Defense.

The Russians had strung along the ground heavy wires highly charged with electricity, and as the Japanese soldiers ran against the wires in the darkness they received severe shocks. In addition to this the Russian troops defending these trenches threw hand grenades, or shells, among the stormers. The effect was terrifying, and many of the Japanese were wounded. The attempt to seize this hill, which was an important vantage ground to either army, was not successful.

One Japanese battalion which fought its way into the trenches exhausted its ammunition. It attempted to cut its way out with the bayonet, but it was almost exterminated.

On Sept. 3, the Russians withdrew and the Japanese occupied these positions in the evening without opposition.

The fighting which took place the night of Sept. 2 along the entire line was the fiercest of the whole battle. The Russians were determined to retake Heiyingtai Hill, which was necessary for the protection of the railroad.

All day long two or three Russian batteries had enveloped the trenches on the hill with a continuous rapid fire, shrapnel and common shells bursting along the summit and western slopes. The trenches were deep and the single Japanese regiment occupying them stuck to its position and withstood and repulsed two or three infantry assaults.

Combat Almost Hand to Hand.

Toward dusk the Russians attacked in great force, and for two hours there followed steady and hard infantry fighting. During most of this time the combatants were so close to each other that the artillery could not be used. Throughout that night the tenure of the hill hung in the balance.

The Russians made two assaults, and once the Japanese were driven from the trenches down onto the nearer slopes. They refused to yield and returned to the struggle, and finally succeeded in driving the Russians away. The slaughter in this fighting was great on both sides.

In the meantime the Russians attempted to overwhelm the Japanese on the "Five-Headed Hills," throwing a large body of infantry against them. A hard battle was waged for several hours, but the Japanese lines were not broken.

The scene at night was like a remarkable display of fireworks. The Russian bombardment of the hills, which had been steady all day long, increased toward sunset, and when darkness fell the bursting shells over hilltop and plain resembled flashing electric lights. The summits of the hills were outlined by continuous and thin streams of fire from flashing rifles. In the nearer plain, under the protection of low hills, the camp fires of the reserves glowed like the lights of a city. In the distance great beacons of light showed where the dead were being cremated.

Kuropatkin Reinforced.

The morning of Sept. 3, the fifth day of the battle, was an anxious time at the headquarters of Gen. Kuroki. The Russians' bombardment of the hills was proceeding and the Japanese batteries had taken up new positions in the lowlands. It was evident that the Russians confronting the army under Gen. Kuroki had been heavily reinforced. The members of the General Staff were silent concerning the situation. Little firing was heard from the direction of Liao-Yang. Whether Gen. Kuropatkin was holding his ground there and bringing further reinforcements against Kuroki or shifting the main strength of his army against the Japanese General, who menaced his retreat and was within striking distance of the railroad, were matters of conjecture.

Hundreds of Chinese, men, women, and children, all heavily laden with their possessions, were seen fleeing from the villages on the plain and disappearing in long lines over the eastern hills. Up to the present time an ordinary engagement between Russians and Japanese, with a few batteries throwing shells back and forth, has not sufficed to drive these enterprising Manchurians from their homes. They hover about the scene of fighting, playing the part of scavengers.

Manchurians Rob Wounded.

They strip the battlefields of every vestige of débris, rob the wounded, and take the clothing from the dead. They even have been seen between the firing gathering cartridges. This morning their exodus was taken to indicate that they expected even greater dangers.

Some of the newspaper correspondents and military attachés who were assigned to Gen. Kuroki's headquarters rode forward to division headquarters. Here they were requested to return, and the reason given was that it was too dangerous for them. This request to go back led to surmises that the Japanese were considering the possibility of retreat, and that they did not want to be incumbered with unnecessary persons.

Most of the villages had been turned into hospitals, and hundreds of wounded were seen, who told fearful stories of the night fighting.

The afternoon of Sept. 3 was comparatively quiet, and the Russian fire decreased. Japanese officers thought from the haphazard way in which the Russians threw their shells where there were no targets that they were trying to frighten the Japanese to cover their retreat. To this the Japanese guns made occasional reply. The work of the previous four days must have been a severe strain on the guns and gunners of both armies, and must have depleted the supplies of ammunition.

Kuroki in Difficult Position.

There was almost no infantry firing during the day of the 3d. It was explained that the Japanese advance had been hampered by the high corn, which made it impossible for them to see the Russian positions.

The Japanese line advanced to the westward only a half mile during the day, and it became evident that the Russian Army facing Gen. Kuroki was too large to warrant the Japanese in attempting to attack it, and that Kuroki probably would be fortunate if he were able to hold his ground.

The night of the 3d a great glow shone over the hills to the southwest, and it was surmised that the Russians were burning Liao-Yang. The morning of the 4th was intolerably hot, and an ominous quiet reigned. The Russian guns beyond the hills in front of Gen. Kuroki's army boomed at intervals. The members of the General Staff obviously were worried. They spent the morning, as they had the previous afternoon, in looking through telescopes toward the northwest, and it was evident that they expected a movement in that direction.

Japanese Communications Cut.

It became known that Gen. Kuroki's communication with the other Japanese armies had been cut. There was no knowledge as to how the tide of battle went with them, but the Russian force in front of Gen. Kuroki was estimated to number at least five divisions, (75,000 to 100,000 men.)

The situation of the brigade on Gen. Kuroki's extreme right became critical. It was thought that the Russians might attempt to cut off Gen. Kuroki by a turning movement through the gap between his and the fourth army (Gen. Nodzu's) toward Anping, where the only Japanese forces for several miles were some regiments of cavalry patrolling the valley of the Tai-Tse River.

In the course of the afternoon the prospect brightened, and it rapidly became known that a fresh brigade had reinforced the right of the line. Gen. Kuroki concentrated his army by ordering in the left division to reinforce the troops then holding the front from Syk-wa-tun to the "Five-Headed Hills." The left division made a forced march as fast as it could under the extreme heat, crossing the Tai-Tse River over a pontoon bridge to the left of the hill, where Gen. Kuroki had stationed himself, and pushing forward into the plain. During all the 4th the firing was suspended.

Kuroki Begins Pursuit.

The silence and suspense came to an end at 5 o'clock in the evening. At this hour the members of the staff became galvanized into activity. Couriers galloped forward, and Gen. Fujii announced that the army would begin the pursuit of the enemy.

Close upon his words the Japanese batteries began a brisk pounding. The left wing swept toward the railroad and the entire line advanced, meeting a lively rifle-fire from the Russian rear guard. To this the Japanese replied, and the engagement was continued until nightfall.

On Sunday morning Gen. Kuroki rode forward to Heyingtai Hill. He passed through the Chinese villages deserted by their inhabitants and filled with Japanese wounded. He passed many mounds where fires burned over the dead, and hundreds of fresh and hastily dug graves. The fields had been trampled into bogs by the fighting men, and were strewn with the débris of both armies.

The top of this hill is less than a quarter of a mile long; the crest of it, as well as the slopes and ravines, was literally honeycombed with trenches, ditches, and furrows for shelter.

Trenches and counter-trenches ran in every direction, testifying to the number of attacks made, and the different points from which these assaults had been attempted. Close to the summit of the hill were the bodies of two hundred dead Russians. They lay as they had fallen, their rifles in their hands or on the ground near them. It appeared that these men had attempted to advance in open order, and that the entire line had been mowed down by the Japanese fire when it was almost upon the trenches.

Many other corpses strewed the fields below the hills. Many shells had fallen on the hill, tearing pits and furrows in the ground. Fragments of steel were everywhere under foot. Several Russian drums, two or three hundred Russian rifles, and a number of cooking pots, all torn and shattered by shot and shell, were lying around. Bayonets were twisted and broken, and on the ground there were the remains of uniforms and soldiers' caps torn by shot and soaked in blood. It was impossible to take a step without treading on bullets. During the Japanese occupation this hill was under a cross fire from the Russian batteries at Syk-wan-tun.

The deep ravines on the eastern slope of the hill, where there had been galleries of shelter pits, had been honeycombed and indescribably disfigured by the fierce shell fire. It was difficult for an observer to believe that an area of equal extent had ever before been the scene of such carnage, and Heyingtai Hill was only a single point of the battlefield, every part of which had been bitterly contested for two days and two nights.

LOSS OF COAL MINES SERIOUS.

Russia Depended on Them for Fuel for Manchuria Railway.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Sept. 13.—It is noted in Tokio that Russia depends for coal for the Manchurian Railway on three mines at Kai-Ping, Yen-Tai, and Wu-Shun. The first two are no longer available, the third is twenty-three miles east of Mukden, and probably soon will fall into the hands of the Japanese.

News has been officially received at Tokio that over forty junks laden with beans and cereals have descended the Liao River to Ying-Kow since the Russian defeat at Liao-Yang. If the Russians retire from Sing-min-Tung, the river trade will be completely restored.

The Japanese press, while congratulating the country on the Liao-Yang victory, admits its indecisive character and acknowledges that the Russians showed themselves foes worthy of all respect. Kuropatkin, the newspapers say, proved himself an able strategist. It is claimed, however, that greater results could not reasonably have been expected, considering the equality of numbers and the enormous superiority of the Russian position.

RUSSIANS' STRONG DEFENSES.

Formidable Intrenchments Overcome by Advancing Japanese.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND JAPANESE ARMY, via Tien-tsin, Sept. 13.—The Russian positions in the hills south of Liao-Yang were stronger than those at Nanshan Hill, and more stubbornly defended.

A wait of a few days would have allowed the Japanese to outflank these positions with comparatively small losses, but the desperate straits of the other Japanese armies to the north required that the Russian forces facing the second army under Gen. Oku be disposed of instantly, in order to prevent the sending of reinforcements to the Russians opposing the other commanders.

The capture of Liao-Yang was accomplished only after nine days of desperate fighting on the part of the second, or left, Japanese army under the command of Gen. Oku. During this time, while the artillery arm carried out its part of the greatest artillery duel the world has ever seen, there occurred the hardest fighting and the most desperate infantry charges of modern times.

After the retirement from Anshanshan on Aug. 26, the main force of Russians reached in safety the strongly fortified positions in the Shou-shan-pao hills, eight miles south of Liao-Yang. This Russian position was the strongest the enemy had held up to that time. It consisted of three hills, averaging 300 feet high, all fortified with very strong intrenchments, connected each one with a covered way leading back to a bomb-proof capable of holding all the men engaged in working the guns. This bomb-proof was so skillfully hidden that the Japanese could not locate it accurately during the three days' fighting that ensued.

The Japanese guns on Aug. 31 were hidden under ripening corn eight feet high, and they were hardly visible to the enemy, who searched the cornfields with shrapnel. As the morning wore on, the Japanese brought into action four fifteen centimeter guns captured from the Russians at Nanshan hill, using in them against the Russian position ammunition taken from the enemy. These guns and their ammunition had been drawn by hand over the railroad for nearly 200 miles.

When the Japanese had gained the hill on the Russian extreme left, in spite of strong wire entanglements, military pits, and exploding mines, they attacked on Sept. 1 the centre Russian position. This was a hill defended by three lines of intrenchments. The bottom of the hill was defended by wire entanglements, pits, and ditches. Japanese engineers cut the entanglements after terrible slaughter, one detachment losing seventy-seven out of eighty men. The men of Nagoya, the flower of the second army were assigned to charge this hill, and took the trenches at the point of the bayonet.

As the Japanese left advanced the night of Sept. 2 it discovered a strong Russian position on the plain, and at the same time it was learned that these defenses ran across the plain for several miles. The Russian position on the plain was scored with trenches and fortifications. At one point the trenches occupied by the Russians were permanent works of immense strength, capable of protecting an entire brigade and absolutely unassailable. It was only by forcing back the Russian right by a desperate rush that the Japanese were able to make the Russians retire from this excellent position. Fully five miles of covered and connecting trenches gave the Russians an opportunity to retire to the city with little loss.

The gun position on the plain was elaborately protected. There was a portable railroad from the city to the [illegible] for the transportation of [illegible] supplies.

SECRET UNDERSTANDING OF RUSSIA AND GERMANY

DEPENDS ON JAPAN'S DEFEAT

Kaiser in That Event Looks for Free Hand in China at the Expense of Great Britain.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Times this morning publishes an article entitled "Russia and Germany," in which the writer discusses the relations between the two countries, chiefly with respect to the Far Eastern war.

He says that in all that concerns the Far East these relations are growing much closer and more intimate than those between St. Petersburg and Paris. Germany, he says, has had opportunities which France has not enjoyed of rendering valuable services to Russia, and he adds:

"Certainly everything a most benevolent and elastic interpretation of neutrality could possibly allow has been done by Germany to help Russia in her hour of need."

The writer thinks the foundations of the rapprochement he speaks of were laid by the Emperor and that the understanding took definite shape at the time of the commercial negotiations Witte conducted with the German Chancellor in July.

German friendliness for Russia may be said to be based on the expectation that Russia eventually will triumph over Japan and be a great ruling power in the Far East, and thus be in a position to aid Germany in securing to her a free hand for carrying out her scheme of weltpolitik on the lines of least resistance in China, where she will come in contact only with British interests. The writer concludes:

"Official démentis no doubt will be issued to controvert this statement, but students of contemporary history have not forgotten that Germany already once before concluded a reinsurance treaty with Russia, of which the secret was for years preserved by the two contracting parties until the old German Chancellor, after his fall, revealed it for his own purposes.

"The importance of the new engagements between Berlin and St. Petersburg exceeds that of Bismarck's reinsurance treaty in the same measure and scope as William's weltpolitik exceeds that of old Bismarckian diplomacy, which mainly was confined to the European balance of power."

KUROPATKIN, FALLEN IDOL.

Discredited in Eyes of Public—Battle at Mukden Expected.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The continued delay in the receipt here of anything like a detailed official account either of the battle of Liao-Yang or of the present situation at the front is proving more irritating to the public of St. Petersburg than any previous phase of the war, and has given rise to numerous alarmist stories of the alleged precarious situation of Gen. Kuropatkin's army.

None of these stories, however, is traceable to any authentic source. The fact seems to be that military operations in the neighborhood of Mukden are almost suspended on account of the effect of the rains upon the roads.

There is no current news to record, while if Gen. Kuropatkin has transmitted any full account of the recent great battle it has not been allowed to circulate. The persistent silence is doing more than anything else to discredit the Russian Commander in Chief in the eyes of the public, with whom he has heretofore been an almost deified hero.

Apprehensive of China.

Reports that the Chinese are making preparations to occupy conquered territory are creating some uneasiness, for China has been all along an uncertain quantity from which any development or complication might be expected.

The logical belief always has been that China would endeavor to the utmost to refrain from taking sides in the present conflict in order that she might be in a position to make the best terms possible with the ultimate victor; but it is realized that a continued Japanese advance into the heart of Manchuria might exert a powerful influence upon both the Chinese peasantry and the near-by, ill-controlled regular troops, which the weak central Government at Peking might find it difficult to curb, thereby precipitating serious complications upon the scene of actual hostilities.

The authorities here are unanimously of the opinion that Gen. Kuropatkin will not withdraw from Mukden without accepting battle. It is expected that he will leave 50,000 men to defend Mukden while the remainder of his army retires to Tie Pass. It is believed that he has over 200,000 men. The General Staff said to-day that since the battle of Liao-Yang he had been reinforced by two army corps. It is supposed that the reinforcements of artillery amount to fully 300 guns.

The report persists, although there is nothing official to confirm it, that Gen. Kuropatkin has recommended the trial by court-martial of Major Gen. Orloff, upon whose failure to carry out his orders the unsuccess of Gen. Kuropatkin's plans against Gen. Kuroki at the most critical hour of the battle of Liao-Yang is attributed.

Czar Keenly Disappointed.

According to a statement made by a personage connected with the Emperor's surrounding, Kuropatkin had assured his Majesty of his ability to accept battle and defeat the Japanese at Liao-Yang, and for this reason the Emperor's disappointment is all the more keen and his dissatisfaction at the outcome all the greater.

The War Office denies the report circulated by The Morning Post of London yesterday to the effect that 3,000 men of Lieut. Gen. Sassulitch's Corps have been captured; also, the report from the same source that he has been wounded; also, the statement from Tokio that dumdum bullets were used by the Russians at Liao-Yang; also, that Gen. Linevitch has marched into Northeastern Korea from Vladivostok and cut Gen. Kuroki's communications with Feng-wang-Cheng, as reported in a dispatch from Tien-Tsin to The London Daily Mail.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Morning Post's correspondent at Shanghai hears that the calling out of a portion of the Japanese territorial army is imminent.

From Tokio the correspondent of The Standard telegraphs that the Chinese Government is becoming uneasy over the fate of Manchuria. An unconfirmed report, he says, is current that Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Assistant Foreign Minister, will [illegible]

HEAVY JAPANESE CASUALTIES.

Nearer 30,000 Than 17,000 Lost in Battle, Says Mr. Burleigh.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Bennet Burleigh, cabling from Tien-Tsin to The Daily Telegraph, insists that the Japanese casualties in the battle of Liao-Yang were nearer 30,000 than 17,000. Mr. Burleigh declares that there is no evidence that the Russians used dum-dum bullets.

The dispatch says: "The Japanese, who are bad horsemasters, have many thousands of animals foundered, terribly galled, and sored. Reinforcements both of men and horses, however, are being hastened northward. The Mikado's troops hold secretly but strongly all the districts to the north along the Liao River up to Sinmintin. I believe the Chunchuses are organizing for some important operations north of Mukden.

"Oyama was overheard to say at Liao-Yang that stubborn as Kuropatkin is, he must now be in a desperate condition and aware that his game will not do. Whatever corps Russia may mobilize, Japan can duplicate them with better troops put into the field more quickly."

Mr. Wallace, correspondent of a San Francisco newspaper, who has just recovered from a dangerous illness, complains of gross neglect at the hands of the Japanese army doctors. He says that it is part of a plan to be rid of all foreigners.

GREAT DROUGHT IN EUROPE.

Long-Lost Treasure Laid Bare in the Elbe—Mills and Factories Closed.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—A report to the American Board from the Rev. J. S. Porter, its missionary in Schemmel, Bohemia, states that the whole heart of Europe, particularly Bohemia and Moravia, is suffering from the most severe drought within the memory of any one living. Potatoes and many other crops are a failure. The sugar beet crops are so light that many sugar factories will not be opened this year. The price of flour has increased over 30 per cent.

Forest fires are of frequent occurrence.

The Elbe is so low that for six weeks no steamers have been able to move, and in many places one can wade across the river. Considerable long-lost treasure is being found in the river bottom. Near Bodenbach, in the Elbe a rock has been uncovered which bears the inscription in German, dating back to 1800: "When you see me then weep."

Mills and factories stand idle and thousands who usually find employment on all sorts of boats on the Elbe are now out of work.

HANS AN EQUINE WONDER.

German Scientific Commission Examines the Educated Horse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—A scientific commission which has been making a careful study of Hans, the educated horse, reports that the evidences he gave of comprehending handwriting, his musical and color discrimination, and mathematical work were performed under circumstances excluding the possibility of a trick.

Herr Bush, a member of the commission and a well-known authority on the training of horses, says the results obtained in the tests would be impossible by the usual drill methods.

The methods of the horse's owner, Herr von Osten, are pronounced to be those of a pedagogue rather than of an animal trainer.

MALARIAL FEVER IN PANAMA.

Newly Arrived Negroes Easy Victims—Colon's Population.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—A report received by the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service from Chief Sanitary Officer Gorgas, at Colon, says that the census of Colon now being computed will show a population of from 7,500 to 8,000. The population is steadily increasing owing to the arrivals of Jamaican and other West Indian negroes on every ship from Jamaica and the South and Central American coasts, although there will be no work for them perhaps for a year. The new-comers are found to be easy victims of malarial fever.

The report says that the permanent improvement of Colon will be an engineering feat of some magnitude—that at this season the greater part of the town is a morass, "to which is added the accumulation of rubbish and filth of a population utterly indifferent to ordinary cleanliness."

JAIL BREAKERS FRUSTRATED.

Baltimore Guard Attacked Chokes Assailant Into Insensibility.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13.—A daring attempt at jail breaking, in which three or more prisoners, headed by Roland B. Rigor, the Lakeside car bandit, were involved, occurred in this city to-day. When Jail Guard H. A. Le Cron went into a cell occupied by a prisoner named Harold Brewer, held on a charge of passing a bogus check, he was struck on the back of his head with a club in the hands of Rigor.

Le Cron, though partially stunned, grappled with his assailant, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in choking him into insensibility. In the meantime Brewer, who reached the yard and was making his way to the outer gate, was captured. He confessed that he and Rigor and another prisoner, Charles A. Eaton, had conspired to disable Guard Le Cron, take his pistol, lock him in a cell, and fight their way to freedom.

STRAYED, A CHURCH ORGAN.

Carnegie $1,500 Gift Lost Between Chicago and Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—A fifteen-hundred-dollar organ donated by Andrew Carnegie to the St. John's German Lutheran Church of Millvale has been lost somewhere between this city and Chicago. While half the congregation is looking for the missing musical instrument the other half got together to-day and announced that all arrangements for dedicating the new church were off until the organ is found.

Two weeks ago an Illinois firm shipped the organ from Peoria. It passed through Chicago safely, but then disappeared. No trace of it has been discovered.

POWERS ASKED TO STOP RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR

Inter-Parliamentary Union Urges Offer of Mediation.

APPEAL TO MR. ROOSEVELT

President Requested to Summon Second Session of Hague Conference—Called Champion of International Justice.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13.—The Inter-Parliamentary Union, whose mission to the United States is to advance the cause of peace and bring about, if possible, universal international arbitration, took up in earnest to-day the important matters before it. The session was held in the Hall of Congresses at the World's Fair.

The following telegram was sent to President Roosevelt:

The twelfth Inter-Parliamentary Congress, composed of representatives of fifteen parliaments, at the commencement of its deliberations sends its respectful and cordial salutations to the President of the great American Republic. It considers itself most fortunate to have the opportunity of holding its sessions in a country whose Chief Magistrate is considered by all the nations a champion of international justice.

RICHARD BARTHOLDT, President.
DR. GOBAT, Secretary.

Comte Goblet d'Alviella of Belgium presented this resolution calling for intervention in the Russo-Japanese war. It reads:

The Inter-Parliamentary conference, shocked by the horrors of the war that is being waged in the Far East between two civilized states, and deploring that the powers signatory of the convention of The Hague have been unable to have recourse to the clauses thereof, which direct them to tender their mediation immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities, asks the powers signatory of the convention of The Hague to intervene either jointly or separately with the belligerents in order to facilitate the restoration of peace, or instruct the Inter-Parliamentary bureau to bring the present resolution to the knowledge of said powers.

Comte d'Alviella, in presenting the resolution, used these words:

"I trust we shall render Russia a great favor in helping her out of her difficulties. As to Japan, I am one of those who have thought from the outset that the existence of a strong Japanese empire in the Far East may become a factor in the equilibrium of the world, provided this empire stands, not as a new factor of war, but as an element of peace and civilization."

In closing he urged that the President of the United States was quite the proper person to tender mediation. The resolution was adopted.

Congressman Burton of Cleveland presented a resolution asking President Roosevelt to call a second session of The Hague Conference. The resolution was enthusiastically adopted.

With the two important questions of the day disposed of, the real labors of the conference ended. There will be a final session to-morrow, however.

SEIZURE ON LA TOURAINE.

Twenty Bolts of Silk and 600 Cigars Discovered on Board.

The French Line steamship Touraine, which arrived here on Saturday, was thoroughly searched by special Treasury agents last night for goods intended to be smuggled ashore. Agents Hooley and O'Neill, who conducted the search, unearthed 20 bolts of fine silk and 600 cigars. Not satisfied that they have found everything, they will go over the ship again this morning. No one would claim the goods found last night.

The search was made primarily because two boxes containing $20,000 of imported gowns of which the Custom House had no record were found on the French Line pier. The find was an accident, and though the higher officials at the Custom House do not believe that any of the Inspectors are involved in the attempt to get the boxes ashore, an investigation will be made with the idea of securing a more strict and careful handling of the trunks of returning dressmakers.

BANDITS HOLD UP TRAIN.

Detach Engine and Escape—Men and Hounds After Them.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 13.—Five bandits effected a successful hold-up of a passenger train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway near Letts, Ia., early this morning. The safe was blown open and the contents taken. The officers say that the safe contained merchandise of some value, but no money.

Three special trains, on one of which are posses of railroad and express employes and a number of officers, were rushed to the scene of the robbery immediately upon receipt of the news. Mounted men with bloodhounds are now scouring the country for miles in every direction.

Rio Grande Still Rising.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 13.—Reports received here to-day from Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Laredo, Carrizo, and Rio Grande City, all situated on the Rio Grande, covering the course of that river for 500 miles, say that the flood is unprecedented. The report that only one house remains standing in Presidio del Norte is confirmed.

Many smaller Mexican settlements in the valley of the river in Texas and Mexico have been destroyed, but so far no reports of loss of life have been received.

Eleven Poisoned at Wake.

Special to The New York Times.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 13.—Eleven persons were poisoned at the wake of Peter H. Baxter, in Naugatuck on Saturday, and Miss Calesta Furri is dying to-day, while Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bunnell of Waterbury, Miss Margaret Daly and Austin Murphy of Naugatuck are critically ill. The others have not recovered from the effects.

They all ate catsup, and the following day a corps of physicians was summoned.

MILITIA OFFICERS TO BE TRIED.

Court-Martial for Five Who Failed to Stop Statesborough Lynchers.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 13.—Gov. Terrell has ordered the court-martial of all the State militia officers save one who were in command of the troops at Statesborough at the time the mob disarmed the militia and burned the negroes Reid and Cato.

The court-martial will take up the cases of Capt. Hitch, who was in command of all the troops, and of Lieuts. Melt, Griner, Morrison, and Cone. Lieut. McIntyre, the only officer who made any real resistance, and who was badly wounded while fighting the mob, was completely exonerated by the report of the board of inquiry.

The conclusion of the board is that the troops could have taken the prisoners from the mob, even after they left the Court House had vigorous efforts been used instead of no attempt at all.

The court-martial will begin in Savannah on Sept. 23. Col. Clifford L. Anderson of Atlanta, who commanded a Georgia regiment at Manassas, will preside.

EDITORS EVERYWHERE FOR TARIFF REFORM

726 Out of 812 for Revision of the Present Law.

LETTERS TO REFORM CLUB

Big Majority Would Cut Duties on Trust-Made Products Sold Cheap Abroad.

Believing that the tariff issue was never more important or pressing than at the present time, and that it should be vigorously urged during the pending campaign, the Tariff Committee of the Reform Club recently addressed a letter of inquiry to the editors of Democratic and independent newspapers throughout the Northern and Western States for the purpose of ascertaining the Democratic and independent consensus on this question.

This letter, inclosing question blanks, went to twenty-three States, and was sent out ten days ago. It should be mentioned that many newspapers classified as "independent" in the newspaper directory are really strongly partisan Republican newspapers, and this fact should be kept in mind when considering the answers.

Answers have so far been received from 812 editors and replies are still coming in at the rate of 10 to 15 daily. Put in tabular form the answers to the different questions are as follows:

1. Do you favor tariff revision? Yes, 726. No, 41. Doubtful, 45.

2. If so, to what extent? Thorough revision, 522. Doubtful, 164. Unanswered, 126.

3. Should raw materials be free? Yes, 529. In part, 66. Conditional, 36. Doubtful, 59. No, 38.

4. Should the tariff be greatly reduced on trust products sold cheaper to foreigners than to Americans? Yes, 713. Abolished entirely, 98. Doubtful, 33. No, 29.

5. Is it wise, in your opinion, to make tariff reform an issue in the present campaign? Yes, 591. Doubtful, 79. No, 77.

6. Should this committee decide to supply copy for special articles, showing the evils and abuses of our present tariff, would you care to have it sent to you? Yes, 630. Conditional, 19. Doubtful, 14. No, 100.

Many editors neglected to answer some of the questions. Nearly all who said "No" to the first four questions indicated by their answers that they were more Republican than independent in their politics.

Omitting the virtually Republican editors and the few who replied but did not make specific answers, the Democratic and independent editors of the country appear to be almost unanimously in favor of tariff reduction. Nearly all want to curb the trusts by greatly reducing or by abolishing duties on trust-made goods. About three-fourths of all favor free raw materials. Nearly all think the tariff should be an issue this year, and a large proportion of these think that it should be the paramount issue. Nearly all are anxious to obtain tariff reform articles for publication in their papers.

In the opinion of the Committee on Tariff Reform the demand for tariff revision was never stronger than at present. This demand is about equally strong in all States. The West, however, appears to favor more radical revision.

Below are specimen answers to some of the questions in some of the States:

MASSACHUSETTS.

Daily News, Springfield.—(1 and 2) Yes. Radically. (3) Yes, particularly in Massachusetts, where free raw materials would be of inestimable benefit.

Natick Review, Natick. (1) Yes. (2) Tariff for revenue only. No tariff on necessaries as far as possible. Make the luxuries pay the great burden if possible. (3) It is wise, in my opinion. Revision by the friends of revision, not by friends of the tariff.

South Boston Inquirer, Dorchester Sentinel. (4) Yes. (5) Yes, but reciprocity with Canada and the New England States particularly.

Weekly Calendar, Saugus.—(2) Free trade with all countries on the American Continent.

NEW YORK.

The Freeman's Journal, Cooperstown.—(1 and 2) Yes. As a general proposition the whole thing is a humbug. The people should be protected rather than the monopolies.

Warwick Valley Dispatch, Warwick.—(1 and 2) Yes. To a strictly revenue basis. (4) Removed altogether on all such products. (5) Decidedly so. I am a free-trader.

Poughkeepsie News-Press, Poughkeepsie. (1) Yes. (4) Yes. Only way to reach trusts. (5) By all means.

Yonkers Herald, Yonkers.—(1 and 2) Yes. For revenue only. (5) Yes, in so far especially as protection's fostering of the trusts is concerned.

The Batavia Times, Batavia.—(1 and 2) Yes. So an income tax will be needed. (4) Yes, on all trust products whether sold cheaper abroad or not. (5) It cannot be done under the present party leadership, but let's try.

Franklinville Journal, Franklinville.—(1 and 2) Yes. Favor revision so that articles made here will not be sold cheaper in foreign markets than here. (5) It should be one of the greatest issues.

Malone Farmer, Malone.—(1 and 2) No. I favor wiping out altogether the old relic of barbarism. Wipe it out, lock, stock, and barrel, and raise revenue by an income tax. (5) It is always wise to abolish all species of class legislation. Tariff is legalized robbery.

NEW JERSEY.

Record, Summit.—(1 and 2) Yes. To a point where the revenue will simply meet the ordinary expenses of the Government and allow for a very slight surplus. (4) On such articles the tariff should be eliminated entirely. (5) I consider it an issue on which the party could gain thousands of votes.

Warren Journal, Belvidere.—(1 and 2) Yes. To the extent of putting the trusts out of the wholesale robbing of the people. (4) Decidedly, yes.

The American, Trenton.—(2) To any extent needed to destroy the monopolies found under it. (4) Decidedly.

Twice-a-Week Clinton Democrat, Clinton. —(2) At every point where it encourages or covers trusts in any way. (5) Yes; decidedly.

Bergen County Democrat, Hackensack.—(1 and 2) Certainly. Every trust-made article to be put on free list.

MARYLAND.

Evening Capital, Annapolis.—(1 and 2) Yes. The fullest extent. (5) Yes, by all means, that the people may know exactly where we stand.

Maryland Journal, Towson.—(1 and 2) Strict tariff for revenue only. (4) Knock out the trusts which billet on the people. (5) Declare tariff reform from the house tops.

Times, Cumberland.—(1 and 2) Yes. On Mr. Gorman's idea of tariff for revenue only. (5) And follow the platform.

Citizen, Frederick.—(1 and 2) Yes. To the extent of a complete reformation of Congress at once. (5) Most certainly, for if we ever are to have it, the time is ripe now for education.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The West Virginia Argus, Kingwood.—(1 and 2) Yes. With an axe. Absolute free trade. (3) Yes, except on immigrants. (4) Yes; reduction to zero. It is the solution of the trust problem. (5) Yes.

Sentinel, Parkersburg.—(2) Complete elimination of every item, raw or manufactured, that is associated with trust products.

West Union Record, West Union.—(2) To a reasonable extent. Until it refuses to shelter the trusts. (4) Yes! Yes! We believe in American advantages for Americans. (5) Yes. The trusts have opened the eyes of the farmers on the subject.

INDIANA.

Crown Point Freie Presse, Crown Point.—(2) We believe in a tariff for the people and not the trusts. (4) Decidedly so. (5) It is not necessary to make tariff reform an issue, it is the issue. People demand it.

The Herald, Columbus.—(1) and (2) Take off all tariff on trust goods. Lower tariff on balance to revenue basis. (4) By all means. (5) One of the main issues, extravagance another. Roosevelt ism another.

Stacke County Democrat, Knox.—(1) and (2) Yes, by others than its beneficiaries. To the extent of making it a revenue measure only and removing "shelter for monopoly." (5) Yes, after and in connection with imperialism and Rooseveltism.

Winchester Democrat, Winchester.—(1) and (2) Yes, Sir. To the extent that it affords revenue only. (4) Any sensible man would certainly answer "Yes." There should be no other answer. (5) It in my opinion is the paramount issue of this campaign. It is the root of the trust evil.

Paoli News Paoli.—(1) and (2) I certainly am. On all necessities of life. (3) I think so, by all manner of means. (5) I certainly think it is. Have we not trusts enough? Do we want more?

Sun-Telegram, Richmond.—(1) and (2) To the extent of removing the tariff from those articles which are now controlled and monopolized by trusts in this country.

Times, Tipton.—(1) and (2) I do. Just enough revenue to defray the expenses of the National Government economically administered, without a cent for protection. (4) Most certainly. (5) Most assuredly in our locality. Lower taxes have always been a winner.

Pulaski County Democrat, Winamac.—(1) and (2) Yes. To the extent of protecting the people instead of the tariff barons. (4) Certainly.

Tribune, Rockville.—(1) and (2) Yes. Absolute free trade. (4) Yes; every article should be free from tariff taxation. (5) Yes. It is always wise to advocate the truth.

IOWA.

State Line Democrat, Keosauqua.—(1) and (2) I do emphatically. To a purely revenue basis. (3) Yes, and especially wool, and this immediate section of wool growing section. (4) It certainly should. (5) It is. It would be the strongest issue here, and do more to unite the party than any other.

Times-Journal, Oskaloosa.—(1) and (2) Yes. Abolition of the entire protective system—tariff for revenue only. (4) Wiped out entirely. (5) Now and ever until the policy of taxing one citizen for the benefit of another is entirely abolished.

News, Lamotte.—(1) and (2) Yes. To produce competition. (4) I would place all trust products on free list. (5) Yes, it's the only real issue, the others are "straw men."

Leader, Schleswig.—(1 and 2) Yes. To an extent just so raw materials used by our people—wool, coal, &c.—can be had cheaper. (4) Foreigners should not be able to buy trust made goods cheaper than we can in the United States. (5) Yes, and it should be the main issue.

Advocate Tribune, Indianola.—Until the consumers buy as cheap, at least, in some markets as foreigners buy in foreign markets. (3) Yes, all of them. (4) No trust made goods should have the benefit of government protection. (5) I think there is more real good to come from tariff agitation than any other question.

The Sioux City Tribune, Sioux City.—(2) To the extent that commerce and manufactures in this country may be enlarged. (4) Entirely removed on monopoly products.

Little Sioux Hustler, Little Sioux.—(1 and 2) Yes. To the extent that they do not afford a trust hotbed.

Globe-Post, Le Mars.—(1 and 2) Yes. To almost a revenue only basis. (4) Yes; or absolutely removed. (5) Yes; and push it strongly.

Enterprise, Kellogg.—(1) Yes. (4) Yes, or removed entirely. (5) Yes; especially here in the West.

Brighton Enterprise, Brighton.—(1 and 2) No. I am for absolute free trade and no monkey work.

Cascade Pioneer, Cascade.—(2) Believe in tariff for revenue only. (4) Yes. (5) I believe it should be made the paramount issue.

Daily Gazette, Burlington.—(1 and 2) We do. As far as possible. (4) Certainly. (5) Should be the principal one.

The Sun, Red Oak.—(1 and 2) Yes. Fullest possible. If practicable, no tariff at all; income tax in its place, when Supreme Court reverses itself. (4) Assuredly, but not at all likely to be. (5) Probably not, except as to trust feature, and that perhaps is not "safe and sane."

Whiting Reporter, Whiting.—(1 and 2) Yes. That the trusts will not have a monopoly of the American markets. (5) I believe so.

COLORADO.

The De Beque Eagle, De Beque.—(2) On those things particularly which are produced and controlled by combinations and trusts. (4) Yes. (5) Yes.

The Southern Miner, Trinidad.—(1 and 2) Yes. To the extent of curtailing the trust power. (4) Should be removed entirely.

The Lake City Phonograph, Lake City.—(1 and 2) Yes. To a basis of for revenue only. (4) Most certainly. This is one of the things on which we should be particularly strong, in my opinion.

NEBRASKA.

The Grand Island Democrat, Grand Island.—(1 and 2) Yes. Sufficient to remove any shelter given to any monopoly. (4) Yes. (5) Yes.

Chase Country Tribune, Imperial.—(4) Yes. Make free trade on such articles if necessary to curb the trusts. (5) I should think so.

Nebraska Tribune, Omaha.—(2) To prevent the tariff from being a shelter for trusts.

The Plattsmouth Journal, Plattsmouth.—(2) To the extent that the consumer can purchase American goods as cheap as they are bought in foreign lands. (5) Every day in the week and every hour in the day.

The News Record, Hub Bois.—(1) I believe in free trade and taxation, where a man may know where he is paying his money. I believe in an income tax, for the reason that the farmer is taxed on his income—the products of the farm—besides taxation on the farm. (5) People in this State are in a bad mood over the Republican revenue law, and many Republicans will vote the Fusion ticket in this State, but am afraid some Democrats will vote for Roosevelt.

Sherman County Times, Independent, Loup City.—(1 and 2) Yes. I am a free trader. (4) Most assuredly. (5) I think that it should always be made an issue.

The Sutton Register.—(2) On all trust-made goods constituting a monopoly. (4) Certainly. (5) Yes, it is the most important.

The News, Nebraska City.—Yes. To make it a tariff for revenue only. (4) Yes. (5) In my opinion it is the main issue before the people.

WISCONSIN.

The Courier, Prairie du Chien.—(1 and 2) Yes. For revenue only. (4) Yes. (5) Yes, by all manner of means. This is the main issue. It is encouraging to hear that your committee intend to do some work in the cause of tariff reform. With the reduction of high protective taxes the issue. Democrats are certain to carry the election. Go on with the good work. We will help you all we can. On the issue of tariff for revenue Wisconsin will go Democratic.

Darlington Democrat.—(1) Yes, strongly. (4) It should be taken off entirely. (5) It will be wise in this locality, and, in my opinion, it will make a good country-wide issue for the Democratic Party.

Norwalk Star, Norwalk.—(2) On all trust-made articles and on everything manufactured in Canada. (4) Yes, taken off entirely. (5) Yes, the progressive Republicans advise a "reformation." Why not take advantage of this sentiment?

Dispatch, Waukesha.—(1 and 2) Yes. So that monopolies on trust-made articles may be reduced to a minimum and powers of trusts materially curtailed.

The Kickapoo Chief, Wauzeka.—(1) Yes. (2) As far as is necessary to bring relief from the protected trusts. (3) For educational purposes, yes.

JUDGE PARKER COMING TO NEW YORK TO-MORROW

Will Meet Mr. Davis, Senator Gorman, and Other Leaders.

TO STAY IN TOWN A DAY

Letter of Acceptance Will Be Issued Probably Not Later Than Middle of Next Week—Visitors at Rosemount.

Special to The New York Times.

ROSEMOUNT, Esopus, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Judge Parker will go to New York on Thursday and expects to return on Friday. No announcement has been made, however, as to his particular purpose in going, nor his arrangements for the trip.

There is no doubt, though, that he shall confer with Vice Presidential Candidate Davis, Senator Gorman, Chairman Taggart, and other leaders, who may be in the city, but the place of meeting has not been announced. This trip will be Judge Parker's first political expedition to New York since his nomination.

No announcement has been made as to when Judge Parker's letter of acceptance will be issued, but the candidate and his official aides are working hard on the document, and it will be made public probably not later than the middle of next week.

Congressman Henry T. Rainey of the Twentieth Illinois District was the first caller to-day. The Congressman has been renominated and his election is conceded. He told Judge Parker that the Harrison and Hopkins factions now were working in harmony.

John Cadwallader of Philadelphia and George W. Guthrie of Pittsburg, both lawyers, came to Esopus to-day and offered Judge Parker their support. A deleration representing the Parker clubs at Lawrence and Cedarhurst, L. I., also called on the candidate.

Results of the Maine election are gratifying to the candidate and his political friends who visited Rosemount to-day. Judge Parker has not discussed the election nor commented for publication on the returns, but those who have talked with him say that he is greatly pleased at the largely increased Democratic vote, and feels that there was a sentiment displayed there which may be expected to develop throughout the country and show in more material form in doubtful States.

It will probably be decided to-morrow whether Judge Parker is to take the stump this Fall, and, if he does, just where and when he is to make addresses. When Judge Parker arrives here to-morrow he will find all of the big party leaders ready to confer with him on that and other questions.

Daniel McConville, who is in charge of the speakers' bureau, said last night that Judge Parker would take the stump. Among the other prominent Democrats who will make addresses, according to his announcement, are ex-President Cleveland, William J. Bryan, John G. Carlisle, Richard Olney, Gen. Miles, and a long list of Senators.

Leaders at Democratic Headquarters yesterday expressed themselves as very well pleased with the latest returns from Maine.

Mr. Davis, the Vice Presidential nominee, had a long conference yesterday with Senator Gorman, and made an initial draft of his letter of acceptance. He said that Judge Parker's letter would be given out on Monday next and that his would follow a week later. Mr. Belmont, Mr. Sheehan, and Chairman Taggart also talked with Mr. Davis and Senator Gorman.

The German bureau, recently established by the Democratic National Committee, with Herman Ridder in charge, will begin active work to-day. Rooms have been assigned to the bureau on the fourth floor of the Century Building. The organization which will have charge of the work will be known as the German-American Parker Union. Carl Schurz will be the President and Herman Ridder will be the active campaign manager.

It is the intention of the organization to work in all sections of the United States where there is a large German population.

BANKERS CHANGE TO PARKER.

Republican Poll Suits the Opposition Chairman Very Well.

The Republican National Committee yesterday issued a statement in which it was said that its representatives had interviewed 160 bankers now here for the convention of the American Bankers' Association, and that 114 were for Roosevelt and 46 for Parker.

"I consider that a rattling good campaign argument for our side, even conceding that the poll was an impartial one," said Democratic Chairman Taggart, when he learned of the result, "and I believe we will use it in some way. During the last two Presidential campaigns you could have gone over the country with a fine-tooth comb and not found a banker who favored the Democratic ticket.

"Now, the Republicans conceded that over 25 per cent. of them are on our side. That shows a rather decided switch of opinion. It seems, too, that the Republican agents carefully avoided taking a poll of the Southern bankers, and it looks as if they stopped as soon as the Democratic tendency manifested itself. But we are quite satisfied with the result, even on their own showing."

HARROUN CONFESSES FORGERY

St. Joseph Grain Dealer Wants Creditors to Let Him Resume Business.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 13.—William S. Harroun, the St. Joseph grain dealer, who secured from the banks nearly $1,000,000 on bills of lading purporting to represent thousands of cars of grain, faced a committee of his creditors to-day and calmly announced that he was willing to stand the consequences of a criminal prosecution.

He said that if the creditors would bear with him and not prosecute he felt certain he could settle the unsecured claims by a payment of 40 cents on the dollar, and then if his creditors would accept this amount as a partial settlement of their claims and allow him to resume business he might be able to increase the dividend to 40 or 50 cents, and eventually discharge the entire amount of his obligations.

Harroun frankly confesses to forging the names of railroad officials and others on fictitious bills of lading, and says his only regret is that he did not duplicate genuine bills of lading, in which he insists he would not have been detected.

CROWD CHEERS MR. TOWNE.

Commercial Men Applaud Attack on Roosevelt and Message.

There was a big crowd at the noonday Davis Commercial Travelers' League to hear ex-Senator Charles A. Towne speak. The audience applauded vigorously Mr. Towne's attack on President Roosevelt.

"The President's letter of acceptance," he said, "was a mere paean of praise for himself, taking the credit for all God's sunshine, the beneficent rain, and all the kindly acts of Providence. In the meantime, his convenient memory forgets the panics that have occurred while the Republican tariff law, which they dare not repeal, has been in force.

"How do the men who fled from the militarism of the Old World hoping for lighter taxes in this, like the figures of a budget that calls for $7,000,000 more expenditures than the entire military budget of Great Britain? Such official extravagance leads to official corruption, and the latter is the inevitable concomitant of official extravagance. The Post Office Department is only an instance of what would be found in other departments if the right kind of a party probe shall be inserted by the will of the voters at the election next November.

"We want a man who will not be continually looking for an opportunity for self-advertisement; rather we want a man ingrained with respect for the Constitution. Such a man the Democratic Party has nominated in Judge Parker."

Elaborate Pushcart Raid.

Fifth Avenue was treated to a new kind of parade yesterday afternoon. It was headed by mounted police, but the line proper was composed of twenty-five pushcart peddlers, who marched two abreast from Fourteenth Street to Thirtieth Street on Fifth Avenue, and then turned west through Thirtieth Street to the police station, where they were locked up on a charge of violating the corporation ordinance.

DENOUNCED BY EXTRA SESSION HE CALLED

Rhode Island Governor Condemned by Legislative Resolution.

HIS REFORM BILLS IGNORED

Stormy Session One Day Long—Garvin Summoned It to Break Up "Rotten Borough" System.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 13.—The State General Assembly, summoned in extraordinary session by Gov. Garvin to pass some reform measures, met to-day, and after a stormy and exciting afternoon frustrated his purpose by adjourning and issuing resolutions condemning him for calling the extra session.

The session was called for the purpose of passing several measures favored by the Democratic leaders to break the grip of the Brayton Republican machine upon the State.

Despite the Republican majority, the Democrats had one advantage. Gov. Garvin is the presiding official of the Upper House, with the power of recognition.

The Governor's message announced as the object of the session the passage of the following bills:

An amendment to the Constitution establishing the initiative and referendum. It provides that 5,000 voters may by petition propose an amendment to the Constitution, which must be voted upon at the next election. If this measure were passed it would enable the submission of an amendment which would do away with the present system of representation, which the Democrats say is a "rotten borough" system and throttles the popular will.

An amendment giving registry voters the right to vote in the election of city councils. Gov. Garvin says that three-fifths of the voters in cities are denied the right to vote for those officials who are nearest them.

An amendment providing that the Governor's vote may be overridden only by a majority in each house.

A bill strengthening the laws against bribery.

The fight began promptly in the Senate. After a committee report had been read Senator Stiness, the Republican leader, made a motion to adjourn, which was declared out of order by the Chair.

A roll call was then taken and the motion to adjourn was declared in order by an almost strict party vote. Thereupon there commenced a battle over the matter of adjournment, and appeals from decisions of the Chair, resolutions to adjourn, and counter resolutions followed each other in rapid succession.

The resolution condemning the action of the Governor in calling the extra session, and calling for an adjournment until Nov. 15 was introduced by Senator Stiness, but the debate was carried on almost entirely by the Democratic members, as the Governor failed to recognize most of the Republicans. Senator Stiness was continually on his feet raising points of order, all of which were promptly overruled. The resolution was finally adopted.

The concurrent action of the House on the resolution brought the session to a close.

LABOR DAY MAN DEAD.

Price, Who Suggested Holiday, Passes Away in Obscurity.

HELENA, Mon., Sept. 13.—Robert Price, who first suggested the celebration of Labor Day, died recently in his poorly furnished home on the outskirts of this city. The funeral was plain and slimly attended.

"Shouting Bob," as he was called because of his habit of saying "Amen!" during a sermon, came from Wales and worked for a long time in the Pennsylvania coal fields. Years ago he was a delegate to a labor convention in New York over which Grand Master Powderly presided. He made a speech which evoked remarkable enthusiasm and concluded:

"I move you, Mr. Chairman, that it be the unanimous decision of this convention that hereafter one day of the year shall be set aside, and on that day labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

For many years before his death he lived in poverty and obscurity.

Popular Raincoats For Men

We have a very handsome collection of Cravenette Raincoats for men, at prices ranging from $15 to $35; but we have found that the preference goes to the two particular styles told of below:

First is the $15 raincoat of dark Oxford mixed worsted cravenetted by Priestley & Co. The coats are made with broad shoulders and graceful hanging backs in the handsomest manner. The length is fifty-two inches. It is the best all-round Fall overcoat that we know of at the price.

The other variety, which is even more popular than the $15 coat, is the $25 raincoat, made of genuine imported Priestley Cravenette, the shoulders and sleeves lined with silk. They are coats such as your custom tailor would probably make you at double the price. These have finely tailored shoulders, fit and hang perfectly, and are thoroughly made at every point. The price is $25.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Men's Shirts Of Imported Percales At $1.50

This collection of smart Shirts for Men has been made in our own factory. The percales are imported, and are of the quality which we make to order for $3. The patterns are neat and refined; including black-and-white and blue-and-white stripes, and black dots; the very designs that carefully dressed men always prefer.

The Shirts are made in the very best manner, from good-fitting models, all with detachable cuffs, all handsomely laundered.

The price is $1.50.

Smart New Suits For Boys

The Rodman is a new suit of original design just brought out this season. It is entirely different from the regular suits made for boys in the past. It is not a Norfolk jacket suit by any means, although it has a belt stitched fast to the coat; but instead of the Norfolk straps, it has a yoke over the shoulders, below which are three lapped, stitched pieces of cloth, on each side, both back and front. The coat has a pocket on each side. It is smartly tailored, and one of the handsomest effects yet shown for boys of ten to sixteen years. Bloomer knee trousers. Materials are two attractive shades of mixed cheviot. Price, $6.50 a suit.

Double-breasted Eton collar Sailor Suits are more popular this year than ever, made of fancy cheviot, in sizes from five to twelve years. Price, $6.75 a suit.

Bloomer Trousers of all-wool mixed cheviot, in sizes from six to sixteen years, at $1.50.

Early Readiness in Women's GOWNS and WRAPS

These crisp early days of September have brought in the goods much more rapidly than in past seasons. A month ago, those who read the signs, told us that we were to have an early Fall. This time their predictions have been true, and women universally are anxiously seeking Autumn apparel.

Our Costume floor is already as full as if it were the middle of the season.

More than a month ago the manufacturers had our advices, as to what we wanted for the new season. We told them just how the new sleeves were to be made: we told them the proper lengths for the coats; the correct finish and cut for the skirts; and today Paris verifies our early information. The manufacturers thank us for so truly forecasting the trend of style.

Today we have ready a comprehensive display of Coats and Wraps. The chief novelty in fabrics is the Crushed Plush, which is shown in so many different and beautiful effects. It is seen in carriage and evening wraps, in blouse and three-quarter length coats, ranging in price from $60 to $135.

A beautiful group of evening wraps is composed of the white and pastel shades in smooth cloths. They are in three-quarter and seven-eighths lengths, and many are most exquisitely trimmed. The prices range from $53 to $200.

Another distinguished group is composed of black cloth and silk coats, elegant, yet most practical. They are priced from $65 to $225.

The Dresses in today's showing are entirely American made, but every touch and trimming speaks of Paris. Many of the fabrics and trimmings are such as can only be found abroad, and are imported especially for making these gowns.

The most beautiful group is composed of striking gowns of crepe de chine, lace, chiffon, velvet, taffeta, voiles and plain cloths. They show trimmings of lace, taffeta silks, and chenille. They present all varieties of the new sleeve, high girdles, and full skirts. Prices range from $48 to $300.

Smart Walking Suits compose another important group. They are made of tweeds, cheviots, broadcloths, camel's-hair and sharkskin fabrics. They are made with blouse, tight-fitting or three-quarter length tourist coats. The skirts are gored and plaited. The prices range from $16 to $60.

There is a superb collection of dress skirts made of crepe de Chine, taffeta silk, broadcloth, sharkskin, and cheviot. Some are lined with silk, and others are unlined. The prices range from $6 to $30.

The Walking Skirts are in almost unlimited variety, made of canvas weave cheviot, sharkskin, broadcloth and tweeds. The prices are from $6 to $13.50.

Second floor, Broadway.

"Living Up to Your Blue China"

There is a lot more than mere sense of possession to be gotten out of having attractive house-furnishings. Every family owes it to itself to indulge in the best things, most tastefully chosen, that its income will allow—the elevating influence of such inanimate things as pretty china, dainty silver, fine linens, good pictures, is none the less potent because not always recognized. Hence this

September Sale of Glass and China

The New Imported Broadcloths

The arrival of the new foreign broadcloths is a matter of interest to all women who have tailor-made gowns in view.

One group is composed of the finest broadcloths made in France. They are celebrated all over the world. Nothing better has been or can be made so far as present knowledge of weaving has advanced.

This is a cloth that is regularly sold at 50c to 75c more than our price, which is $3 a yard. We show a complete color-range from light tan shade to black. There are over fifty colorings in the collection.

Another important line is the German broadcloth at $2 a yard.

This is a most serviceable and finely woven cloth, which the French cloth excels chiefly in the finish. It tailors handsomely and wears as well as any broadcloth can. It is in forty different shades, including black, at $2 a yard. Tenth street.

Dressmakers' Notion Sale

The profit made by securing them is not at the expense of the wearer of the dress.

Today We Present Our Largest and Best Offering Of Used Pianos And Angelus Piano Players

Since the beginning of our great success with these periodical sales of Used Pianos, all of which came into our hands through legitimate channels, there have been constant offerings elsewhere, which would make it seem that every month of the year was full of opportunities of this kind.

Those who are familiar with the WANAMAKER custom, know that there are only three or four of these sales during the year, and that they are simply the result of the natural accumulation of Pianos taken in exchange for our fine new instruments.

In the character of the instruments offered during one of these sales, no other movement of the kind approaches it.

Our lack of storage space, as well as our desire to hurry away quickly these instruments, that we take to accommodate the purchasers of our new pianos, rather than for profit to ourselves, make us mark these at extremely low prices.

In addition to the pianos that are strictly second-hand, the collection includes a large number of instruments that have been rented a few months, which after being tuned and otherwise fixed up in our repair shops, are practically new. We also include in this lot some sample instruments on our floor, which are not in perfect condition.

The present offering is one of the very finest and largest we have ever presented. By actual count there are two hundred and seventeen instruments offered tomorrow, of which one hundred and thirty-one are Grand, Upright and Square Pianos; seventy-five are Angelus Piano Players, which were earlier models, which have been gone over at the factory, and brought as nearly up to date as the cases will allow, and are now offered at just one half the regular price.

The last group is a collection of eleven organs, of which eight are from the celebrated Mason & Hamlin Factory. This is one of the best offerings of Mason & Hamlin Organs that have been made in recent years.

This splendid collection of goods will be on sale when the store opens this morning. Those who are the most prompt will naturally get such selection as has never been known in under-price pianos before. However, the collection is so great, that the sale will probably continue several days.

Any of these instruments may be bought on the easy payment plan—a small cash payment, and easy monthly payments afterward.

DEMOCRATS DISCUSS JEROME FOR GOVERNOR

ExSenator Hill in Town to Consult Leaders Here.

MURPHY WOULD BE IN LINE

Conference May Take Up State Slate—Effect of a Whirlwind Campaign Considered.

The name of William Travers Jerome figured more prominently in the gossip about the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination yesterday than at any time since his boom was launched. There were those in the councils of the party and high enough to give their views weight who expressed the positive opinion that the District Attorney would be the nominee next week and that ex-Senator Hill's long talk with Judge Parker at Esopus on Monday contained not a little that had to do with Jerome's nomination.

Mr. Hill arrived in this city late last night, but he was inaccessible and saw none of the leaders before returning. He will consult with them to-day, when it is believed that a State slate may be fixed up. It is possible, too, that Mr. Hill may see District Attorney Jerome.

Charles F. Murphy was asked yesterday about reports that he had said he would oppose Mr. Jerome's nomination and would not support him.

"I never said anything of the kind," said Mr. Murphy.

"Is that to be construed that you favor Jerome for Governor?" he was asked.

"If Jerome is nominated, he will receive the loyal support of Tammany Hall," was the reply. "We will work just as hard for him as we would for any candidate that the convention nominated. Tammany has no candidate of its own. It will support the man nominated by the party at Saratoga."

"Do you favor a plank in the platform calling for the repeal of the Raines law?" he was asked.

"Of course I do," said Murphy, after staring hard at his questioner. "Ask me something harder."

A prominent member of the Democratic Committee said that while he would be somewhat surprised if Mr. Hill should declare for Jerome, for reasons which might easily be guessed, yet, on the other hand, there were good reasons why Jerome would make a good candidate.

"There is no getting away from the fact that if Jerome adopted the same tactics as when he ran for District Attorney," said this man, "the campaign would get an infusion of ginger that it is badly in need of. When Jerome ran for District Attorney in the Low campaign every one of the wiseacres thought he would just about pull through, when, as a matter of fact, he ran away ahead of his ticket.

"With a whirlwind campaign like that it is not far from a certainty that Jerome could make the State safely Democratic for the whole ticket. He is popular up the State, and would get loyal support here. In the final figuring on nominees it wouldn't be well for a good guesser to leave Mr. Jerome out of the calculations."

So far as developed yesterday, the only wing of Tammany Hall that is opposed to Mr. Jerome is the Sullivan clique. Timothy D. stated several days ago that it would be political suicide to nominate the District Attorney. He refused, yesterday, however, to make any comment on the growth of the Jerome boom.

O. H. PLATT ON CLEVELAND.

Better and Worse Than His Party, He Tells Connecticut Convention.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 13.—In a speech defending the Republican Administration, Senator Orville H. Platt, as temporary Chairman, awakened much enthusiasm at the opening of the Republican State Convention in the Auditorium to-night.

The indications to-night were that Lieut. Gov. Henry Roberts will be nominated to-morrow for Governor on the first ballot. For the second place Col. Rollin S. Woodruff of New Haven will be named.

Senator Platt said in part:

"Benjamin Harrison in his last annual message called attention to the fact that the Nation had reached the high water mark of prosperity. During Democratic Administration it reached the low water mark of adversity.

"That even lower depths of uncertainty, want, and loss were not reached, we freely attribute to the fact that its President was better than his party in all respects but one. The Democratic Party was imbued with the most vicious radicalism. Grover Cleveland, with all his faults, was conservative. In his unreasoning devotion to the fallacy of free trade, he was worse than his party.

Ackerman for Mayor.

FATHER KILLED, SON STOLEN.

Bulgarian "Black Hand" Reaches Across the Atlantic.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Sept. 13.—The Pittsburg police have discovered that Basile Stephanon, the son of a well-to-do Bulgarian of Robson, W. Va., was kidnapped here Sept. 2. The child is now thought to be on its way to Bulgaria and the oath of the "black hand" society was fulfilled when Demetrius Stephanon was murdered at Robson, W. Va., on Saturday.

Stephanon reached America six months ago with his little son and told the Pittsburg police that he was a marked man and that his political enemies had sworn to kill him and kidnap his son. He begged the police to keep an eye over the lad and, hiding him here, he went to West Virginia.

On hearing of the mysterious murder of the father at Robson Superintendent of Detectives McQuaide started to hunt up the little fellow and found that the child had been taken away by some stranger.

ODELL AND PLATT IN A BITTER WAR

candidate as "Odell's Man," believing that so labeled he would stand little show of election. In Gov. Odell's failure to elect his candidate, it was said by those inclining to this view, Platt would find solace for the humiliation to which he had been subjected by Gov. Odell when the Governor wrested the leadership from him. Others took the view that the Senator would give in if the Governor was willing to pay the price of peace."

The determination of Woodruff to make a fight against what appeared to be overwhelming odds was inexplicable to the Odell men.

As they saw the situation, he was throwing all of his chances for the future to the winds, with absolutely no chance of winning out in the present fight.

Col. George W. Dunn and J. Sloat Fassett were the men who were suspected by the Odell men of having induced the Senator to stand out against the Odell programme. Lemuel E. Quigg, who has been an ardent advocate of Woodruff's nomination all along, was of the opinion that Senator Platt had made a mistake, and undertook to-night to argue him out of his determination not to abide by a decision of a conference.

There was a meeting of State leaders to-night in Gov. Odell's cottage. Among those attending were ex-Gov. Black, Francis Hendricks, Louis F. Payn, George W. Aldridge, William Halpin, and Lemuel E. Quigg. There were about fifteen leaders in all in the conference, and they represented more than two-thirds of the convention.

They decided that they would support Higgins for Governor and Julius M. Mayer of New York County for Attorney General. Whatever doubt there may have been about the certainty of the nomination of Higgins was entirely dispelled when the action of the conference became known. The decision of the leaders to support Mayer for Attorney General as well as Higgins for Governor created enthusiasm among the New York delegation.

The Odell men are saying to-night that the probable nominee for Lieutenant Governor will be Mayor Erastus C. Knight of Buffalo. There was some talk for a while of offering the nomination to Kings County, but a tentative suggestion thrown out in that direction was received with such a show of ill-humor by the Woodruff men that the idea of trying to conciliate the Brooklynites was abandoned, at least for the time, and Mayor Knight taken up.

Erie and Cattaraugus are in close proximity and some thought that the taking of both the nominee for Governor and Lieutenant Governor from the same section would be bad policy. That argument apparently did not carry much weight with the Odell men, and Knight is their favorite to-night.

Fassett and Malby Chairmen.

Friends of Mr. Woodruff, when asked to-night whether Kings County would take the nomination for Lieutenant Governor if it should be offered, replied that Kings County had but one desire, and that was to vote in the convention for Mr. Woodruff's nomination for Governor. That, they said, it was their unalterable purpose to do.

There was a meeting of the State Committee this evening. J. Sloat Fassett was named for Temporary Chairman of the convention. The selection of Mr. Fassett for Temporary Chairman and Senator George Malby for Permanent Chairman was agreed upon some time ago.

Mr. Fassett gave out his speech to the press to-night. Its length is such that it will take him fully two hours to deliver it, and when he told some of his friends that he had not had time to memorize it and therefore would have to read it, the suggestion was made by one of them that the best thing he could do would be to throw away the prepared manuscript and just give the convention "a plain talk."

The contest in the Nineteenth New York District was decided to-night by the State Committee in favor of the Gilman-Quigg delegation, and the contest in the Twenty-Fifth District in favor of the Parsons delegation.

Mayer New York's Choice.

Julius M. Mayer, ex-Judge of the New York Court of Special Sessions, will be presented to the convention as the unanimous choice of the New York County delegation for the nomination for Attorney General. This was decided upon this afternoon at a meeting of the New York County Executive Committee, composed of various district leaders, and was indorsed to-night on the arrival of the Manhattan and Bronx delegation, when a bigger meeting was held and the Mayer boom formally taken up.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee held this afternoon all shades of opinion among the leaders were for Mayer. Up to that time it had been expected that some of the districts would support M. Linn Bruce or Job Hedges for the place, but their names were dropped when the leaders gathered, and Platt men and Odell men alike in the delegation spoke for Mayer and agreed to stand by him for Attorney General, no matter how they might differ in regard to the Governorship, or any other place on the ticket. This stand, it is felt here to-night, indicates that Mayer will be the nominee of the convention for the place.

For the Odell dominant wing of the party William Halpin made a speech in the meeting in favor of nominating Mayer, and he was supported by ex-Congressman Lemuel Ely Quigg, Postmaster Cornelius Van Cott, Charles H. Murray, William H. Wadhams, and Tax Commissioner Samuel Strasbourger. It then was formally agreed to place Mayer in nomination as New York's candidate and to work in his behalf from now until the nomination is made.

The taking up formally of the Mayer candidacy by the New York delegation and the approval that is being shown to the candidacy of John M. Cordes of Kingston for State Treasurer, because he comes from Ulster County, which is the home of Judge Parker, has done much to settle the entire slate.

For Secretary of State John F. O'Brien of Clinton probably will be renominated without opposition, as will be Controller Otto Kelsey of Livingston for his present place. The present State Engineer and Surveyor, Henry A. Van Alstyne of Columbia, also is assured of a renomination.

All Was Lovely Monday Night.

When Gov. Odell went to bed last night he was serenely confident he was the absolute master of the situation, and could nominate whomsoever he pleased. He had heard from sixty of the sixty-two delegates, and the leaders of fifty-four of the sixty had given him their assurance that they would be for Higgins or for Hendricks, as he preferred.

The inclination of the Governor-Chairman was for Higgins. The serious consideration of Mr. Hendricks's name was due to the fact that some of the Governor's friends and advisers had declared to him that it was their belief that Hendricks would be a better man to nominate than Higgins for the reason that Hendricks, in their opinion, was a man who knew his mind better than Higgins did, and was to be relied upon in a troublesome situation.

Higgins, they said, was a man who was highly sensitive to criticism. If he were elected Governor, and any policy which the organization favored was subjected to assault, they were inclined to think he would waver.

Hendricks, it was argued, was a man of determination; a man who would make up his mind what was the best policy for the party, and, having made up his mind, could be trusted to act upon his decision, regardless of what anybody might say about his action. As indicating the difference in the temperaments of the two men, the following incident was recalled, which, it was thought, would forcibly appeal to Gov. Odell.

Higgins Dodged the Conference.

When Senator Platt was made anxious about his hold in the organization, owing to the information which had come to him of the growing influence of Gov. Odell, he called a conference of his followers to meet at the Fifth Avenue Hotel one Saturday afternoon. Among those who were invited to the conference were Lieut-Gov. Higgins and Francis Hendricks.

Higgins, who had always been recognized as more a Platt man than an Odell man, stayed away from the conference. He realized that the differences between the Senator and the Governor had reached the acute stage, and that either one or the other of them must be declared absolute leader.

It was decidedly uncertain at that time which one of them would triumph, and so Mr. Higgins concluded to remain neutral. Later he went to see Senator Platt and told the Senator that he was mistaken in thinking Gov. Odell had any serious designs to undermine his influence in the Republican organization.

The attitude of Gov. Odell toward Senator Platt at that time, as Mr. Higgins explained it to the Senator, was that of a son toward a father. Gov. Odell, he told the Senator, had the greatest affection for his patron, and would do nothing to hurt him, but at the same time he felt that the Senator's condition of health did not permit him to give the attention to the details of the organization which their importance demanded, and it was for that reason alone that he had forced himself to the front.

Gov. Odell, Mr. Higgins said, would always look to the Senator as the wise counselor of the party. The Governor's desire was to lessen the Senator's responsibility, not his influence.

Hendricks's Course Different.

The pacific words of Mr. Higgins had weight with Senator Platt. But the friends of the Senator took the view that Higgins was trying to carry water on both shoulders.

The course of Hendricks, it was recalled to the Governor last night, was more manly. Like Higgins, he had been a friend of Senator Platt's, but being convinced that the Senator was no longer equal to the burden of active party leadership, he went to the conference called by Senator Platt and boldly expressed that opinion.

"You are wrong, and Gov. Odell is right," were his words to the assembled Platt men. "The Senator is too feeble to longer bear the strain of actively directing the party organization.

"Regard for the interests of the organization and kindness toward him both demand that we should find stronger shoulders on which to lay the burden. Gov. Odell is the man to undertake the task. He has both the vigor and the capacity."

Senator Platt and his friends did not agree with Hendricks, but they did not admire him any the less for his courage in boldly stating his conviction.

It was for such reasons that some of the most important subordinate leaders in the organization urged Gov. Odell yesterday to accept Hendricks as the candidate in place of Higgins. That was how the Hendricks boom started, and it can be said of the best of authority that when Gov. Odell retired last night his mind was not definitely made up as to whom he could cast his influence for, Higgins or Hendricks.

Storm Signals in the Morning.

He was disposed to favor Higgins, but if he could have secured an agreement with Senator Platt on Hendricks he would have done it in a moment. It was because he thought that probably the situation would resolve itself in such a way that the selection of Hendricks would appear a compromise that the Governor told his friends last night they must not lose sight of Hendricks as a probable nominee.

Hendricks was not courting the nomination. On his return yesterday from Albany, where he conferred with Mr. Higgins, he announced that he was not a candidate and desired to see Mr. Higgins nominated. He called upon Gov. Odell last evening to deprecate the mention of his name.

When the leaders and delegates arose this morning and after breakfast wandered out upon the broad piazzas of the United States Hotel to quietly bask in the sunshine of a perfect day they soon made the interesting discovery that the political horizon was not as cloudless as the Saratoga sky. Evidently the wind had veered sharply during the early hours of the morning, and clouded countenance in the vicinity of Gov. Odell and Senator Platt portended the storm which was to come.

"It's all up in the air," was the cyclonic information that was being passed around. When some more important delegates were pressed for details they said that as a result of certain things which had occurred it was at the time they spoke extremely doubtful whether Higgins or Hendricks would be nominated. There was a strong probability of a new man, they said.

For a time there was much mystery as to what had caused the sudden change in the political barometer. It was clear that it could not have been due to any great developments of strength of the Woodruff boom, for it was acknowledged by Michael J. Dady that on a test vote they could not rely on the support of more than nine counties. This was but three more than the Odell estimate allowed them.

Higgins Learns of His Popularity.

It was not until after the arrival of Lieut. Gov. Higgins from Albany on the 11:25 train that the mystery was cleared up. Mr. Higgins went straight from the railroad station to the cottage of Senator Platt.

He remained for about twenty minutes, and then went to Gov. Odell's cottage. As Mr. Higgins, who a few days ago said he would not accept the nomination as the candidate of a faction, left the rooms of the Governor he said:

"Since my arrival in Saratoga I have learned that a majority of the delegates to the convention favor my nomination for Governor. I shall therefore allow my name to go before the convention.

"I shall not open any headquarters or conduct any campaign for the nomination. I am informed that a majority of the delegates would favor my nomination, irrespective of either Gov. Odell or Senator Platt.

"I shall not be the candidate of any man or of any faction. If I am nominated it will be because a majority of the delegates to the convention, expressing their own sentiment, feel that I am the man they desire as their candidate."

In view of the fact that Mr. Higgins made this statement immediately after he had consulted with Gov. Odell and Senator Platt and before he had time to consult with any of the leaders of the various counties, it was clear that his information that he was the choice of the majority of the delegates came from Gov. Odell, Senator Platt still remaining firm in his support of Woodruff.

Platt Upsets Plan for Conference.

No sooner had Mr. Higgins left Mr. Odell than the Governor came out of his rooms and went to Senator Platt's cottage, which adjoins his own. They were together for some time. When the Governor left his frowning countenance suggested at once that something had gone seriously wrong. When inquiry was made of him as to what had occurred between him and the Senator he confirmed that impression.

"The old man," he said, "says that he doesn't want any conference, so it's all off."

"What will be done?"

"I don't know yet."

"You stand where you did last night, do you not, in favor of Higgins, but willing to accept Hendricks as a compromise."

"Yes; I will stand for anything reasonable, but I won't be driven."

"Then there is to be a fight in the convention?"

"It looks that way now."

When Senator Platt was asked if it was true that he had refused to have a conference of leaders to agree upon a candidate he said:

"Yes, that's true; I don't want any conference. I am for Woodruff, and I think he is the strongest man that can be nominated."

Woodruff Men Profess Surprise.

Michael J. Dady, William Berri, and Harry Ralston, who are the chief Woodruff boomers, either were amazed at the stand taken by Senator Platt, or affected to be. They all said they had firmly believed that a conference would be held.

If their manner was a true indication of their feeling, they evidently did not relish the prospect of having to make a fight in the convention for their favorite. Their belief all along has been that Mr. Woodruff's friends would have a much better chance to assert themselves in conference than they would in open convention.

It was said by close friends of Senator Platt that he had informed Mr. Higgins at their interview that he thought Woodruff would make a stronger candidate than he, and that he put a blunt request to Mr. Higgins to declare himself out. If such a request was made it was evident from the interview subsequently had with Mr. Higgins what the nature of his reply had been.

There cannot be the slightest doubt that in a contest Senator Platt would lose. The accepted theory of his unexpected attitude is that he believes Gov. Odell cannot afford to make such a fight, realizing that if he did the nominee of the convention would bear the Odell tag in an unmistakable manner, and that his chances of election in consequence would be reduced to the danger point.

"No man whom Senator Platt persistently opposes," said one of his friends who is likely to play an important part in the convention, "will be nominated. You understand why as well as I can tell you. The nominee will either be Woodruff or some new man."

Prospect of a Fight Welcomed.

The news that Senator Platt had refused to go into a conference spread quickly, and the apathy which had prevailed during the past forty-eight hours was dispelled at once. Groups of politicians gathered on the piazzas and in the beautiful green court of the United States Hotel and eagerly discussed the surprising development. Every man who it was thought possible might have inside information about the latest twist in the situation was waylaid and pressed to tell what he had learned.

It is so long since there has been a real fight in a Republican State Convention that even politicians deeply concerned in the outcome of the election welcomed the prospect.

The Odell men were confident that Higgins would have at least 600 votes in the convention, and ridiculed the notion that "the Odell tag" might mean defeat. They asserted that the State was absolutely sure for Roosevelt and the State ticket, no matter what sort of a row was in the convention or who was nominated for Governor.

About 4 o'clock interest in the situation was made keener by a visit which Lieut. Gov. Higgins made to the cottage of ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff. The rivals greeted each other pleasantly.

Mr. Higgins said he had heard that Mr. Woodruff was not willing to admit his defeat and was disposed to take the fight into the convention. Mr. Woodruff said that such was his intention.

Alphonse and Gaston.

"Well, we can fight this thing out in a perfectly friendly spirit," said Mr. Higgins.

"Most assuredly," responded Mr. Woodruff.

"I think that a large majority of the delegates are for me and that I will be nominated," said Mr. Higgins.

"I beg to differ with you," said Mr. Woodruff. "My information is that the preference of a majority of the delegates is for me, and I believe that I will be elected."

"Well, we shall see who is right," said Mr. Higgins.

"The convention will determine that," replied Mr. Woodruff.

Then they shook hands and Mr. Higgins went away. It was a regular case of Gaston and Alphonse, quite in contrast with the demeanor which Gov. Odell and Senator Platt showed toward each other. The Governor and the Senator evidently take the situation much more seriously than the two men who are to contest for the nomination, which goes to show that being a Warwick is a harder job and more worrying than being a candidate.

No sooner was the conference between Higgins and Woodruff over than their followers became busy. They went out immediately to line up the delegations.

To-night there are conferences everywhere. Each delegation in which there is the slightest division of sentiment is getting together to decide how it will stand in the convention.

Leaders of the New York County delegation stated after a conference which they held that the delegations of perhaps five Assembly Districts in New York would be for Woodruff and that the rest would be for Higgins.

SARATOGA, Sept. 13.—Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks reached Saratoga this evening to deliver the semi-centenary address at the big demonstration which has been arranged for to-morrow night in the convention hall. His coming was made the occasion of a general Republican jollification this evening, practically all of the party men now gathered here forming in line at one time or another during the evening for the purpose of shaking hands with the candidate.

The Senator arrived at about 9 o'clock, coming up from New York on one of the regular trains and in a Pullman car, having declined the proffer of a special car. At the station to meet him when the train drew in were Col. George W. Dunn, William Barnes, Jr., William L. Ward, John T. Mott, and William H. Ten Eyck, the committee named by the State Committee at its session of a few minutes before to meet the candidate and escort him to his suite of rooms in the United States Hotel. There also was a good-sized crowd at the station to give the candidate a cheer as he alighted.

Escorted by the committee, the Senator went to Cottage No. 12, adjoining those occupied by Senator Platt and Gov. Odell. Almost the first act of Senator Fairbanks on his arrival was to go into the room of Senator Platt, greet him, and talk with him for a few minutes. In the Senate Chamber at Washington the seats of Senator Fairbanks and Senator Platt are next to one another, and the two men are personal friends.

After leaving Senator Platt, Senator Fairbanks went to see Gov. Odell and spent some time with him. He then went to his own room, where during the rest of the evening he held a sort of informal reception, leaders and delegates from all sections of the State crowding in to shake his hand.

Senator Depew acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the visitors, who finally were formed in line and passed around the main room in the Senator's suite.

To-morrow night Senator Fairbanks will make the leading address at the exercises in commemoration of the birth of the Republican Party in this State fifty years ago. Immediately after his speech he will go to Elmira, where he is scheduled to speak on Thursday.

"Lou" Payn Has a Beautiful Dream—William Halpin Discovers the Midget City.

SARATOGA, Sept. 13.—Delegates and delegations have been arriving thick and fast since early morning, and to-night practically all of the convention crowd is on hand and ready for to-morrow's proceedings. Most of the Manhattan contingent got in late this afternoon, and headquarters have been established on the main floor of the United States Hotel, facing the big court.

The rooms used for the headquarters were used all during the Summer by a brokerage firm, and on the wall is the big blackboard on which, until a few days ago, were displayed the current price quotations on securities. Late this afternoon, when the New Yorkers were arriving, Charles S. Adler strolled into the headquarters and saw Secretary Armitage Mathews of the Republican County Committee in charge.

"Say, Armitage," said Adler, looking at the blackboard, "I'll give you $500 for the poolroom privileges for two days."

"You're too late," said Mathews. "Some one else has got it. Look here."

Mathews pointed to one end of the blackboard, on which was written in big chalk letters:

GREAT GUBERNATORIAL STEEPLECHASE.

Higgins	3 to 1	Fish	40 to 1
Woodruff	100 to 1	Hendricks	200 to 1

"We're going to make another book on the Attorney Generalship handicap in a few minutes, starting off with Julius M. Mayer as the hot favorite," said Mathews.

One of the really touching sights of the convention is Col. Lovell Jerome, brother to the District Attorney, who appears to be the nearest thing to an omnipresent being yet discovered. The Colonel, however, is in a genial mood, and is inclined to take all of the political leaders into his closest confidence.

There was a sight in the courtyard of the United States Hotel this afternoon that gave gladness to the hearts of the gathering Republicans. It was that of an open session of the "Odell kitchen cabinet." This distinguished organization includes the three insurgent Senators, Brackett, Brown, and Elsberg, and such other warm friends of the Governor as Congressman Lucius N. Littauer, National Committeeman William L. Ward, and Speaker S. Fred Nixon of the Assembly.

Apparently this contingent gathered in the middle of the big grass and tree covered courtyard so as to give all comers a treat in witnessing a session of the cabinet. Senator Brackett's black dog sat on a mound alongside the group, and apparently presided over the meeting.

Postmaster Van Cott, one of the Platt "Old Guard," caught sight of the group from the distance.

"Know why they meet out there?" he asked. "Well, they are afraid to trust their conversation to four walls which may have ears. They want to get out in the open so they could see the approach of any one a hundred feet away."

Anyway the session lasted a full hour.

Senator L'Hommedieu of Orleans County was one of the day's arrivals. "Next Winter," said the Senator, "I am going to introduce a bill prohibiting hotels from marking their names on their linen. Think how embarrassing it would be to have a guest come to your home, and on being escorted to his room at night have him turn back the sheets and find each one stamped, 'United States Hotel.'"

Despite the many predictions that "Platt is down and out," the aged senior Senator has made a new convert to his support. He is none other than ex-Marshal Louis F. Payn, who has been aligned with Gov. Odell on everything lately except on the nomination of Higgins for Governor. On this issue Payn has gone back to the Platt ranks and is one of the most bitter anti-Higgins men.

The reason is that Higgins, as Senator, voted against the confirmation of Payn as State Superintendent of Insurance when appointed to the place by Gov. Black. Also, Higgins as Senator stood with Roosevelt as Governor on the question of ousting Payn from the same office. Payn has forgiven the President, but he never has forgiven Higgins.

"I had a beautiful dream last night," said Payn to-day. "I dreamed that Roosevelt was Governor again and Higgins Senator. Roosevelt in the dream had just signed my appointment as Superintendent of Insurance, and Higgins was voting for my confirmation."

While Payn was telling this dream story to some friends Congressman James S. Sherman of Utica and ex-Mayor Thomas Wheeler of the same city joined the group.

"Say, Lou," said Sherman, "you just stick to your position. You have the key to the situation now."

"I know I've got the key," said Payn, "but slick Benny Odell has gone and changed the lock."

George H. Fahrbach, who was a Tammany office holder and the defeated nominee for County Clerk in 1901, before he became a wine agent and acquired wealth, is here explaining to his friends the merits of the brand of champagne which he represents.

"Where is this old convention, anyway?" growled Fahrbach this afternoon. "I don't see the crowd."

"The convention is not at this hotel; it is up at the Huestis House," said Tax Commissioner Frank Raymond. Fahrbach went up to that hotel and came back in a little while looking more downcast than ever.

"You're right, there is a convention up there," he said, "and it's a big one, too; but it's a Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention."

One of the distinguished absentees of this convention, and one whose absence caused much comment to-day when the cause was learned, is ex-State Senator Clarence Lexow of Nyack, the man who added the verb "to Lexow," meaning "to investigate so as not to find out what was not wanted," to the English language, through his inquiry into New York City police conditions ten years ago.

Lexow has been attending State Conventions for years, but this year ex-Congressman Tompkins of Rockland County, who is the real leader there, decided that Lexow needed a little trimming down because of some outbreaks against the Tompkins contingent. Accordingly the Tompkins men brought the word here to-day that at the Rockland County Convention held yesterday Lexow was not permitted to come to Saratoga as a delegate. Instead the convention nominated W. W. Snow, Arthur Tompkins, Matthew Hurd, and George A. Wyre, all Tompkins men.

This afternoon Col. Abe Gruber and ex-Judge Julius M. Mayer were seen in earnest conversation on the veranda of the United States Hotel. "The midget city is now in politics," remarked William Halpin as he looked at them.

Hamilton Fish, ex-Speaker of the Assembly and now in charge of the New York Sub-Treasury, was standing in the hotel lobby to-night when an aged individual with a long, flowing beard passed.

"Who is that?" he asked.

"Why, that's one of the old Fremonters here for the Republican semi-centenary," remarked a friend.

"Did he vote for Fremont?" inquired Fish. "Rather looks as though he had been a member of Noah's Cabinet."

Gov. Odell and Senator Platt occupy suites on opposite sides of a common hallway on the veranda floor of the United States Hotel. Odell's suite is cottage No. 10 and Platt's is known as Cottage No. 11.

To-night Senator Coggeshall of Oneida County got into the common hallway between the suites, and looked first at the Odell door and then at the Platt door.

"Guess I'll stay here and play both ends against the middle," he remarked.

Here on the eve of the convention it is remarked that there is not a single band working in town and not even is one of the regular Summer hotel orchestras busy. Owing to the bad season all of the big hotels sent their orchestras away early this year, and not one of the delegations has brought a band.

Nothing appeared to be thought of this until to-night, when an excursion train passed through the town from Lake George for Albany. There was a band on board and the music could be heard in the United States Hotel court as the train went through. Everybody pricked up his ears at the unfamiliar sound.

"Gosh," said Senator Benjamin M. Wilcox of Auburn, "to think of it; that's the first band in town, and some Sunday schoolers brought it and are taking it away again."

Magistrate Pool had an experience last night coming up here by boat. Charles S. Adler was on the boat and sat at the table with the Magistrate when he dined.

"You want to look out for Mr. Pool," said Adler to the negro waiter. "He's a Police Judge and might commit you."

"I knows him all right, boss," said the waiter. "I was before him in Jefferson Market Court two months ago and he fined me $5 when he done ought to have fined de oder feller."

"Do you mean to say I was unfair to you?" asked Magistrate Pool, looking at the waiter.

"Well, Jedge," said the negro earnestly, "you was very nice to me, but you ought to have fined de oder feller. He was to blame."

Magistrate Pool took a $5 bill from his pocket and handed it to the astonished negro.

"Well," he said, "if you say I wronged you, here is your $5 back."

TRUST COMPANIES SEEK SUPERVISION

Vote to Draft Model Law for State Legislatures.

PLEAS FOR CONSERVATISM

Controller Ridgely Favors Greater Restrictions in Address Before Trust Company Section of Bankers.

Besides listening to a speech by Controller of the Currency Ridgely, the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association voted through at its meeting yesterday several resolutions that are expected to pave the way toward remodeling the entire trust company system of the United States.

It was after Controller Ridgely had urged greater conservatism in trust company affairs that John W. Breidenthal of the Banking Trust Company of Kansas City moved for a vote expressing the organization's approval of proper supervision over trust companies in all States. Festus J. Wade, President of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, seconded this proposition, adding that he hoped for strict Federal supervision very soon. He urged that the trust concerns ought to increase their cash reserves, saying:

"Any one of you who is carrying less than 10 or 20 per cent. in your own vaults is walking on thin ice. What we want is a Congressional act providing a supervision as strict as the National banks now have, and then our system will become as solid and as great as theirs."

The members voted unanimously for the resolution favoring State supervision. Then it was moved to appoint a committee to draft a model law and urge its adoption in all State Legislatures. F. N. Fries, President of the Wachorra Loan and Trust Company of Winston-Salem, N. C., who had delivered an address on "Conservatism" preceding Mr. Ridgely, approved unifying the laws, but John Skelton Williams of Richmond, Va., said he thought this impracticable in view of different conditions in different States. Mr. McCulloch of Chicago suggested framing a model law and leaving to the good judgment of legislators the job of making such changes as would be necessary to accommodate local conditions.

To Draft a Model Law.

Finally, on Mr. Wade's motion, the Executive Committee was empowered to draft the law and take such action as it might see fit toward obtaining legislative action in the different States. Members of the committee said later that the matter would be pushed to a successful end if the influence of an organization representing two billion dollars was sufficent to do it.

Another resolution that may effect an important change in business dealings throughout the country was a condemnation of concerns using the word "trust" in their names without really exercising what are generally considered trust company functions. Several of the speakers condemned as dangerous the growing tendency of real trust companies to invade such outside fields as insurance, real estate, and fidelity bonding. The resolution, unanimously passed, called on the State Governments to pass laws forbidding the use of "trust" in the names of those not conservatively entitled to it.

In the absence of Chairman Breckenridge Jones of St. Louis, who could not be here on account of his wife's sudden death, the presiding officer of the day was Clark Williams, the sections Executive Committee head and a Vice President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of this city. The meeting was held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. George W. Young, President of the same concern, welcomed the delegates to New York. He described the functions of banks and trust companies as co-operative, and not competitive. He recalled that the number of trust companies twenty years ago was less than 100 in the United States, but had increased beyond 1,000, with a present total capital of more than $3,000,000,000. Nearly $1,000,000,000 of deposits, he said, were in this State alone. The interests of these concerns had come to be the same as those of the banks.

Mr. Wade of St. Louis, in responding for the visitors, said the trust company system already had come to be second only to that of the National banks. James R. Branch, the Secretary, read his report, showing that the section's membership had increased from 433 to 646 in a year. The Executive Committee's report stated that the organization represented companies worth about $2,000,000,000, or practically a third of all the country's trust company interests.

Mr. Fries's address on "Conservatism" was announced as the feature of the programme, and the North Carolinian was applauded frequently.

"The growth of the trust company business," he said, "is slow and sometimes very discouraging, and there comes to not a few the necessity for some means of support. This fact and the temptations to obtain profits cause the management to take up whatever presents the surest and quickest returns consistent with the charter. It may be, and it most frequently is, banking in its various forms, again the buying and selling real estate, the dealing in stocks and bonds, or the promotion of some enterprise, and thus the trust company becomes in reality a bank of discount, a real estate company, a broker's office, or something else.

"It is not necessary to argue to this body that this condition of affairs is not as it should be, and that it will sooner or later not only bring confusion, but may bring discredit upon the name of trust company and the business it represents.

"I do not want to be understood as saying that it is not perfectly right for any one to engage in either or all of the different forms of business enterprise that have been in different years combined with those of the trust company, nor that many of them cannot be successfully and properly conducted by the trust company in the capacity of agent, but I do desire to present clearly the anomalous position the trust company, as such, is getting into, when other institutions are assuming to do its legitimate business and all kinds of business enterprises are being conducted under the trust company name, and this to such an extent that it has been derisively called the 'department store of finance.'"

Should Never Promote.

Mr. Fries urged that a trust company never should become a promoter. In recent years certain trust companies had obtained much business in the line of reorganizing railroads and other large business enterprises, but, he said:

"A trust company should consider this class of business with the greatest care and some degree of suspicion. The utmost caution should be exercised, not only in ascertaining the true merit and sound policy of the plans proposed, but also in ascertaining the character of the men presenting the project and the associates that will underwrite it. If any one of these three points is not entirely satisfactory and first class the trust company should not give it consideration."

Jordan J. Rollins of this city read a paper on "The Protection of Trust Companies Acting as Transfer Agents and Registrars." He said that the Stock Exchange considered these duties simple when ordering corporations to maintain local transfer offices, and pointed out the technical obstacles to be met. In conclusion he said he considered a trust company's "temptation to do right greater than its temptation to do wrong. A. A. Jackson, Vice President of the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, talked about "Failures."

Controller Ridgeley, who had arrived rather unexpectedly, spoke extemporaneously, taking Mr. Fries's speech as his text.

"Conservatism," he said, "is the foundation of all good banking, and this is true more especially of trust companies than of anything else."

Trust companies, he said, ought to limit themselves very carefully as to the classes of outside business they would enter beyond their legitimate sphere. He cited the records as showing that the most successful companies had been the ones which stuck to the "legitimate."

"There is hardly a possible excuse for the failure of a trust company managed for legitimate business and not venturing into other fields," he declared.

Ridgely for Restrictions.

He saw no reason why, with proper restrictions, they should not do a savings bank business, but "they shouldn't be allowed to do a land business." It was a question, he said, whether they should be permitted to do a general banking business, but if they did they should be hedged in with restrictions "even greater than those usual for others doing such business—the National banks, for instance."

No other country, the Controller continued, has established so thorough an inspection of banks as the United States. The Bank Examiner usually did his work well, he had found, though examiners could not be expected to spend a few minutes or hours on an institution's books and straighten out everything that had been done wrong in the preceding 365 days. A bank official wishing to deceive the Inspector could always be sure of chances in his favor.

"Hardly a day passes," he said, "but we hear of some bank that's in a bad way. Numbers of them are straightened out and put on their feet after threatening trouble of which the public hears nothing. The good sense, judgment, and courage of the Bank Examiner are often responsible for this."

The section passed a resolution of condolence for its absent President, Mr. Jones, and voted to present to him a fine loving cup. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chairman—E. A. Potter of the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

Vice Chairman—Clark Williams, United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York.

Vice Presidents—For California, J. Dalzell Brown of the California Safe Deposit Company of San Francisco; Connecticut, F. W. Marks of the Bridgeport Trust Company; Illinois, E. J. Parker of the Quincey Loan and Trust Company; Indiana, J. H. Holliday of the Trust Company of Indianapolis; Kentucky, J. I. Powers of the United States Trust Company of Louisville; Massachusetts, N. W. Jordan of the American Loan and Trust Company of Boston; Missouri, William G. Lacken of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis; New Jersey, William C. Heppenheimer of the Trust Company of New Jersey in Hoboken; New York, George W. Young of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York City; North Carolina, W. C. Allen of the Greensborough Loan and Trust Company; Ohio, E. P. McIntosh of the Guardian Trust Company of Cleveland; Pennsylvania, F. G. Hobson of the Norristown Trust Company; Rhode Island, J. Edward Hudley of the Industrial Trust Company of Providence; Tennessee, G. R. Preston of the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chattanooga; Virginia, Isaac T. Mann of the Radford Trust Company.

"Each State, represented by as many as ten companies, is entitled to a Vice President, according to a new by-law. Those from Maine and Maryland will be selected later by the Executive Committee.

The sessions of the main body of the American Bankers' Association will begin this morning in the Waldorf-Astoria. All day yesterday members were arriving in town, and it is expected that more than 3,000 will have registered before to-night at the temporary information bureau in the hotel. The meetings will continue for three days.

After a prayer by Bishop Henry C. Potter to-day's exercises will include addresses by James Stillman, President of the National City Bank; Mayor McClellan, and A. Barton Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank. Mr. Hepburn's subject will be "The Money Situation."

The association's Executive Committee, about seventy strong, had a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, Mr. Stillman presiding.

POSTAL BANKS OPPOSED.

Speakers at Savings Bank Section Against Government in Business.

There seemed to be a danger of political discussion interrupting the peace of the savings bank section of the American Bankers' Association when State Superintendent of Banks Willis S. Paine approached the climax of his speech on "Postal Savings" at the organization's meeting in the Myrtle Room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon.

"To-day," said he, "there are not wanting evidences that the old Federal spirit still exists, although repudiated by the people when Jefferson and Madison and Monroe were potent forces in American life and declared themselves against governmental supremacy. In various ways what we denominate 'the Government' is troubling itself concerning matters which should be handled by the people in their own way. A proposal to establish postal savings banks is part and parcel of the theory that a Federal Government should regulate the affairs of the people, reducing the powers of the State and limiting the expression and activities of the individual to the smallest possible compass."

The establishment of postal savings banks, he continued, would discredit other financial institutions known to be safe by the well-educated man. To raise the question of establishing them was an argument addressed to ignorance.

"The same argument, carried to its logical conclusion," he said, "would substitute a great Federal bank at Washington, with branches all over the country, and, as a consequence, the retirement of the existing National and State banks."

"We need not more but less paternalism," he said later. "Adopting this principle as our guide of action, we shall leave people as now familiar with banking to conduct a banking business, amenable, of course, to proper safeguards. If the people need savings banks, we will not go to Governments of Europe for our exemplars, but we will go to the people, who have settled many problems in their National life of one hundred and twenty-eight years, and who have shown the autocratic paternal Governments of Europe how much better they can govern themselves than by putting themselves under the dominion of men no better than others of our body, and who do not possess a monopoly of wisdom for governing the world.

"When States and cities and towns need railways, the people build them; when water is required for public utility, the people speak, and the fountains flow. When savings banks are needed in the geographical limits not now having them, the people will provide them, and let us hope without going to Postmasters or other Government officials for them."

The Chairman, A. C. Tuttle of the Naugatuck Savings Bank, said in opening the meeting:

"Government savings banks are hardly more than a dream, though an unpleasant one. It seems impossible that any sane legislator would introduce a bill into Congress authorizing them. Certainly, if any one had the hardihood to do it, the bill would meet with an opposition that would make the opposition to the United States Bank in Jackson's time sink into insignificance. Aside from the fact that such a bill would jeopardize one of the props of the Government, there is a widespread and most salutary feeling averse to the Government's engaging in any business enterprise.

"One matter deserving of careful thought by us is the change in the character of our investments. Government bonds, at one time an important factor, now reported, now scarcely appear. Such change has been necessary in order to maintain our rates of interest, but it is an open question if the new investments have always given to depositors that security that they should have."

The following officers were elected:

Chairman—Charles E. Sprague, President of the Union Dime Savings Bank, New York City; Vice Chairman, Edward E. Duff, Vice President of the People's Savings Bank, Pittsburg; Executive Committee to serve three years—Lucius Teter, Cashier of Chicago Savings Bank; Robert J. Hoguet, Treasurer of Emigrant Industrial Bank, New York City, and David Hoyt, Treasurer of Monroe Savings Bank, Rochester, N. Y.; Executive Committee, to serve two years—Charles B. Mills, Cashier of People's Trust and Savings Bank, Clinton, Iowa.

HEAVY FROSTS FORCE A NEW RECORD FOR WHEAT

Cold Wave Spreads Over Canadian Northwest.

CLOSING THREE CENTS HIGHER

Scramble to Buy in Chicago—Price Up 9 Cents in Minneapolis—Discouraging News for Bears.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Blighting frosts over the Canadian Northwest to-day added fresh zest to the bull campaign in wheat, forcing prices up to a new high-record mark. Following so closely upon the Government crop report showing the smallest yield in a decade for the United States, the announcement to-day that untold damage had been inflicted during the night upon the Canadian wheat fields awakened gravest fears among traders. Adding to the seriousness of the situation, the Weather Bureau forecasted frosts to-night throughout Minnesota and the Dakotas. As one trader expressed it, all that now remains, apparently, is for a fire to come and burn up the leavings.

At one time to-day all deliveries of wheat were 4 cents above yesterday's closing prices, an advance of 8 cents in forty-eight hours. May wheat to-day sold at 118⅝@ 118⅞ a bushel, a new high-record mark for the season. December advanced to 116¾. At the close wheat prices were up over 3 cents. Corn was up almost 2 cents. Oats made a net gain of ¾c, and provisions 2½ to 25c.

Intense excitement prevailed in the wheat pit at the opening, with apparently every trader an avowed buyer. The demand was so urgent and offerings so limited that prices for all deliveries were bid up fully 2 cents at the start.

In Manitoba the loss is estimated at 25 or 30 per cent. of the crop. The desire to buy was increased by the strong tone of all foreign grain markets, sharp advances abroad furnishing indications of universal alarm regarding the American wheat crop. As the session advanced causes of fresh grief for the bears appeared, primary receipts showing nearly a 50 per cent. decrease compared with a year ago.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 13.—Wheat advanced to-day nearly 9 cents above yesterday's close, touching $1.27 and making a new high record for September. News of heavy rains in the Canadian Northwest, followed by freezing temperatures last night gave the trade a bad scare. Then came the weather report predicting a hard frost in the American Northwest to-night. The December option went to 1.19½ and May to 1.25½.

The local grain markets were strong but not very active, and there was little excitement discernible. September wheat, which is practically on a cash basis, touched $1.21, and December, which is the speculative option, went to $1.20. Corn also was strong, rising from 2 to 2½ cents a bushel. There is no export trade to speak of at these prices, and as the New York market is mainly an export market transactions were not heavy.

EDUCATIONAL ALLIANCE OPENS.

Dr. Blaustein Speaks of Its Service for Patriotism.

The opening exercises of the Educational Alliance were held last evening in the hall of that institution, East Broadway and Jefferson Street. There was a large attendance of both seniors and juniors, who evinced the greatest enthusiasm while Dr. David Blaustein, Superintendent, was explaining the work which had been mapped out for the year, and Miss Julia Richmond, District Superintendent and member of the Board of Trustees, gave a brief history of the causes which had given birth to the organization, and the ends which it sought to realize.

Dr. Blaustein explained that the Alliance was neither a public school nor a charitable institution. It was conducted on the co-operative plan, and each boy and girl was part of the system. Speaking particularly to the Jewish children, he reminded them that there were countries in which education was denied them. In this connection he dwelt especially upon the work of the preparatory school for immigrant children. He reminded the Jewish children that their race had developed their brains at the expense of their bodies on the Continent, inasmuch as they were denied military opportunities. Dr. Blaustein did not regret the fact that the military profession was not open to the race in Europe.

"But," he said, "I desire to call your attention to the fact that during the Spanish-American war, in this very hall, a thousand Jewish young men offered their aid to the United States and the flag of this country."

The statement was heartily cheered.

Cycling Notes of Interest.

Although almost fifty years old, Emil Leuly, a member of the Century Road Club of America, living in West Hoboken, N. J., recently covered 1,000 miles in fifteen days, going to the World's Fair in St. Louis. On eight of the days he rode over 100 miles, his best journey being one of 107 miles from Halstead to Corning, N. Y.

So many bicycles have been stolen in some parts of South Africa that the suggestion has been made that all black natives be restricted to the use of bicycles enameled yellow. This is taken as an accusation that only the negroes steal machines, or that they steal most of them, and the suggestion has aroused lots of antagonism among those who view this as an attempt to add to the downtrodden black man's burden.

John and Menus Bedell, the Long Island bicycle sprinters, have decided to visit Australia this Winter, and will leave on Sept. 27 for that faraway isle. It is said that Frank Kramer, the present cycling champion, contemplates a trip abroad. The foreign promoters have offered every inducement for the blonde lad to try his speed against the European cracks, and it may be that they will finally succeed in inducing the Jersey lad to cross the water.

F. A. McFarland of the Tribune racing team has gone to Salt Lake City to meet William Samuelson of the Ramblers' team, who has been doing such great racing on the saucer track in that city. McFarland will probably remain there until November, when he will come East to compete in the six-day race at Madison Square Garden—if he decides to again try the long-distance game—or to go to Australia with Ivor Lawson.

Accompanying McFarland on the trip West is F. H. Schepe, the Australian, who has been racing as a member of the Rambler team. He is on his way to the Antipodes for a season in America that produced comparatively little cash.

The death of George Leander of Chicago, who died as a result of injuries received from a fall on the Paris-Dieppe Princes track in June, is offered as another argument for a discontinuance of racing behind powerful motor cycles. Harry Elkes, Johnny Nelson, and Archie McEachern are three other jockeys who met their death while traveling at terrific speed behind the sputtering motors.

The death of Leander is a hard blow to cycling, as he was one of the best-liked men in the game. He was a big, handsome fellow of wonderful strength and vitality, and when he won the six-day race in 1902 he finished fresher than any other man who ever completed such a journey.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago continues to ride his bicycle almost every day when the weather is fair.

Motor cycles outnumber the automobiles in England, according to statistics received from abroad. Up to the close of July, with one county missing, the records show that there are in use 21,221 motor cycles, as against 18,340 motor cars. Of this number 2,606 of the motor cycles and 3,619 of the cars are in London.

NEW JERSEY DEMOCRATS PLAN AGGRESSIVE FIGHT

To Demand Equal Taxation of Railroads and Other Property.

ONCE MAYOR FAGAN'S ISSUE

Jersey City's Republican Executive Threatens Open Fight in His Party's Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 13.—The cheerfest State Convention the Democrats of New Jersey have held in a decade will open its battle here Thursday for the Governorship of the State on the issue raised by Jersey City Republicans for the equal taxation of railroads with other property in the State.

The railroads are now taxed at a 1 or a 1½ per cent. rate, and the proceeds are to go into the State Treasury to pay the current expenses of the State Government. Attempts have been frequently made to force the railroads to pay at the full local rate, which generally approximates 3 per cent., and to have all the money collected from them devoted to the maintenance of the local governments. But they have all been marked by failure.

Four-fifths of the taxable railroad property in New Jersey is at the terminals and yards on the Hudson River front at Jersey City, Hoboken, and Bayonne. Practically all the taxes collected from these possessions, worth many millions, are paid to the State, and used for State purposes. The effect is to force Hudson County indirectly to bear most of the expenses of carrying on the State Government.

Feeling the need of more city money last Winter, Mayor Fagan, the Republican chief of Jersey City, asked the Legislature to give Jersey City a part of the State's railroad income. When he was flouted he published a scathing letter accusing the two houses, both Republican, of corporation subservience. The letter was a bomb in the camp of the Republicans, who had then already slated ex-Senator Stokes, popularly regarded as the candidate of the railroads, for the Gubernatorial nomination.

The Legislature ordered the matter referred to a special commission, and would like to dismiss the whole matter with a noncommittal declaration in the State Convention. But Mayor Fagan won't have it that way, and is ready to add to the embarrassments of his party associates by making an open fight on the convention floor for a plank specifically committing the party to the enactment of an equal tax law which he has drafted.

The Democrats saw how incongruous a Republican fight for an equal tax law with Stokes at the head of the Republican ticket might be, and Democratic equal tax clubs were formed everywhere. The Democratic County Committees one after the other declared for it. The Republican managers are perplexed over the popular enthusiasm for the reform.

JERSEY PRIMARIES HELD.

Republicans May Name ex-State Senator Stokes for Governor.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 13.—Under New Jersey's general primary election law party elections were held to-day throughout the State. Each party elected delegates to the conventions which will nominate candidates for Governor, Congress, State Senator, Assemblyman, and county officers. Voting for candidates for ward and township nominations was direct.

The indications to-night are that ex-State Senator Edward C. Stokes of Millville, who is now Clerk in Chancery, will be the unanimous choice of the Republican State Convention for Governor.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 13.—At the Republican primary elections here delegates favoring the nomination of Edward C. Stokes for Governor were selected.

Howard Carrow of this city, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, carried the county at the Democratic primaries.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 13.—The delegates elected at the Republican primaries to-day are instructed for E. C. Stokes for Governor.

The Democratic delegates are uninstructed, but most of them favor State Senator Thomas Ferrell of Glassboro for Governor.

Trophy Offered for Mile Auto Record.

As every automobilist who attends the Empire meet on Saturday, Sept. 24, will be anxious to see the world's record fall, it has been decided to offer a handsome silver trophy to the operator who successfully negotiates a circuit of the track in better than 52 4-5 seconds, which is now the record held by Earl Kiser.

Karl Fisher and his Comet will probably be here for the trial. Fisher will not appear in the regular events, but will make every effort to secure the mile record. As Oldfield established more records on the Empire track than on any other course in the country, it is considered the fastest of all circular courses, and being 100 feet wide it is safer than most ovals.

The new skeleton machine built by Henry Ford, who constructed the famous 999, will be seen in New York for the first time, driven by Frank Kulick. At Providence this machine established new world's records up to five miles for the light class. Kenneth Skinner and A. E. Morrison are coming here from Boston to compete, and some excellent sport is assured.

NEW YORK MARKSMEN WIN.

Keen Contest for McAlpin Trophy on the Creedmoor Range.

The weather conditions of the second day of the Fall rifle, carbine, pistol, and revolver meeting at the Creedmoor range were unfavorable, but the military marksmen worked with vim until dusk.

The principal event of the programme for the day and the only one in which a conclusion was reached was the McAlpin Trophy match, which was won by the team representing the State of New York. It was open to teams of eight from the United States Army, United States Navy, United States Marine Corps, the National Guard or uniformed militia or naval militia of the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia, and from any foreign Government. First prize was a trophy valued at $500, presented by Gen. E. A. McAlpin, and second prize, $100 in cash. Each team member fired ten shots at 200 yards, ten shots at 600 yards, and ten shots at 1,000 yards. The use of any make of military rifle was permissible.

Firing in the McAlpin match commenced shortly after 10 o'clock A. M., but the result was not known until late in the day. The State of New York team won with a total of 1,018 out of a possible 1,200. The United States Marine Corps team finished second, with 970. The scores were:

The winning New York team was made up of eight of the twelve crack shots who captured the National trophy for the Empire State at Fort Riley, Kan., last month.

The principal event scheduled for to-day is the Creedmoor Trophy Match. It is open to teams of six from any regimental, battalion, squad, or separate company organization of the army, navy, marine corps, National Guard, and naval reserve of this or any foreign country. The distances are 200, 500, and 600 yards, seven shots by each team member at each distance. First prize is a trophy valued at $200 and $70 in cash, second prize $50, and third prize $25.

ANOTHER FAST MOTOR YACHT.

H. I. Pratt's New Boat Guaranteed to Make Twenty-three Miles an Hour.

Special to The New York Times.

CITY ISLAND, N. Y., Sept. 13.—A notable addition to the large and rapidly increasing fleet of fast and high powered motor yachts is the Dodger, designed by Gardner & Cox, and built by Wood of this place for H. I. Pratt, which was launched here to-day. The Dodger is 90 feet on the water line and 94 feet 4 inches over all, and a speed of 23 miles an hour is guaranteed by her builders. She is built of steel, and is said to be the highest-powered, gasoline-driven pleasure craft in the country, her equipment consisting of two 250 horse power gasoline motors, with a tank capacity of 1,000 gallons of fuel.

The Dodger in form resembles a torpedo boat, her bow surmounted by a torpedo deck and torpedo stern, all suggestive of speed. In appointment she is very deceiving, having a great deal more room than would be expected. Forward under the torpedo deck extending under a low cabin, are situated the owner's quarters, consisting of saloon, berths, buffet, wardrobes, closet, and lavatory. Aft of the saloon is the engine room, and still further aft, under a low cabin house, are the steward's quarters, Captain's and engineer's staterooms, crews' quarters, &c., equipped with all modern conveniences. The finishing of the interior cabin and saloon is polished mahogany, the painted portions finished in white enamel. The Dodger is expected to rank among the foremost boats of the country. Several days will be spent in trying out the motors on the Sound, but it is doubtful if she is used to any extent this year owing to the lateness of the season.

Commercial Cable Cricketers Win.

Some remarkable play was witnessed in the cricket match played yesterday at Mount Vernon between the St. George Cricket Club and the recently formed team of the Commercial Cable Company, which won by 14 runs. The feature of the game was the bowling of H. Poyer and A. Brown for the Commercial Company. In the second innings of the Mount Vernon men, the former had the extraordinary analysis of 6 wickets for 2 runs, and the latter, 4 wickets for 1 run.

In the first innings some good bowling was also done by the same pair, H Poyer taking 3 wickets for 6 runs, and A. Brown 3 for 9. There

AFRICANDER AT LONG ODDS WON CUP TRIAL

Last Chance Outsider in Race Beat McChesney by a Head.

MEMPHIS FIRST AT 40 TO 1

Best-Backed Horses in Four Other Events at Brighton Beach Were Successful.

The trial of the horses engaged for the Brighton Cup in a mile and a half race, designated the "Cup Preliminary," was the distinctive feature of the racing at the Brighton Beach track yesterday, and produced a splendid head-and-head finish with four horses abreast at the winning post, in addition to overthrowing public form in a style that left bettors gaping with amazement when Africander, last chance outsider in the contest, was returned the winner. Only five horses ran, but they represented about the field that may be expected to start for the two mile and a quarter struggle for the cup on Saturday, and a crowd of holiday proportions was in attendance to witness the test and get a line on the probable outcome of the cup race. All the runners were of the mature division—three four-year-olds and two five-year-olds, all with scale weight, The Picket, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap, starting favorite, with McChesney the second choice and Eugenia Burch and Major Daingerfield the next best backed.

From opening to closing of the betting Africander, as the result of his exceedingly poor performances at Sheepshead Bay, where only last Saturday he was beaten away off in the Annual Champion Stakes, was the rank outsider. Public opinion was divided between The Picket and McChesney, but before the call to the post there came such a support of Africander as to indicate that his improvement was anticipated by his stable. The start, made at the half-mile pole on the back stretch, was with McChesney first away, while Major Daingerfield was all but left, he beginning so slowly that he was half a dozen lengths back of his field when the timing flag fell. Promptly after the break Jockey Redfern, who rode McChesney, took his horse up, under a steadying pull, while Eugenia Burch and The Picket went on past him at a fair pace, the filly on the rail, leading by a head around the turn and past the stand for the first time, The Picket hanging at her throat latch, while McChesney galloped in third place, just at the filly's heels, Africander lying fourth and well back of McChesney. The order was unchanged around the paddock turn and through the back stretch, but just before the far turn was reached, Redfern made a move forward with McChesney, while Major Daingerfield, after having closed a lot of ground, passed Africander. On the turn Redfern began his run with McChesney, nearly a half mile from the winning post, and rushing the horse forward while on the turn took him cut wide, running around Eugenia Burch and The Picket with such speed that in a half furlong McChesney shot to the front and led by a length into the straight. There he was, far out from the rail, and Eugenia Burch and The Picket, already fighting to keep their places, made so close a turn that a wide opening was left when Africander made a rush forward. Africander came at just the right moment, when McChesney was tiring under the early run Redfern made with him, and Eugenia Burch and The Picket were stopping after their effort at pacemaking.

Dashing into the opening that the last turn left for him Africander joined the leaders, and with the four abreast inside the last furlong pole, the race was fought out, McChesney stopping just enough at the end to let up Africander in the final strides, Africander then winning by a short head, with McChesney a similar distance before Eugenia Burch, and The Picket only a short half length away, fourth. As the race was run McChesney seemed the better horse, and ought to have won, though Redfern, in explanation of his mistaken judgment in making his run so soon, said that McChesney bolted with him on the turn and thus lost ground enough to let Africander get to him.

Africander was one of two long-chance winners of the day, Memphis, at 40 to 1, in the opening event, being the other. Memphis ran with but little support from his stable, however, and with a lucky break shot out clear of his field at the start, and never was headed, the long-chance horse lasting just long enough to win, hard ridden, from Phantom.

In all the other races the post favorites were returned winners, the St. Louis horse, First Mason, taking the handicap in easy style from Ormonde's Right, while Dick Bernard and Fancy Dress, after making most of the running in their respective contests, won galloping. Belle Strome led all the way in her race, but trying to run out on the turn lost a lot of ground and only just lasted to win, ridden out, by a half length from Dandelion. The filly's race was a remarkably good one at that, as, with 109 pounds up, she equaled the track record for six furlongs, 1:12, made two years ago by the three-year-old Wax Casta with only three pounds more weight. DAN PATCH SICK.

Noted Pacer Has Strangulated Hernia, but Will Recover.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 13.—Dan Patch, the pacer, is dangerously sick at the Fair Grounds here. His trouble is strangulated hernia. Three veterinarians are in attendance. At 9 o'clock this evening they expressed the opinion that he would recover, but agreed that he would not be able to do any more fast work this season. He was to have paced here to-morrow. M. W. Savage, owner of the horse, arrived here to-night from Savage Station, Minn. Patch was indisposed after he was worked out Monday afternoon, but at feed time he ate heartily and appeared to be in good condition. At midnight he became restless, and from that hour until 6 o'clock this evening he grew rapidly worse.

Two-Speed Gears for Road Racing.

There has been considerable discussion over the question of the two-speed gear's value in road races. It has been a disputed question whether the variable gear is the faster where the maximum speed of the rider is required. On this question, which is of general interest to cyclists, an authority says:

"There is no room for doubt that by the use of the variable gear the rider who travels at a moderate and steady pace not only derives a great deal of comfort and pleasure, but that he also makes considerably better time—that is, he goes further with the same expenditure of energy.

"Proof of this statement has been abundantly borne out by our own experience and by others of an observing nature, who note the distances they ride and the number of miles per hour they usually average. Particularly is the difference noticeable in a rolling or hilly country, and especially when the wheelman with a two-speed gear has a companion who uses a gear corresponding to either the high or the low one of his machine.

"The reason for this is almost self-evident. On a very slight down grade the bicycle will barely coast on, if it does so, a very slight assistance by means of the high gear gives it almost a birdlike flight, whereas to attain the same pace with the lower gear one must pedal until his legs ache; when a steep hill is encountered, which requires great effort on the high gear, or it is impossible to employ it, the low gear renders it of no serious inconvenience or discomfort. It is on roads with many ups and downs that the rider with the two-speed gear finds that unconsciously he is ahead of his companions who are without this device.

"It would seem well worth while to put the two-speed gear to a thorough test in road racing over a few long, hilly courses, to settle the question of its value for fast road work."

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Dick Bernard, owned by E. E. Smathers and entered to sell for $1,800 in the fifth race, was bid up to $3,000 after the race in the interest of A. L. Aste, owner of Canteen, the second horse. Mr. Smathers retaining Dick Bernard for $5 additional. Failing to get the winner, H. T. Griffin, trainer for Aste, then claimed from Mrs. L. Curtis the fast mare, Stolen Moments, for $1,870.

An outbreak of heavy betting caused uncommon activity in the Brighton Beach betting ring yesterday, and when the races ended J. C. Yeager was much talked about by the layers and backers, he having been the chief backer of Africander. Yeager is supposed to have acted as agent for the stable of Frank Farrell and S. Deimel, in which Africander is trained, and as he got prices ranging from 25 to 1 down to 10 to 1 against the horse, the stable's winnings must have been very large. Some other notable plunges were made, one of the largest of the day being a $10,000 commission sent into the ring by E. R. Thomas on St. Valentine, beaten in the second race.

The National Stable, in which Belle Strome is the best-known horse, will sell out all its horses in training some time in the course of the Morris Park meeting. The establishment, which is said to be owned by A. Lamar, has been fairly successful, and early in the Spring made a sensational double coup, winning with two long-chance horses on the same day.

Belle Strome went to the post for her race with her mouth very tender from the effect of trouble with her teeth, and after running out on the turf, which very nearly beat her, was attributed to the condition of her mouth. Bettors were unaware of the filly's ailment, however, as she started an odds on favorite.

Spar, officially a starter in the third race, had two jockeys, but even then did not get to the post. McDonald weighed in to ride the gelding, but was pitched out of the saddle when the horse started to the post. O'Brien was put up then after a long delay, and in turn was thrown. He remounted, but even with the aid of three grooms he could not get Spar past the paddock turn, and after the Stewards had waited for a reasonable length of time, the starter was ordered to send the other horses away without Spar, who was led back to his stable. As he had been posted as a starter, however, bets stood.

9,000-Mile Auto Tour in Europe.

After covering more than 9,000 miles in an automobile over the roads of England, Scotland, and France, Charles F. Weber and J. W. Wakem of Chicago have returned home with a higher regard for American-made motor cars. The trip abroad was the longest ever made by an American automobile, and the fact that the journey was completed without the least trouble beyond ordinary adjustments is looked upon as one of the greatest recommendations for power-driven machines of home manufacture.

Local Team Placed Ninety-fifth Victory of Season to Its Credit.

ONE TIE GAME FOR AMERICANS

Brooklyn Defeated Quakers at Washington Park — Champion Pittsburgs Beaten Twice by Cincinnati.

Rain or wet grounds interfered with the American League games yesterday, but all of the National contests scheduled were decided. The New Yorks attained their ninety-fifth victory by beating Boston twice, and Cincinnati took two games from Pittsburg, causing the champions to drop back into third place again. At Brooklyn Hanlon's men partially redeemed themselves for their double defeat on Monday by beating the Philadelphians 5 to 2. Three games were to have been played by American League teams, but only Boston and Philadelphia were successful. The result after seven innings was that neither team scored a run. Summary follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New Yorks Outplay the Boston Team and Win Two Games.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The Boston team was outplayed by the New Yorks in both games of the double-header to-day, the first contest being taken by the visitors by a score of 3 to 1, and the second by 9 to 2. For seven innings of the first game McGinnity and Wilhelm were the conspicuous performers, and the hitting was very moderate. Up to that period the score was a tie, each team having scored a run. In the fourth inning Mertes, after McGann's fly had been taken by Tenney, batted safely to right field, but Dahlen was thrown out at first by Geier. Dunn made a nice hit to right field, which scored Mertes, and shortly afterward Dunn wound up the inning by attempting to steal second. The Bostons also tallied a run after two were out. Abbatcchio reached first on a force hit, and got home on singles of Cooley and Moran. No more runs were made until the eighth inning, when Warner hit safely to right field. Wilhelm's poor throw put McGinnity on first, and Bresnahan sent both runners across the plate on a hit to centre field for two bases.

The New Yorks had everything their own way in the second game, and the pitching of Ames was so effective that only two hits were made off his delivery and these were by Cooley. Boston's only runs were scored in the third inning. A missed third strike placed Pittinger on first base, and Geier waited for four bad balls. Willis struck out, and Pittinger was caught trying to steal third. Tenney and Sullivan, the latter taking the place of Abbatichis, who was hit in the wrist by a pitched ball, both got their bases on balls, and on Cooley's double to centre Geier and Tenney scored. The New Yorks scored their runs in the first four innings, and after the seventh the game was called on account of darkness. The scores:

BROOKLYN, 5; PHILADELPHIA, 2.

Fraser and Dooin were mainly responsible for the Philadelphia team's defeat by Brooklyn yesterday, their errors giving to Hanlon's men three of the five runs. It was a very ordinary game, devoid of any brilliant playing, and the attendance, due probably to the threatening weather, was one of the smallest of the season. Batch, one of the recently drafted players from the Holyoke, Mass., team, made his first appearance at third base on the Brooklyn team, but he received no chances in the field, and out of four times at bat never hit a ball outside of the infield. The batting of both teams was light, each scoring but six hits. In the third inning Sheckard made too vigorous a protest against being called out on strikes, and was ordered off the field by Umpire Moran. Dobbs took his place.

After two men were out in the third inning, singles by Cronin and Dillon, Lumley's three base hit to left field, and Dooin's fumble of a thrown ball gave the Brooklyns three runs. They scored again in the seventh on a base on balls to Babb, a stolen base, and Jordan's hit. Dooin, however, should have put out Babb on McGee's throw to Fraser, and he to the catcher. Dooin also failed to hold Gleason's throw after attempting to stop Sheckard from stealing, and Gessler tallied after reaching first on called balls. Titus's long hit to left field in the fifth inning resulted in a home run, and Philadelphia's second run was scored on a base on balls, Thomas's base hit and Bergen's wild throw to second. Score:

CINCINNATI WON TWO GAMES.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13.—Pittsburg lost two games to Cincinnati to-day and went back to third place. The locals were outbatted in both games, but Pittsburg's errors came at most opportune times, allowing Cincinnati enough unearned runs to capture both games. The second game was called in the seventh inning on account of darkness. Attendance, 4,428. Scores:

AN UNDESIRABLE HONOR.

Republicans of standing and repute who have been mentioned as possible candidates for the Governorship have with no little haste and insistence taken themselves out of the field. Outside of the ranks of the politicians no Republican has seemed willing to be the nominee.

There are two very good reasons why the acceptance of the nomination by a Republican of high character would be a mistake. One is that according to the general expectation the Republicans are to be beaten in New York this Fall. The second reason is that such a Republican, were he elected, would be compelled by his honor and his conscience to attempt the exposure and destruction of the ring of unworthy and corrupt men who have established themselves in the various departments of the State Government in the last half-dozen years, and the "grafters," though he might drive them out of Albany, would pretty certainly be numerous enough and influential enough to put an end to the political career of their destroyer.

Ex-Secretary ROOT and Mr. HENRY W. TAFT promptly put a stop to the use of their names. The other names heard in pre-convention gossip have almost without exception been those of faithful organization men who, if installed in the Executive Chamber at Albany, would shut their eyes to the unclean doings about them, leaving the "grafters" unmolested. A complacent and collusive Governor of that sort might escape the smirch and scandal of an exposure achieved without his aid—probably he would not. If such an exposure came either through a legislative investigation or through the more certain processes of the criminal courts the delinquent Executive would be completely done for politically. So it would appear that the family and friends of any Republican who may be the nominee of the convention which meets at Saratoga to-day will have good cause for anxiety.

On the other hand, a Democrat, say a Democrat of the high quality and firm temper of Mr. EDWARD M. SHEPARD, who should be elected Governor, would make for himself a National reputation in reforming and purifying the State offices at Albany. Probably nobody but a Democrat can occupy that office during the next two years and leave it with a good record behind him and a political future before him.

THE CASE OF THE LENA.

It would be an abuse of our hospitality if the Russian armed transport Lena, after completing the needed repairs to her machinery and taking aboard a supply of coal at San Francisco, should go out upon the high seas and capture an American merchant vessel on her way to Japan. The Lena would in that case be using our neutral territory as a base of operations—not only against Japan, but against ourselves, a proceeding the indecency of which could hardly fail to be perceived in St. Petersburg.

Neutrals offer their hospitality to belligerent vessels for no such purpose. The Lena cannot lawfully ask anything of us which would increase her efficiency as a ship of war or would directly enable her to continue her depredations upon the commerce of the Pacific. In theory the only supplies a belligerent ship can ask in a neutral port are those of common necessity, things so remote from the requirements of war as not to be in the strict sense articles of belligerent use. In accordance with this theory we may properly supply the Lena with sufficient coal to carry her to the nearest Russian port, Vladivostok; we may permit her to make repairs strictly necessary to her seaworthiness. These things would be done on the general theory that she was going out, not to fight, but to make the best of her way home. If she does fight, if she attacks and makes prizes of our ships or of any ships bearing merchandise to the enemy of Russia, Japan would not in the strict sense of international law have a cause of complaint against us, since our intent in furnishing the supplies would have to be taken into account. But we should have first-rate grounds for sending a strong remonstrance to the Government at St. Petersburg.

The merchants of the Pacific Coast, with whose business plans the mere coming of the Lena has seriously interfered, will expect the Administration to deal with the somewhat delicate question in a manner to inflict upon them only the minimum of possible harm. That our own commerce at the verge of our territorial waters five thousand miles from the seat of war should be molested, or that our merchants should be deterred from their ventures by an extension on the tension of the zone of hostile action, is contrary to the modern theory of neutral rights, and not to be put up with in meekness and patience.

THE PRESIDENTIAL "WE."

In the twelve thousand words or more that Mr. ROOSEVELT devoted in his letter of acceptance to showing why "good Americans should refuse for the sake of the welfare of the Nation to change the National policy," there are but four allusions to the Congress of the United States, and all together not more than a hundred words. It is an inference with some mathematical basis that one hundred and twenty to one is about the President's estimate of his own importance as compared with that of the people's representatives. The references to the Congress include a mention of the passage of the Currency act of 1900, the establishment of the Department of Commerce and Labor, from which Mr. CORTELYOU was promoted to the management of Mr. ROOSEVELT's campaign, the repeal of the internal revenue taxes, and the legislation for the Philippines.

We can imagine a certain grim smile on the face of Mr. CANNON as he searched the letter transmitted to him for allusions to the work that he and his associates in Congress had done in the last three years. Though Mr. ROOSEVELT employs the convenient pronoun sacred to the use of the sovereign in monarchical lands, the connotation is singularly plain and plainly singular. Mr. CANNON might well recall the objection of a fellow-member of the House of Representatives in the last session to a phrase in a conference report in which the term "the Senate" was used as a plural nominative. "Every one in this House," explained the objector, "knows that the Senate is IT."

A PROMPT RESPONSE.

Mayor MCCLELLAN has replied very promptly to the letter of the Civil Service Reform Association to which we referred yesterday morning. He thanks the association for bringing to his attention the matters complained of in the letter, says that he has already instituted an investigation, and adds: "I shall be glad if you will at any time in this way or in any other way in your power assist the present city administration in enforcing the civil service law both in letter and spirit."

Nothing could be more satisfactory than this response, and if the investigation shall be conducted in the same spirit, as we have no reason to doubt that it will be, the facts will be brought out and the way will be opened for the correction of serious abuses, especially as the law directly provides that "the violation by any person in the city service of any provision of the civil service law or of these rules shall be considered sufficient cause for the removal of such person." The violations alleged by the association were of the provisions intended to secure the equal rights of all workingmen seeking employment from the city. It is the grossest wrong that men capable of doing good work and shown to be so by proper tests and vouchers should be shoved aside in favor of applicants who have the indorsement of the political leaders. This not only results in grave injury to the service, but it is an insult to the manhood of the workingmen and converts employment by the city into a form of political servitude.

THE ARMY MANOEUVRES.

Whoever imagines that mimic warfare is child's play rather than man's work would have been completely undeceived by witnessing the army manoeuvres in Virginia. It is probable that a very large proportion of the troops engaged had never done such hard work in their lives in the way of severe and long-continued physical exercise. In fact, one of the problems that must have been most troublesome to Gen. CORBIN in arranging the details of the manoeuvres was how to work men little accustomed to hard exercise out of doors so as not to break them down in spirit as well as in body. This was effected not only by the assumption that 3 o'clock in the afternoon was "night" and that operations should then cease until midnight, but by his sounding of the recall when there seemed to be danger of working troops not inured to campaigning beyond the limit of elasticity if not of endurance. Even with these precautions the work was quite sufficiently severe. The commanding Generals necessarily made such dispositions and such requisitions upon their commands as they would have made in actual warfare, and this meant fatigue for the most seasoned soldiers and a cruel ordeal for the less seasoned. The flanking march of thirty-seven miles by BARRY's brigade across country and through woods and streams was such an achievement as would have entitled those who performed it to have bragged about it ever after if it had been performed in actual war. That so large a proportion of them should have been able and willing to march in the review next day was little if at all short of positively heroic.

The manoeuvres made it plain to the observing civilian that they are the necessary complement for the organized militia, and indeed for the regular army, of the tactical exercises of the drill room or the drill ground, the intermediate step being such manoeuvres as can be performed upon a limited scale at regular army posts or at the State camps, which have added so much to the efficiency of the National Guard in those States which have instituted them. As is well said in the provisional instructions issued by the General Staff:

> These manoeuvres simulate the conditions of war, and, by making free use of large and diversified areas, acquaint the troops with the physical features and difficulties of actual warfare. While they furnish almost the only opportunity for the exercise of the functions of the higher commanders and their staff officers in the field in time of peace, officers of all grades, and the enlisted men as well, obtain a large view of military operations and the combination of the three arms, realize the importance of the elements of time and space, and learn to appreciate the labor attending the transportation and supply of large bodies of troops.

It is in fact in the departments of supply quite as much as in the fighting arms that the amateur soldier betrays his amateurism. In fact, it is within the recollection of everybody that the United States Army itself has exhibited an amateurish helplessness when the question was of rapidly assembling, equipping, and supplying an expeditionary force smaller than that which assembled last week in Virginia. The conception of an army as a community in motion as self-subsistent and self-sufficient in time of war as a stationary community of the same size in time of peace is one which can be realized only by experience involving experiment. It is most encouraging that Col. WAGNER, the Chief Umpire of the Manassas manoeuvres, should have found the National Guard as actual troops in the field "more efficient than he had ventured to hope."

The two chief monuments of Secretary ROOT's administration, so far as the usual and proper work of the War Department is concerned, are the General Staff law and the militia law; the one designed to promote co-ordination and co-operation among the various arms and departments of the army, the other to promote a like co-ordination and co-operation between the army and the organized militia. Recent experience of war at least induced the authors of the militia law, antiquated for half a century, but only just now superseded, to provide for "general trainings." The manoeuvres at Manassas are the modern form of those trainings. With the simulation of warlike operations under the constant criticism of experts we have the best means of insuring harmony and preparedness between the first line of National defense, which is constituted by the regular army, and the second line of the organized militia, which can afford to give but a week in a year to preparation, the best guarantee that neither Bull Run nor Tampa shall occur again. For it is to be noted that the criticism is by no means confined to the decisions of the umpires in the field, but is applied also to every organization that took part in the manoeuvres through the medium of an observer specially detailed to watch it and to report upon it. Every branch of the service is thus tested and all the weak points noted. To complain of the cost of the manoeuvres is to complain of an addition to our existing military expenditure, say, of 1 per cent., when that addition is precisely what is needed to insure that we are getting the worth of the other 99 per cent. It is not in the main to be expected that any perceptible fraction of the American people will sympathize with a complaint so conspicuously marked by penny wisdom and pound folly.

TEMPERANCE IN ENGLAND.

Some recent official figures which will have great value for all who are interested in whatever promotes substantial progress toward higher standards of civilization show that practical temperance is steadily gaining ground in Great Britain. Since 1899 there has been a marked falling off in the per capita consumption of spirits by the British nation, the contraction being in sharp contrast to the steady annual increase up to that year. The per capita is still too large to give much comfort to those identified with the total abstinence propaganda, but that it is declining instead of increasing shows that the best results to be hoped for from the temperance movement are beginning to be seen. Hard drinking is bad form socially, and the nightly debauches of our five-bottle ancestors survive only in the gouty diathesis of their more prudent descendants. Even among those who use wine and spirits habitually, drunkenness is regarded as disqualifying a man or woman for a position in respectable society.

An explanation of the lessened spirit consumption is likely to be sought in the general business depression and the restricted ability of those who live by labor to purchase intoxicants. As a matter of fact, however, the business conditions are such as to discourage this line of inquiry. It is extremely difficult for those who are trying to create a popular scare over the British fiscal outlook to explain the fact that the country is really prosperous. This is very clearly shown in the income tax returns. Ten years ago for every penny in the pound assessed in this tax the returns were $10,900,000. Last year they were $12,725,000. From this the conclusion is irresistible that the income of the middle and upper classes has increased about 30 per cent. in ten years. From an analysis of these returns it appears that the only class reached by this tax which shows reduced earnings is the farmer class. We must consequently look for some other and better explanation of more temperate drinking than is found in national poverty. To assume that it is due to the recognition by all classes of drinkers of the fact that temperance has substantial advantages over intemperance is at once reasonable and agreeable.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Our recent presentation of evidence in Mrs. EDDY's own handwriting that it was not until years after her system had assumed a close approximation to its present form that she thought of calling it either her own invention or a divine revelation, receives extended comment from The Medical News. Admitting that our evidence was unquestionable and conclusive in proving the close and direct connection between the quack presumably honest and the quack confessedly dishonest, The Medical News [illegible] Woodbridge Riley in an article published some time ago in The Psychological Review that Mrs. EDDY's debt to "Dr." QUIMBY of Portland is not a matter of much consequence, since both, as he expressed it, "drew their philosophic trickle from a common source," the vaporings of itinerant magnetizers who were so successfully exploiting New England credulity at the time when Mrs. EDDY made her often-described pilgrimage in search of health. "Hence," declares The Medical News, "the true history of 'mental science' is to be traced, not to the original QUIMBY, but to the indiscriminate practice of mesmerism along in the forties and fifties, and to the crude attempts of Yankee philosophers to explain the borderland phenomena of hypnoidal states." In a way, of course, this is true, for the healing charlatans of all kinds utilize the same power, and the only basis for the claim to originality made by each is his or her resort to one rather than another of the innumerable methods of conveying suggestion after the patient's attention has been fixed. But when, as in the case of Mrs. EDDY, the charlatan risks all on the veracity of his account as to how he acquired miraculous attributes, it is well worth while to demonstrate that the account is not only false, but knowingly false. Mrs. EDDY's doctrine is, indeed, a product of "the crude attempts of Yankee philosophers to explain the borderland phenomena of hypnoidal states," but it is also an unblushing theft from the writings and teachings of one known Yankee philosopher. For years she gave him full credit, and was content to work the healing game in the humble guise of a follower. Then, tiring of this rôle, she boldly ignored all obligations and declared herself the inspired teacher of a new religion. Such being the circumstances, it seems to us of importance to show the facts as they are, with all their implications of deliberate mendacity. "Christian Science" is of the exact quality of its sponsor, and to destroy her reputation is to destroy its vogue—or ought to be, and would be if its votaries were amenable to reason.

—Ex-Gov. CHAMBERLAIN's recent letter on the negro problem as it exists in the South has attracted attention in all parts of the country, and another letter of his, just published in The Charleston News and Courier, shows that, through a "clipping bureau," doubtless, he has kept close watch on the comment it has excited. Of this, he says, much has been commendatory, not a little adverse, and most of it fair, but he is evidently deeply angered by the fact that it has been almost always a negro writer that impugned his motives and misstated his position. Their favorite answer to his arguments has been to charge him with ingratitude to their race. "They say," writes the ex-Governor, "that I was lifted out of obscurity by negro votes and placed in high office; that thereby I reached all the honor, reputation, and, some add, wealth, which they say I possess; and that after all this, for me to take sides to-day with the white race of the South is a heinous offense." After vigorously denying that he ever has been, is, or will be anything except a sincere friend of the negro, the ex-Governor makes this eloquent summary of his political history: "If I was obscure, I was not lifted into notoriety by negro votes, but in spite of them. If I was unhonored, all the honors that came to me were the reward of reform work against negro rascals—coupled, of course, with white rascals in about the ratio of one to twenty in numbers. If I was poor, I sacrificed all that I had saved from my professional earnings in ten years in the great fight of 1876, and loaded myself with debts for the expenses of that campaign, which it took me nearly ten years more to cancel, but which my negro supporters and calumniators never lifted a finger to relieve me of. Such are the plain, provable facts which no man, white or black, can dispute. Whatever my sins or shortcomings, ingratitude was never one of them, nor did the negro vote ever bring to me anything but loss of time, of money, of reputation, and of personal safety in the State where I had lived twelve years, and where all my interests lay." Those who know the present feeling in South Carolina toward Gov. CHAMBERLAIN find difficulty in trusting their own memories of the time to which he refers as one when he was in some personal danger there, and they need not be told that he needs no defense from accusation of any sort. The negroes who attack him for "ingratitude" are simply giving needless proofs that his much-discussed letter judged them correctly.

—Saratoga barkeepers were quoted yesterday as speaking contemptuously of the Republican statesmen assembled there, for the reason—very good, of course, from a barkeeping point of view—that the statesmen were absurdly temperate and left the dispensers of liquid excitement in cruelly unprofitable loneliness. When this lament was voiced the rank and file of the Republican delegates had not reached the Springs, and, as there is not known to be very much difference as regards thirst between them and their political opponents of the same grade, perhaps by this time the barkeepers have recovered their serenity. Perhaps, on the other hand, they haven't and will not, even after the statesmen of the other party reach the place. For, though there are still marked differences between the habits of those attending a political convention and those which characterize a gathering of women earnestly interested in the advocacy of total abstinence, still the old days of industrious indulgence in rum are pretty well past for everybody not distinctly of the slums, and when men of ordinary intelligence meet for any purpose not avowedly hilarious, they feel so deeply the need to have their wits about them that they usually take some care not to lose them. This is the new, or comparatively new, attitude on the drink question, and Saratoga barkeepers are not the only people who have failed to realize the great effect it has had on social customs.

—It has been suggested that if the heavily armed transport—or the lightly armed cruiser—which has created so much excitement by calling at San Francisco for coal—and everything else her commander can think of—does go outside the Golden Gate to lie in wait for merchantmen bound with contraband for Japan, American enterprise demands that excursion steamers be at once chartered on which deeply interested crowds can go out to observe the subsequent proceedings. The idea is alluring, and no doubt, if the execution of the plan is found practicable, there will be somebody to execute it. It will not, however, be much of a "naval battle" that the excursionists will see, even if they are so lucky as to see anything. The potential victims of the Lena will not fight and they cannot run, and, of course, with Occidental spectators looking on, their crews would not meet the fate which has occasionally befallen the crews of Japanese vessels in similar circumstances. If, indeed, a United States torpedo boat bearing the vehement name of Paul Jones should by any chance take a hand in an episode of this sort there would be something worth seeing—for those whose taste runs to pyrotechnics with an accompaniment of carnage. But this is only a dream. The Lena is sure to behave herself like a little lady as long as she remains in waters that excursionists could possibly reach, and the Paul Jones will have no opportunity to prove her right to her incongruously masculine title.

To what base uses do we return for our dust! Mr. Israel Zangwill is one of the few of the younger writers of fiction who really matter; but when, some years ago, he attempted the stage with "The Children of the Ghetto" he failed signally and disastrously because his art was too deep and exquisite (and his subject too redolent of low life) for popular consumption. Achilles like, he thenceforth sulked in the tent of his fiction, until he was tempted to write again for the stage by two talented young actresses in search of vehicles.

In "Merely Mary Ann" he did what only a factitiously "happy" ending can do to jar and distort a play of exquisite body, but was saved artistically by the no less exquisite art of Miss Eleanor Robson. In "The Serio-Comic Governess," which Cecilia Loftus appeared in last night at the Lyceum, he has played equally fast and loose with equally exquisite material. And here he has no such unfailing resource in the art of his leading lady. But he will more than make up the money he lost in his former and sincere attempt!

For two acts last night the character of Eileen O'Keefe was so archly and charmingly developed by the author, and played with such spirit and grace by Miss Loftus as to raise the highest expectations. Here was a chit of an Irish girl, bubbling over with life and fun, wielding a tongue as sharp as a shaft of sunlight, and as tender in its impact. And the action was deployed in a series of rencontres that showed a master hand at legitimately theatric effect.

From the first, however, Music Hall Cissy stood at the elbow of Cecilia of the two Lyceums, London and New York. She gave a recital in brogue of an Irish legend symbolizing the soul of the girl for whom one life was not enough—and who therefore became actress as well as governess. Then she sang

Michael, Michael, Michael Maginnity.
You're the joy of all the vicinity.

while her comrades of the convent stood by like a musical comedy chorus. In the second act the red flag of danger was waved aloft when, in capacity of governess, Miss Loftus gave her familiar imitations of Ellen Terry, Ada Rehan, and Sarah Bernhardt, and again won the applause we all gave her at Weber & Fields's.

But there was hope of a rational and harmonious story until in the third act Mr. Zangwill brought on a team of vaudeville artists from the Frivolity. Then the whole cast went wild in vaudevillainies. "You called me Bob!" exclaimed the suitor who had just surprised the governess. "Oh, well, you've bobbed up!" she replied. When there was talk of her going on the stage, she was pointed at with an implement for playing billiards. "I'll take my cue," she said, and that was an exit line. Surely the British pun has no worse terrors!

Amid all this sort of thing the situation suddenly became tensely emotional. Miss Loftus confronted at the theatre both her two lovers, each of whom played havoc with her sensibilities until she laughed or cried, swaggered with cigarettes and brandy, or shrank with maiden modesty, danced, fainted, it was meant for a bravura passage, but it was carelessly and prolixly written, and (say it gently) badly overacted.

The result was to leave an audience that had thrilled with exquisite pleasure and purred with the sense of fine comedy quite cold. Then came the last act, and the fests of the two so different lovers. Except for th of the two so different lovers. Except for th in the right key, and the turn with which the story ended brought a comedy moment the most delicious unexpectedness and truth.

The play is a sandwich of the fine bread of character comedy and the condiment of true wit, between which is thrust the corned beef and cabbage of flat and conventional gagging. The music of I. Zangwill is stretched to cover music hall turns that rip it up the middle. A year ago Mr. Pinero delivered a lecture, apropos of the plays of Stevenson, about the frivolity and merretriciousness of books that they approach the stage. The case of Mr. Zangwill is more flagrant than that of his predecessor, because he has shown both dramatic and theatric ability of the highest scope.

The cast, as a whole, is of the highest order, and the production is sumptuously artistic. As the rough and hearty theatrical manager, Herbert Standing, last seen as Candida's cockney father, evinces all the richness of unction and vigorous perfection of technique which we are accustomed to regard as the exclusive property of the elder school. Eva Vincent is equally admirable in a similar vein, repeating the triumph she made last year in a similar part in "Her Own Way." It is worth going to the Lyceum just to see the majestic absurdity of the statue-of-Liberty gesture with which she exerts a cockney authority in her household.

Mr. Reeves Smith again shows himself a comedian of perfect manners and art, though his opportunities are not great. To name the cast is, in fact, to praise it. In her better moments Miss Loftus is at her best, and this is, of course, the very best—which only rouses the angry passions the more because when she is bad she is like the girl with a curl on her forehead.

"THE RAVEN" ON THE STAGE.

"PARSIFAL" SINGERS HERE.

First Performance of the Opera in English to be in Boston on Oct. 17.

Several of Henry W. Savage's "Parsifal" singers got in from Europe yesterday. They were Christian De Voss, who is to sing the title rôle; Mme. Hanna Mara, Franz Egenieff, Johannes Bischoff, and Putnam Griswold. Mme. Kirkby Lunn, who is to be the Kundry in the English version of Wagner's opera, sailed from the other Continent Saturday and will be here in time for the first orchestra rehearsal.

Mr. De Voss is a native of Amsterdam. He made his début as Walther in "Tannhäuser," and has been the leading tenor of the Netherlands Royal Opera House for two years.

Mme. Mara, who has been a mezzo-soprano at the Stadt Theater in Berlin, will be one of the three who will sing the rôle of Kundry.

Putnam Griswold, who will be the Gurnemanz in Mr. Savage's production, was born in Minnesota. He has lately been in the Stadt Theater in Frankfort.

The first performance of the English "Parsifal" will take place at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, on Oct. 17.

WHERE WAS TOMPKINS?

Many Friends in Many Cabs Anxiously Inquire at Tenderloin Station.

The telephone wires of Police Headquarters and of all the west side precincts were kept busy for over an hour last night in wild efforts to learn what happened to Tompkins.

That Tompkins was no myth even if his troubles might be, was testified to by a Mr. Reeves, who said he lived at the St. James Hotel and was a personal friend of the mysterious Tompkins.

Reeves, accompanied by two friends, drove up to the enderlein Station at a late hour and asked for "Sergeant Butter." Sergt. Place asked what was the trouble. Mr. Reeves explained that he had been called up at the St. James by a man who asked him if he had gone to bed.

"I'm sorry to trouble you, but I'm Sergt. Butler of the Tenderloin Station, and you'd better come down here at once and get your friend Tompkins out."

A few minutes later the telephone bell rang again as Mr. Reeves was pulling on his shoes.

"H'lo! That you, Reeves? Say, old man, meet me at the corner—quick! Tompkins got run in. Police Sergeant called me up to come and bail him."

"All right!" howled Mr. Reeves. He was in the act of adjusting his necktie when a third telephone call came. It was to the same effect as the others and came from another intimate friend of Tompkins and himself.

Mr. Reeves was just turning out the electric light in his room when a fourth call came on the telephone. This time it was a woman.

"Oh, Mr. Reeves—something dreadful—something real awful has happened to Tommy! He's locked up and I've just heard—"

Mr. Reeves rang off and bolted out of the St. James. At the corner he met his two friends. They called a cab and drove to the Tenderloin, only to find things more mixed. Sergt. Place called up Police Headquarters and every station house from Twentieth Street to One Hundredth Street, but nothing could be learned about the elusive Tompkins.

Presently a second cab rolled up to the Tenderloin.

"She's come!" whispered Reeves to his friends, and after an interview with the woman in the cab he returned to the Sergeant's desk, looking more puzzled than ever.

"Here's a go!" he said. "Miss H— says that Lake was the name of the Sergeant."

"Good!" said Place; "he's in the Charles Street Station."

Charles Street was called, but the slippery Tompkins was not there, and Lake had been asleep for hours. While Place was telephoning more cabs rolled up to the Tenderloin Station, and more solicitous friends inquired after Tompkins.

"And here's the strangest thing of all," said Reeves; "I stopped for a beer at a saloon up the street, and Sergt. Butler called me again and told me to hurry up. Now, how could he have known that I was in that saloon?"

Then Sergt. Place grinned extensively and said:

"Say, if the whole bunch of you will sneak up to the corner, bet you ten dollars you'll find Tompkins leaning against a lamp post laughing fit to bust!"

There was a deep silence for a moment, then the friends of Tompkins moved in unison toward their cabs.

CORNELL ON PEOPLE'S RIGHTS.

Against "Highfalutin Ideas" Restraining Hotel Supervision by Police.

Magistrate Cornell, sitting in the Yorkville Court, yesterday morning, spoke very strongly against the granting of injunctions by the Supreme Court to prevent the police from interfering with alleged disorderly houses by placing them under surveillance.

The case which brought the matter up was that of Gus Smith, night clerk at Bingall's Fourth Avenue Hotel, at Fourth Avenue and Eleventh Street, who was arrested Monday night by Detectives O'Brien and Grant of the Fifth Street Station. It was stated by the police that the hotel had a record of seven arrests and one conviction, and that for the past fourteen months, up to a few weeks ago, Capt. McDermott had kept a policeman constantly in front of the place to warn off would-be patrons.

Bingall, the proprietor, applied to the courts, and a few weeks ago Judge Gaynor handed down an injunction restraining the police from continuing their surveillance. Lawyer Nugent, counsel for the prisoner, yesterday made a motion for the discharge of the prisoner, whereupon the court said:

"I don't believe in these highfalutin ideas of people's rights. The police have some rights, and among these are that they shall see that such places are conducted properly. I differ with the Judge who issued the injunction, and will hold the prisoner in $500 for trial."

GEOGRAPHIC CONGRESS HEARS ROMANTIC PAPER

Mr. Hague Tells of Missing Island and the Levant.

CREW MAY BE ALIVE YET

"Philip Nolan's" Fate Is Discussed—Commander Peary to Make an Important Announcement To-day.

The eighth annual International Geographic Congress began its regular sessions yesterday morning in the home of the American Geographical Society, 15 West Eighty-first Street. Many present came from abroad. The members of the party, after the sessions here, will make a tour of the country, and will visit the City of Mexico, where they will be received by President Diaz.

Many of the papers read yesterday were read by title. Although the papers were largely technical, one of them was a real romance of truth—the search for a mysterious island where it is possible that mariners supposed to have been lost forty-four years ago may still be living. Rivaling this in interest was the statement of Commander Robert E. Peary, United States Navy, that at the dinner to be given tonight he will make an announcement of importance. This was taken to mean that he will make another dash for the north pole.

Commander Peary addressed the congress at the opening session, and welcomed the visitors.

After the formal addresses of Welcome Sir John Murray of Edinburgh delivered an address on deep-sea explorations, which, he said, showed that the continents were extending and becoming more compact. Dr. Edmund Otis Hovey of New York delivered an address on the volcanoes of Martinique, Guadeloupe, and Saba.

Count Joachim of Pfeil and Klein Ellguth, in speaking on "The Rise and Development of the German Colonial Possessions," told how the geographers were responsible for some East African colonies. He said, in part:

"Many of the present Germanpossessions were acquired without the consent of the Government. In 1884 Dr. C. Peters and myself took steerage passage to Zanzibar and went to what is now German East Africa. Our steerage passage was to deceive English and other Europeans. Dr. Peters and Dr. Juhlke returned to Berlin to persuade the Government to assume formal possession of the land we acquired through treaties with native chiefs. I remained in possession. The territory we had acquired was about the size of Germany. Since the area has been doubled."

At the close of the morning session luncheon was served in the Museum of Natural History.

In the afternoon session James D. Hague of New York told the story of the search for "the reported island or islands" of the North Pacific Ocean between Hawaii and Panama.

He discussed the theory that the United States sloop-of-war Levant, which disappeared mysteriously in 1860 on her voyage from Hawaii to Panama, may have been wrecked on an island in this neighborhood, and the possible survival of some of the ship's company.

"This island is supposed to be about 1,000 to 1,200 miles east southeast from Hawaii, substantially in a direct line between the Port of Hilo and the Bay of Panama. The land has more than once been reported by sailors, chiefly whalers.

"One thing," he said, "seems to me probable—that there is some danger to navigation in that region. And now that our commerce is rapidly increasing and these reported dangers lie directly in the route of sailing-vessels to Australia from San Diego and San Francisco, it becomes incumbent upon our Government to make an exhaustive survey.

"In March, 1902, Capt. Robert T. Lawless, commanding the steamship Australia, on his way to San Francisco from Tahiti, reported passing two patches of what no doubt was wood.

"This observation did much to revive interest in the question of the existence of islands in that part of the ocean.

"Certain incidental circumstances had led by chance to the revival of the generally forgotten mysterious fate of the United States sloop-of-war Levant, which, having sailed on Sept. 18, 1860, from the port of Hilo, Hawaii, for Panama, in part of which has never since been heard from, by any trace whatever, unless it be in certain wreckage found on the south shore of Hawaii in June, 1861, there and then identified by local authorities as wreckage from the Levant.

"I had the honor to bring the matter to the attention of President Roosevelt in June, 1903, and thereafter, on presentation of the known facts at the Navy Department, the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Moody, determined to send an expedition as soon as one or more suitable vessels could be spared for the service, to settle finally the question of the existence or non-existence of any shoal, reef, or island in the doubtful region.

"The newly built cruiser Tacoma, on her trial trip from San Francisco to Honolulu, was ordered to make a detour in that region in the latter part of May of this year. According to the report of her commander, R. F. Nicholson, search for the island was made four days, during which neither land, shoals, nor signs of land were seen; in fact, the locality was remarkable for the total absence of birds.

"These results throw no light on the mysterious fate of the Levant. The ship's company might have landed without the loss of a single life, in which event there might still be some survivors, whose chances of living till now on a fairly habitable and healthy island might and perhaps have been more favorable than elsewhere.

"I may venture to recall the interesting incident that Edward Everett Hale's Philip Nolan, 'The Man Without a Country,' ended his romantic career on the Levant, on this, her last and fatal voyage. There may have been a whole ship's company of men now without a country cast away on this mysterious island nearly 44 years ago, some of whom may be still watching for a sail. This would indeed be a marvelous thing, but it is not beyond the range of possibility. The mutineers of the Bounty lived on Pitcairn Island eighteen years before they were found there, and the extreme and solitary isolation of this supposed land would fully account for the long undiscovered seclusion of the castaways.

"The venerable author of 'The Man Without a Country' has manifested a very keen interest in all that pertains to the recent search for the Levant, and in the efforts to solve the mystery of her fate."

Prof. J. Thoulet of Nancy, France, presented a complimentary resolution to Prince Albert I. of Monaco for his work on deep sea soundings.

In the evening there was a joint lecture at the Museum of Natural History by Dr. William Hunter Workman and his wife on their explorations among the glaciers of the Himalayas. Following the lecture there was a reception in the home of the Geographical Society.

FEW MORE PART-TIME PUPILS.

Maxwell Says No Six-Year-Old Child Reported Refused So Far.

Superintendent Maxwell announced last night that he had received complete reports from eight districts. These districts show:

Increased registration	5,848
Increased attendance	437
Increased part time	915

"If this ratio holds good for the forty-six districts," said City Superintendent Maxwell, "it means only a slight increase of part time from last September, when it was 87,557. It would mean an increase of 5,000 or thereabouts.

"I wish to emphasize particularly that I have received no report yet from any district that a single six-year-old child has been refused."

The figures made public include Districts 1, 5, 6, 8, 12, 14, 17, and 20, which are located in various parts of the city.

HIS WHISKERS SLIPPED.

Wore a Wig, Too—Newark Police Trying to Solve Mystery.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 13.—The police here have a mystery on their hands. It is enveloped in a veil of whiskers. Constable Harry Purcell discovered it on a Bank Street trolley car this morning. The constable was admiring the new crop of Fall whiskers on a young man in the seat ahead of him when suddenly he saw a whisker slide down the cheek of the young man. The constable became nervous, but at last tapped the young man on the shoulder. By this time the car had reached Market and Halsey Streets.

"Where did you get those moving stairways?" inquired the constable.

Without replying the man jumped from the car, and, grabbing his whiskers, put them in his pocket. The constable ran after him and nabbed him. The young man broke away and got as far as the Post Office before being recaptured.

The constable took him to the police station and there learned that in addition to false whiskers the young man wore a wig. He first explained that he had disguised himself for the purpose of frightening folks at Eagle Rock, and then said he wore the whiskers in order to avoid catching cold. He will be arraigned in court to-day.

THOUGHT DEAD 19 YEARS.

Now George A. Hull of Orange Is Trying to Straighten Out His Property.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 13.—George A. Hull, who recently returned to Orange after nineteen years' absence, during which time his family thought him dead, has asked the authorities of Orange for an adjustment of taxes on property on the east side of Prince Street. During his absence taxes and assessments have accrued on this propery amounting to $1,134.40, in addition to interest and costs. Mr. Hull has asked for a reduction in the valuation of $500 a year on account of being a veteran of the First New Jersey Volunteers, and of an allowance on interest and costs, to enable him to clean off the liens. When Mr. Hull went away he owned property in Orange, East Orange, and South Orange. His wife sold some of the land, believing him to be dead, and collected rents from the houses. Since his return Hull has given new deeds for this property.

B. R. T. INJUNCTION VACATED.

Barge Owners Blamed Loss of Scows to Waste Hot Water.

The assertion that waste hot water discharged from the power house of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, at Third Avenue and Third Street, has been responsible for the sinking of barges and scows in Gowanus Canal is made in injunction proceedings before the Supreme Court in Brooklyn.

The proceedings have been brought by John Morton's Sons Company to restrain the railroad company from continuing the discharge of hot water from its power house into the canal where the plaintiffs have a brick yard. They declare that for some time past their scows have been springing leaks at the yard and sinking, and they allege that the leaks are due to the hot water warping the planks on the bottom of the scows.

Counsel for the railroad company contended that the uneven bottom of the canal on the defendant's side, and not the hot water, was responsible for the damage.

The matter came before Justice Herrick yesterday, on a motion to vacate a temporary injunction obtained by the Mortons. This injunction had been served on the railroad company, which, however, asserted that if it was forced to discontinue discharging the water into the canal it would have to close down the power house and that the trolley service of the borough would thus be practically tied up. Justice Herrick granted the motion to vacate the injunction. The plaintiffs are seeking to permanently enjoin the railroad, and the matter will come up again on Friday.

UNFINISHED SCHOOLS A SERIOUS QUESTION

Authorities Vexed at Delays Due to Labor Troubles.

EMPLOYERS PROMISE HELP

Work for Few Weeks Now Would Solve Problem, Which Is Said to be Worst in Years.

The Building Committee of the Board of Education is very much disappointed because, so far, it has been unable to make any arrangements with the builders or the warring workmen by which work on the new schools may be continued.

Charles H. Adams, Chairman of the committee, said yesterday that the situation in regard to school building work was more serious than it had been for years. He directed yesterday that a list of the schools most urgently needed and the men required in each trade to complete them should be furnished to the Employers' Association. A committee consisting of a member from each union in the Building Trades' Alliance called twice yesterday to see Mr. Adams, but did not meet him. He arranged to meet the committee this afternoon.

It was learned that arrangements were made last week by which work could be resumed on the manual training school in Brooklyn and Public School 13, in Brooklyn, but the Brooklyn Board of Walking Delegates prevented a settlement yesterday. The training school will accommodate 2,400 pupils and School 13 will seat 1,400. Both buildings were delayed because the union men would not work with members of the non-union electrical workers, formed by the Employers' Association. Last week members of Electrical Workers' Union No. 3, the old union, went to the contractor for the work, and said that if the new men were removed work could go on in the two schools. This was agreed to, and the electrical workers were removed to another job, but yesterday the Brooklyn walking delegates refused to allow work to be resumed unless the Board of Education revoked the contract.

Mr. Adams said that there was grave danger of carrying the work on the delayed schools into next Summer's building season, when new building strikes might further delay them. The addition to School No. 165, in One Hundred and Eighth Street, west of Amsterdam Avenue, which is to accommodate 800 more children, was to have been completed some time ago, he said, but the plasterers are out, and it cannot be finished.

"Two weeks would finish work in this school," he said. "Other schools delayed by the labor troubles are Public Schools 31, in Monroe Street, which will seat 900 pupils; No. 110, in Cannon Street, which will seat 850; No. 81, in Queens, which will seat 2,400, and a number of smaller schools. A week or two of work would finish these schools. The worst feature is the valuable time wasted. More could be done now in five days than in five or six weeks in the Winter. I can see no light in the situation."

Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee of the Employers' Association, said yesterday that the employers were waiting to get the lists from the Board of Education.

"As soon," he said, "as we know the schools where men are needed we will guarantee to man them, alliance or no alliance."

Regarding the general situation, he said: "I see no sign of any settlement now. It is a fight to a finish. We are getting new men more quickly and forming new unions."

CAN'T GET AT BOOKS.

Order Refused in Standard Lead and Smelting Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Sept. 13.—Vice Chancellor Emery heard further testimony to-day in the proceedings brought early in July by Frank P. White for the appointment of a receiver for the Standard Lead and Smelting Company. James P. Douglas, President of the concern, who previously testified that he leased five acres of the company's property to Benjamin Crawley, the lease covering the shafts, mills, and entire operating plant, declared to-day that this action had been formally approved by the Board of Directors.

Edward S. Savage, counsel for the complainant, urged that an order be made compelling the production of the books of the concern for examination in order that the solvency or insolvency of the corporation might be ascertained.

"Here is a President," said Mr. Savage, "who has $250 invested, a mere dummy, in charge of the business of a million-dollar corporation, and the only way we have of finding out the company's financial status is by getting hold of the books."

Mr. McDermott, who said that he represented over 900,000 shares of stock out of a total issue of 1,000,000, opposed the production of the books for the sole purpose, he maintained, of affording the complainant a weapon with which to attack the defendant corporation in some other suit. The Vice Chancellor denied the application for an order to have the books produced. The hearing was continued.

GET BRIDGE STONE THROWERS.

Three Boys Arrested Who Annoyed Passengers on Brooklyn Trolleys.

For several weeks past the Brooklyn Bridge police have been receiving complaints to the effect that boys were in the habit of standing on the promenade and throwing stones and garbage into the passing trolley cars.

Acting Capt. Phillips yesterday detailed Policemen Rodigan, Gude, and Doyle to hunt up the trouble-makers, and they arrested three boys who were caught in the act of throwing pebbles at passengers in the cars. The boys said they were Carmine Palita of 214 Prospect Street, Brooklyn, John Christiana of the same address, and Ralph Sena of 205 Prospect Street. Each gave his age as fourteen years.

They were held for examination in the Children's Court to-morrow.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

WATRES—JACKSON.

Miss Dorothy Jackson, daughter of the late Stanway Jackson of Manchester, England, was married yesterday afternoon to Harold Watres of Scranton, Penn., at the Englewood Presbyterian Church, at Englewood, N. J., by the Rev. Dr. S. M. Hamilton. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Jackson, as maid of honor, and the Misses Alice Jackson, Louise Kerr, Elizabeth Parke, Alice Coe, and Anna Rochester were the bridesmaids. The ushers were L. H. Watres, C. D. Kerr, A. D. Charles, and D. Z. Hutchings of Englewood, and M. H. Parke, G. H. Lathrope, and F. I. Linen of Scranton.

WILLIAMSON—HUMES.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 13.—The wedding of Plitty W. Williamson of New York and Miss Jane Louise Humes of Cortland this evening in the First Presbyterian Church was one of the social events of the season. The Rev. Robert Clements performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large number of guests. Miss Humes was given away by her father, Oberlin...

IN THE SHOPS.

Here are odd little individual salts, or they are a trifle large for that, which would make pretty card party prizes. They are of pottery, little shallow, round dishes, bound around the edges with nickel and with pottery-handled salt shovels, the shovel part of the nickel. They are 55 cents now, but have been double that.

***

In buying clothes hampers, the housewife has a wide variety from which to choose. They may be as costly or as inexpensive as desired. They are to be found in willow usually, and in one of the less expensive grades a good square-covered hamper will cost $1.25. That is a small one, 19 inches high, and a round one in the same height of a better grade willow, and with a pretty braided handle, will cost $3.50. The hampers range in price according to size and quality up to $8 or $9. There are many fancy straws which are made up into hampers, and in different colors, but these, as a rule, are bought chiefly for Christmas gifts on the principle that a useful gift must at least have a gay outward appearance, though the plain willow basket is more satisfactory as a rule.

***

In fancy straws there are smaller pieces in colors which are more satisfactory. There are many pretty little work baskets which are reasonable in price and pretty as well. A pretty little shallow basket with handles is made of the Japanese straw with a little design in color, a soft pink or green running through the centre, and they are only 29 cents.

***

Different styles of straw or wicker paper holders cost 40, 50, and 60 cents. These are open at the lower part, do not hold dust, and are large enough for a number of papers. Square candy baskets costing from 10 cents up are other pretty things that come in fancy straw with hair receivers, handkerchief boxes, whisk broom holders, &c., at low prices.

***

There is not much change in the various games for the children, and the old standbys last indefinitely. Sherlock Holmes is one of the new ones. It is on the order of "Pit," is delightfully suggestive of burglars and detective work, and costs 50 cents.

***

The old time oulja board is still going under the name of planchette. It costs only 25 cents, and writes as mysteriously as when it was first brought out.

***

Buster Brown is dissected in a puzzle at a very low price, only 10 cents.

***

One of the most satisfactory dissected maps is that of the United States, the pieces cut by States, which gives the youngsters a good idea of these as they put the puzzle together. This is comparatively costly, but cheap for a good lesson in geography, 39 cents.

***

"Sliced Nations" is suggestive of wars. The inhabitants of the different countries are arranged in lines, and then sliced up into long, slender pieces, as the name implies. America heads the list, and others of the larger countries are given. China and Russia being among them. Japan is not considered of sufficient importance to be sliced. All this for 10 cents.

***

Shopping bags of twine in a pretty shade of pearl gray are selling at a reduced price for 50 cents. They are less likely to become soiled than the white, and are nicer looking than the dark brown.

***

Pretty little imported pins, that fancy French jewelry, small brooches, are selling for 25 cents each. There are birds' heads, something like that of the cockatoo, with a long bill and a pearl in it; hounds' heads have jewelled eyes, and another style is a stork. All are pretty and worth while.

***

For the woman who is beginning to think of warm Winter clothing there are pretty lace edged flannel gowns made with a tucked yoke, and which have for the woman who is troubled with cold feet stocking attachments which are buttoned to the gown. With these, in the ordinary sizes, the gowns are $1.50 each, and $1.35 without them. In extra sizes the plain gown is $1.50.

***

Night gowns for the baby who is too little to wear the bifurcated garments, come in special styles made extra long, and with a shirring string drawing the gown up at the lower edge under the feet. In a silk finish knitted material, these cost $1.35, $1.40, and $1.50.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—There are two features of special interest on the weather map to-night. One a marked high area with abnormally low temperature over the Northwest and Central West, the latter extending into the Lower Missouri and Upper Mississippi Valleys. The temperatures range from 8 to 23 degrees below the seasonal average, and killing frosts with freezing temperatures occurred quite generally Tuesday morning in Montana and North Dakota. The other feature is rapidly falling pressure on the South Atlantic Coast, indicating the possible approach of a storm toward that vicinity, and storm warnings have been ordered from Savannah to Fort Monroe.

During Wednesday the cool wave will advance eastward and southeastward over the lake region and Ohio Valleys and the West Gulf States, and during Thursday into the lower lake region and Atlantic States. It will be warmer Wednesday in the Northwest and warmer Thursday in the Middle and North Slope, the Missouri and Upper Mississippi Valleys, and western upper lake region. There will be showers Wednesday in the central valleys, the lake region, the West Gulf and interior of the Eastern Gulf States and along the South Atlantic Coast, and showers Thursday in the Atlantic and East Gulf States and eastern lower lake region.

The weather will be fair Wednesday and Thursday in the West, and fair Thursday in the Ohio Valley, the upper lake and western lower lake region.

On the New England Coast the winds will be fresh to brisk east to south; on the Middle Atlantic Coast, light to fresh east to northeast; on the South Atlantic Coast, brisk to high northeast, except fresh on the Florida Coast; on the Gulf Coast, fresh and variable, becoming north; on the upper lakes, brisk northwest to north; on the lower lakes, fresh east to south, becoming northeast by Wednesday.

Steamships departing Wednesday for European ports will have fresh to brisk easterly winds with partly cloudy to cloudy weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Cloudy Wednesday, rain by night; Thursday rain and cooler; fresh to brisk northeast to north winds.

New England—Partly cloudy Wednesday, warmer in north portion, rain at night and Thursday, cooler Thursday; fresh east to south winds, becoming north Thursday.

Western New York—Showers Wednesday and Thursday, cooler Thursday; fresh southeast to south winds, shifting to northwest.

Western Pennsylvania—Showers Wednesday; Thursday fair, cooler; fresh south winds, shifting to northwest.

The following special weather bulletin was issued last night:

"Northeast storm warnings are displayed from Savannah to Fort Monroe. Some evidences of disturbances approaching Carolina coast may cause high northeasterly winds to-night and Wednesday."

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

A TIMELY WORD TO BANKERS.
The value of the collateral in your loans is changing steadily for better or for worse, as the properties represented by the collateral develop. Often these changes are noticed only by careful study of the operations of the properties. The quoted prices of the collateral are frequently no criterion whatever. It is therefore a positive help to have your bank equipped with the representative daily paper of Wall Street, which makes a specialty of studies in value and posts you on securities.

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Easy, 1@1 1-2.

The Produce Market Still Excited and Strong — Stock Market Reflects Difference of Opinions.

The influences making for reaction in the stock market brought up their reserves yesterday, and yet the day's business ended in a drawn battle, which rather leaves the presumption in favor of the advocates of higher prices. The conflict of opinion and values of course is over the crop outlook. The Government's report of conditions for the past week is encouraging, but the prognosis is dubious. The light frost of Sunday and Monday—on which values were depressed so freely—was confined to insignificant portions of the crop regions, and "nearly the whole of the most productive part of the corn belt, having experienced very favorable conditions for maturing the crop, with favorable weather will be safe from injury by Oct. 1st in the more northern districts. Much corn is already safe, cutting being general in the central and southern portions of the corn belt." So far so good; but Wall Street does not make values on anything whatever which is past, and the official prophecy is less encouraging than the history. The prediction was for "heavy frost to-night west of the Upper Mississippi, and light frost in Kansas," with further specifications which Wall Street farmers construe according to their wishes rather than according to facts beyond correct ascertainment at the moment.

The construction of the Produce Exchange was embodied in a smaller advance than on Monday for wheat, with a larger advance in corn. The construction of the Stock Exchange appears in a range of quotations altered according to considerations affecting speculative conditions rather than the crop outlook. The decline of Louisville and Nashville, Southern and Southern Pacific can hardly have any direct relation to frost above or below the Canada border. And the strength in American Locomotive and Pennsylvania can hardly be said to be convincing regarding the yield in bushels of either corn or wheat. Such variations are non sequiturs. And outside of these leading issues the alterations of prices were so small and irregular as to leave any one free to think whatever he likes regarding the crop outlook. The strength of the crop options is most marked in districts nearest the harvest region, but, on the other hand, their excitement is extravagant upon any possible estimate of damage. It can hardly be doubted that just as Monday was about the best time to sell stocks, about now is the best time to sell produce. Cotton was shipped back to the shores which exported it during the ridiculous rise of last year, and a range of grain values which is on the border of the import point carries possibilities of calling in the Old World's supplies to redress the vagaries of New World speculators. The offers of Russian wheat in this market which were impracticable a few days ago become more reasonable with each new maximum in this market and every advance like that in Minneapolis of 9 cents in a single day. The fact that stock declines average smaller on a reduced volume of business under yesterday's alarums shows the general market to be in a condition more disposed to await facts than to be stampeded by presumptions or inferences.

Argentine Orders 640 Freight Cars.

William B. Deming, export agent for the Middletown Car Works, announced yesterday that he had secured the largest single order for cars for export ever placed in this market. It is for 640 freight cars for the Argentine Government, and at the same time an order for thirty-eight passenger, baggage, and sleeping cars was placed with the Wason Manufacturing Company. Delivery of the freight cars will begin next month.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Weather, Frosts, Crop Scare, Declines, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, Rally.

Monday's decline was continued in yesterday's market, and for a time things looked blue. Until late in the afternoon the whole list was shaky, and after most stocks had sold off a point and more some real bear talk began to be heard. For once the weather was not a tabooed topic. One might have thought that the Stock Exchange had been turned into an afternoon tea, to judge from the small talk about the temperature. From the West came alarming reports about frosts—not frosts which had happened, but frosts which were scheduled to occur during the night. The wheat and corn pits were in a turmoil, the prices of both commodities soaring while stocks sold off. The grangers particularly were weak, Union Pacific and Atchison being the leaders. Although transactions exceeded the million-share mark the pressure was not as strong as on Monday.

A Banking View of the Situation.

One of the prominent private bankers who is sticking strictly to business instead of attending the Bankers' Association Convention said that anything over 2,000,000,000 bushels of corn would be a satisfactory crop, although 2,500,000,000 was what we ought to have. "If," he said, "the corn crop turns out well a higher level of prices is justified; if it falls a decline will be certain. Our market is based on good crop expectations. Two weeks of good weather will decide the matter. So far there has not enough damage been done to corn to speak of. As to cereal prices, they are too high, and only speculators will pay them. You can't sell wheat to any one else at $1.21 a bushel."

Strength of Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Railroad was a tower of strength in the otherwise weak and hesitating market. The transactions in this stock amounted to 116,215 shares, and it advanced to 129½ during the last half hour. There were all kinds of rumors about the property, one of them to the effect that it was buying an interest in Southern Railway, but the stories received effective denials. Pennsylvania is considered cheap at these prices by well-informed men, and this is said to be one reason for its strength. The other, which offers a more satisfactory explanation, is that Pennsylvania was selected as an objective point on which to centre all efforts to rally the market. The effort was fairly successful, though it must be said that the market's response was not highly enthusiastic.

A Southern Railway Pool.

The advance in Southern Railway common was entirely due to manipulation by a big pool said to aggregate 200,000 shares and operating through a Broadway banking firm with German connections. The trading in this stock amounted to 163,900 shares and advanced the price to 33¾, though at the close there was a reaction of one point.

***

As to Money.

"If our crops are going to be ruined," said one facetious broker, "we will at least have not much use for money to move them; therefore money should continue easy." According to bankers that is what money will do, for, although it is expected to get a little dearer than it now is, there is no reason to fear that it will become tight.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

In the week ended Sept. 10 there were received and forwarded at, Indianapolis a total of 28,340 cars, and of that number 21,228 were loaded cars, against 22,378 corresponding week 1903 and 21,174 in 1902.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—There was a sharp contraction in to-day's business, traders continuing to be in doubt as to the immediate future course of prices. Generally quotations were lower, under the leadership of Reading, which broke sharply under the catching of stop loss orders. Prices generally sought the lower level, but United Gas Improvement was taken in hand in the afternoon and run up from 95 to 96¾ on the report that it was to be placed on a 10 per cent. dividend basis. Its advance strengthened the local list generally, and temporarily suspended the liquidation started in the morning. Total sales, 49,893 shares, $44,100 bonds.

OAKLEY WANTS MILLION MORE.

Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity Submits 1905 Estimate.

John T. Oakley, Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, has submitted his estimate for his department for the city budget of 1905. The figures for 1904 were $4,799,852 23. The demand for the incoming year is $5,915,004.44, which is an increase of $1,115,152.21 over last year's figures.

The Commissioner justifies his larger demands on the ground of needed improvements, repairs, and also increases in salaries. For increases in salaries for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx $75,927 is demanded, for the Borough of Brooklyn $26,486, for Queens $18,882, and for Richmond $7,862.

For repairs and improvements for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx the Commissioner wants $3,454,177, which is an increase of $752,098 over last year. For Brooklyn $1,220,421 are the figures which the Commissioner had for 1904. He demands $151,285 more for 1905. For Queens he asks $158,216 increase for 1905. For Richmond Mr. Oakley asks for an increase of $53,584.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Hearing Yesterday on Dutiable Classification of Radium.

Importers Claim That It Is a Crude Mineral Likely to be Overruled—Keep Minute Sample in a Safe.

A hearing on the dutiable classification of radium was held yesterday by General Appraiser Lunt, who is considering the appeal of H. Lieber & Co., who have made practically all the commercial importations of this metal, against its classification as a chemical salt at 25 per cent. The importers claim that it should be free of duty as a crude mineral.

H. Lieber of the importing firm said that the metal was imported in the form of a bromide, and that it had to pass through many and intricate processes of refining to reach that state. A small sample of radium, inclosed in a tiny glass tube, was submitted by Mr. Lieber, and was carefully locked away in the strongest safe in the building.

Mr. Lunt will probably write his decision this week. It is understood that he will overrule the contention of the importers.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Microscope Slides Must Pay 60 Per Cent. Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision written by Gen. T. S. Sharretts the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled protests by Elmer & Amend and William Krafft of New York against the classification of microscope slides with beveled edges as articles of glass ground and ornamented at 60 per cent. The slides in question have a small circular concavity in the centre, in which the specimens to be examined are placed. The importers claimed that they were dutiable at 1⅝ cents a pound and 5 per cent. or at 45 per cent., but Gen. Sharretts decided that the beveling constituted ornamentation and that the cavity was produced by grinding.

General Appraiser Marion De Vries writes a decision overruling a protest by Adolph Fricke of New York against the classification as colored cotton cloth at 2¾ cents a square yard, under the "countable clauses" of the law, of cotton cloth containing a single colored yarn running near the edge of the fabric. The importer claimed that it was dutiable as unbleached cotton cloth at 1¼ cents a square yard. Mr. De Vries rules that the single thread is enough to put it in the colored class.

Protests overruled yesterday were by Park & Tilford and B. H. Howell, Son & Co., New York; Schlesinger & Mayer, Marshall Field & Co., and Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; Paul Gelpi & Sons, New Orleans; the Schloss Crockery Company and Arthur Letts, Los Angeles; Arthur Peter & Co., Louisville, and Fritz Thies, Denver. Protests partially sustained were by Remy, Schmidt & Pleissner, Luyties Brothers, H. Maillard, F. Alleva, J. B. Martin, and Louis Metzger & Co., New York; the Weideman Company, Cleveland, and the Callender, McAuslan & Troup Company, Providence, R. I. A protest by the Weideman Company, Cleveland, was sustained.

AUTOMOBILE VALUES ADVANCED.

General Appraisers Find Invoice Prices Too Low—Regulations for Free Entry.

Several advances in the invoice values of imported automobiles were announced yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers. The advances were made by General Appraiser Lunt. One was a 40 horse power Mercedes machine, Chassis motor, entered at 30,000f. and advanced to 32,135f. It was shipped by Boin & Constantin of Nice. The following advances were made on machines from the Napier Motor Company of London: One Cape cart head, 15 horse power, entered at £715 and advanced to £760; one canopy top, 15 horse power, from £740 to £785; one 24 horse power machine, from £930 to £1,015, and one Pullman body, 24 horse power machine, from £935 to £1,135; £30 was also added for packing charges. One second-hand 40 horse power Napier motor carriage, shipped by S. F. Edge of London, was advanced from £650 to £800.

The Treasury Department yesterday issued a circular defining the conditions attending the free admission as household effects of an automobile used abroad for one year. The year of use need not have immediately preceded importation, nor need it have been consecutive, but the use must have been by the owner or a member of his family and not by a friend or chauffeur.

The debts were contracted principally in Chicago between 1901 and 1904. Among the creditors are Charles Page Bryan of Elmhurst, Ill., $15,000, secured; Ruth A. Wyllis, Rogers Park, Ill., $6,400, secured; City Bank of Canton, Ill., $5,000, and the estate of John G. Whitcomb of Somerville, Mass., $7,148.

STANDARD STRAW HAT MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Standard Straw Hat Manufacturing Company of Thirteenth Street and Ninth Avenue by the following creditors: G. F. Hall Company, $25; Louis Lesser, $7,000, for money loaned, and Philip L. Sondheim, $47. It was alleged that on Sept. 12 the company admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts and willingness to be adjudged bankrupt. Leo A. Levy is President, Rosalie Sessler Secretary and Treasurer. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed Edward L. Patterson receiver of the assets, and fixed his bond at $15,000. The value of the assets was not given in the petition, but it was stated that they consist of plant and machinery, merchandise, manufactured and in process; raw materials, accounts, and unfinished contracts which need to be carried out. The company was incorporated under New York laws on March 12, 1903, with a capital stock of $40,000, and was financed up to April last by a Fifth Avenue straw goods firm, who were large stockholders in the company, but the sold their stock, and it was said that at that time the company owed the firm $65,000.

ACCUSED PARTNER'S BROTHER.

Corbin Estate Lawyer Objected to Smashing of Office Furniture.

James Armstrong, attorney for the Corbin estate, was the complainant in the Tombs Court yesterday, before Magistrate Mayo, against Samuel E. Brown, brother of Albert W. Brown, a partner of Mr. Armstrong, whom he charged with disorderly conduct.

Mr. Armstrong told Magistrate Mayo that Brown came to the office and demanded to see his brother, to collect a debt of $80. When he did not see him, Mr. Armstrong said, the prisoner smashed furniture and bric-a-brac. Mr. Armstrong said he became frightened and ran to the street and got Patrolman Sharpe of the Church Street Station, who arrested Brown.

Patrolman Sharpe said that Mr. Armstrong, when he ran to him on the street, was much excited and said: "There's a crazy man in my office. You had better get help to arrest him." Sharpe said that Brown had become rational again when he met him.

Mr. Armstrong also told the court that Brown was at the office on Friday trying to get the money, and that time he not only smashed some desks, but assaulted a clerk with a chair. Mr. Armstrong said he was tired of Brown's actions.

"Weren't you arraigned before me once before on a charge of selling some $300 worth of opium?" queried Magistrate Mayo of Brown.

"Oh, that's dead and gone," replied Brown. "Let's try this case first, and then we can talk about that if you want to."

"I'm afraid you haven't a very good idea of the difference between right and wrong," added the court. The case was temporarily adjourned, and later, on Brown's promise to keep away from the office, he was discharged.

Damage Suit Verdict Set Aside.

LYONS, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Supreme Court Justice Dunwell handed down a decision today setting aside as excessive damages of $35,000 in favor of John E. INSTRUCTION.

A Boy That Failed to make progress at a noted New England academy entered the Groff School recently with several having had similar experiences at other large schools. They were all put into Yale and other large colleges the following September without a condition, one year ahead of their former classmates, and their present standing at college is very high. Mr. Groff's experience with these boys is typical of the success he has had for ten years.

THE GROFF SCHOOL,

228 West 72d St., New York,

now occupying the most handsome school quarters in New York, is ideal and exceptional as a boarding and day school. School home conducted somewhat as a fraternity house.

No young and inexperienced teachers to experiment with students.

Exceptional individual attention, the number being strictly limited to 25. No very young boys admitted. Handsome study parlors, billiard room, electric elevator, and full and free use of skating rink, bowling alleys, fencing hall, gymnasium, &c.

Proper and judicious supervision of the daily life of all students of the school, but all foolish school discipline, military drill, and consequent loss of time eliminated.

SEVEN SUFFOCATED IN TENEMENT FIRE

Family and Boarders in First Street House Didn't Wake.

INCENDIARY WORK SUSPECTED

Woman Saw Two Men Leaving House Before Blaze—Many Rescues—Twins Lose Their Lives.

Seven persons were killed by suffocation and two others were seriously injured in a fire that started in the five-story brick tenement house at 70 First Street early yesterday morning. It was the second fatal fire within two weeks on the east side, but unlike the building in Attorney Street in which fifteen persons perished, the fire-escapes on the First Street house were all in good order, and, according to the police and firemen, the loss of several of the lives was due to the fact that the tenants failed to wake up and were suffocated in bed.

The dead are:

KONOWITZ, ANTON, cloakmaker, 30 years old.
KONOWITZ, ANNIE, wife of above, 24 years old.
The five-weeks-old Konowitz twins.
KASZTOLAN, STEPHEN, tailor, 26 years old.
TUSEWICZ, ANTON, tailor, 25 years old.
TUROWICH, ANTON, tailor, 25 years old.

The injured are Berkow Landman, a peddler, whose face and hands were badly burned, and Mrs. Susan Zerger, who fell from a fire-escape on the second floor to the ground, and was severely bruised. Twenty-five families lived in the house.

The fire started in the hallway on the first floor and mounted rapidly to the top floor, where it spread. On that floor all the dead were found. At just 2 o'clock two young men, Charles Katz and William Foley, heard a cry of "Fire!" as they were standing on First Avenue, near the house. Running up, they tried to break into the house. Being unable to knock the door in, they climbed up to the awning over the delicatessen store windows on the ground floor, and managed to get hold of the bottom of the first-floor fire-escape. Foley lowered the ladder on the fire-escape to the ground and then both men got into the house through the window, and went scurrying through the tenement, waking the tenants. The men succeeded in waking everybody on the first and second floors and hurried to the third floor, from which they took five children and helped several others down.

Some one meanwhile had sent in a fire alarm. In the meantime Policemen Wynne and Fitzgerald of the Fifth Street Police Station had reached the scene. Both did a lot of rescue work, especially Wynne, who saved four members of the Lippman family, Mrs. Clara Hussey, and Susan Jaeger, all of whom lived on the third floor. Berkow Landman of the same floor was rescued by Fitzgerald, while Policeman Aulds of the Eldridge Street Station rescued Mrs. Landman.

All these rescues occupied but a few minutes. Just as Aulds got Mrs. Landman to the sidewalk Engine Company No. 25 lumbered up. Firemen Pregener and Gropp climbed to the second floor with their scaling ladders, and soon had several of the panicken tenants on the fire-escape, ready to be lowered to safety a moment later, when Fire Patrol No. 7 arrived. The fire-patrol men immediately hoisted their fifteen-foot ladder, and in a little while all the tenants on this floor were rescued.

By this time Truck 9 was on the scene, and in less than a minute had its fifty-foot and twenty-five-foot ladders in position. The people on the third, fourth, and fifth floors were now crowding the fire-escapes, and it was all that the firemen could do to prevent them from losing complete control of themselves. The firemen found the first four victims on the top floor while the flames were still bright. The bodies were those of the Konowitzes and their twin babies. Mrs. Konowitz was in bed with her babes, and was close enough to the fire-escape to reach out and touch it had she been awakened in time. Konowitz was found on the floor near the door leading into the hall. The other three bodies were found in the Konowitz flat. These victims were boarders of the family.

Ambulance Surgeon Parce went up, and found that two of the boarders were still alive. He worked over the men, but was unable to resuscitate them.

William Shireman, the janitor of the burned house, told the police an attempt was made to fire the tenement last Thursday night.

Mrs. Louis Bennow of 71 First Street, who discovered the fire yesterday morning, said that shortly before she discovered it two men, whose faces she could not see, emerged from the tenement and went around the corner to First Avenue.

NOT DRUNK, HIS SKULL BROKEN.

Curb Broker Kent Once Rated as Worth $1,000,000.

The death of Theodore Kent, sixty-seven years old, a Broad Street curb broker, was learned yesterday morning, when a friend appeared in the Tombs Court to pay any fine that might have been imposed against him on a supposed charge of being drunk and disorderly. The friend who appeared in court was George Draper, also a curb broker. When he asked about the case he found that his friend Kent had died in the Hudson Street Hospital of a fractured skull. Kent lived at Crook's Hotel, at 114 Park Row. For forty years he had been identified with Wall Street, and twenty-five years ago was rated at $1,000,000.

Draper told the court and the police that Monday, after the close of the curb market, Kent and two or three other brokers went to a saloon on Pine Street, between Nassau and William Streets, where they had several drinks. On leaving, he said, Kent stumbled over a low step and fell heavily to the sidewalk. He was unconscious, and as he did not regain consciousness an ambulance from the Hudson Street Hospital was summoned and Kent was taken to the hospital.

An hour later Draper went to the hospital to see what could be done for Kent, and was told that Kent was so drunk that he had been taken to the Oak Street Station. Draper said the hospital authorities said there was nothing else the matter with him.

Draper said he then went to the Oak Street Station to offer bail for Kent, but the Sergeant said that Kent's condition was such that he could not accept bail. Early in the morning Draper again went to the Oak Street Station to see about getting Kent some breakfast, and the Sergeant at the desk at that time told him, he said, that Kent's condition had become so serious during the night that he was taken again to the Hudson Street Hospital. When Draper got into court, prepared to pay any fine, he was informed that Kent had died of a fractured skull.

Kent for a generation had been a familiar figure on the curb market.

COURT CENSURES CONNORTON.

Magistrate Neglected Proper Procedure Under Law Just Put Into Effect.

Magistrate Connorton of Long Island City came in for criticism yesterday in connection with the case of John Jones of South Sixth Street, Brooklyn, who was accused of cruelty to animals. District Attorney Gregg asked that the case be adjourned for a week, and it developed that Magistrate Connorton had sent the papers to the Special Sessions Court without having submitted the evidence to the District Attorney, as required by the new law.

Judge Courtney, one of the three Judges before whom the case came up in the Court of Special Sessions in Jamaica, said:

"I am very sorry to hear that Magistrate Connorton has shown ignorance of the law. No cases can be tried in this court that have not passed through the proper channels. I understand also that Magistrate Connorton's clerk threw down the papers in this case when the Clerk of the court refused to accept them because the proper procedure had not been followed. Such incompetency cannot be tolerated."

WANTS GRAND JURY TO ACT.

Coroner's Jury Declares State Hospital Patient's Injuries Not Self-Inflicted.

A Coroner's jury of eight physicians and four laymen in the inquest to determine what led to the death of Abraham Wendorff, under rather peculiar circumstances, in the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island, May 1 last, returned a verdict yesterday that the man's injuries were not self-inflicted and recommending that a thorough investigation of the affair be made by the Grand Jury.

An autopsy performed on Wendorff's body soon after he died disclosed the fact that eight of his ribs were fractured, that both of his eyes were blackened, and that he had contusions on various parts of his body. After the autopsy Harris Wendorff, a brother of the dead man, declared that he believed his brother had been beaten by the hospital attendants, and demanded a thorough investigation.

At the inquest yesterday Dr. John R. Knapp, house surgeon of the hospital, said that he examined the patient when he was received and found no broken ribs, but added that a man might have eight fractured ribs and an examination fail to disclose them. Dr. Knapp would not admit that Wendorff's ribs might have been fractured by the attendants. He said that in cases of paresis a patient's bones become very brittle and may be fractured by a slight pressure. Seven physicians, he added, had examined Wendorff and had not discovered the fractured ribs.

Mrs. Julia Wendorff, the dead man's sister-in-law, who called on him shortly before his death, testified as follows:

"I heard him scream two or three times while I was waiting, and tried to get to him, but they would not let me. When I did get in he was tied down to the bed, his eye cut and his face bruised. I went over on Sunday and they told me he died at 9 o'clock.

HAD HIS DAUGHTERS ARRESTED

Italian Thought They Robbed Him, and Then Changed His Mind.

Luigi Legone, an Italian shoemaker of 224 East Thirty-fourth Street, called at the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station last night and told Sergt. Bremer that he had been robbed of $280 while asleep on the lounge in his own parlor. He said that he thought his daughters, Theresa, twenty-one years old, and Vincenza, nineteen years old, were guilty of the theft, and asked that they be arrested.

Policeman Dougherty was sent out with Legone, and the girls were locked up. When searched at the station the money was not found, nor was it in their room, so they were charged with being "suspicious" persons. Legone said that Vincenza was to be married Sept. 25, and that she had asked him for some money with which to buy her wedding dress. About an hour after the girls had been placed in their cells their father returned to the station and said that he would like to withdraw the charge.

This, however, he could not do until the prisoners had been arraigned before the Magistrate.

CIVIL ENGINEERS WELCOMED.

Mayor McClellan Tenders the Freedom of the City to Them.

As guests of the American Institute of Civil Engineers, 150 delegates from the Institution of Civil Engineers of Great Britain to the Engineering Congress, which will be held in St. Louis in October, began a week of sightseeing in this city yesterday. The members of the party were officially welcomed at the home of the American Society, in West Fifty-seventh Street, where an address of welcome was made on behalf of the society by Charles Hermany of Louisville, Ky., President of the organization. Sir William White, the naval architect, as President of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Great Britain, responded.

Mayor McClellan welcomed the visitors at the City Hall later, and tendered to them the freedom of the city.

BIG LINERS TAX CUSTOMS MEN.

Four Arrive Simultaneously with 2,189 Cabin Passengers—Ellis Island Crowded.

Four big ocean steamships arrived simultaneously yesterday morning, and so crowded the customs officers that passengers had a hard time getting through with official red tape. Twenty-two hundred people arrived on the four liners, bringing with them over 10,000 pieces of baggage. The Kronprinz Wilhelm, with 809 cabin passengers, taxed the capacity of the customs accommodations, and when the Grosser Kurfurst arrived with 727 in her cabins, the Finland with 453, and the Mesaba with 200 more, the Inspectors and examiners took off their coats for a hard day's work. Besides the cabin passengers brought by the steamships there were 4,063 steerage passengers, who were taken to Ellis Island. That place was badly overcrowded, and almost 1,500 people were compelled to remain there over night.

EAGLES GATHER IN BALTIMORE.

Handsome Gift for Grand Worthy President T. D. Sullivan.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13.—The fifth national convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles began in this city to-day at the Maryland Theatre. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Mayor E. Clay Timanus and Worthy President J. Albert Cassidy of Baltimore.

A handsome button for the lapel of his coat was presented to Grand Worthy President Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan of New York. It is a gold and enameled eagle, in the claws of which is held a large diamond; as a pendant, the eagle carries a golden key to the city of Baltimore.

The band of the Sixty-ninth New York Regiment, which accompanied the New York delegation, gave concerts this afternoon and evening in front of the new Maryland Theatre.

HELD AS BANK SWINDLER.

Liquor Dealer Accused of Selling Property to Defraud Creditor.

Accused of defrauding the Twelfth Ward Bank of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue out of $7,900, Sigmund Schulhafer, formerly a well-known liquor dealer, residing at 2,094 Fifth Avenue, was held, in default of $5,000 bail, for examination, in the Harlem Court yesterday.

F. B. French, cashier of the bank, was the complainant. Schulhafer conducted several liquor stores up town. It is charged that on March 2, 1903, he signed a statement of his property by which he obtained credit for $7,900 at the bank, giving a note for the amount. Then, it is said, he disposed of his liquor stores.

RABIES SPREADS IN ITHACA.

Aid Requested from State to Fight the Epidemic.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Health Officer Crum of this city to-day asked help from the State Health Department to control the threatened epidemic of rabies which has been developing here for the last two weeks.

Dr. James Law of the State Veterinary College reported to-day that the mad dog which ran amuck two weeks ago was afflicted with the worst kind of rabies. This conclusion was reached when guinea pigs which had been inoculated with the saliva from the mouth of the dog yesterday developed a bad form of genuine rabies.

Many other dogs also are going mad. The authorities consider the situation as critical. Several persons have been bitten by dogs supposed to have been mad, but hydrophobia has not developed as yet in any of the cases.

Strike at Idle Hour.

SAYVILLE, L. I., Sept. 13.—Twenty carpenters of the local union who were employed on W. K. Vanderbilt's Idle Hour extension went out on strike yesterday by order of the city union headquarters. The carpenters were induced to fill vacancies when the city mechanics were called off about a month ago. Union complications now force them out.

With the young men, our Fall Suits seem to have the call. They enjoy and demand all the little earmarks of style—the slightly longer cut coat, higher roll collar, the broad concave shoulders, and the long and somewhat broadened lapels.

Single and double breasted, in all the new brown colorings, as well as in the standard blacks, blues, grays, checks and stripes.

The price is moderate.

Governor—FRANK WAYLAND HIGGINS of Cattaraugus.

Lieutenant Governor—M. LINN BRUCE of New York.

Secretary of State—JOHN F. O'BRIEN of Clinton.

Attorney General—JULIUS M. MAYER of New York.

Controller—OTTO KELSEY of Livingston.

State Treasurer—JOHN WALLENMEIER, Jr., of Erie.

State Engineer and Surveyor—HENRY L. VAN ALSTINE of Columbia.

Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals—EDGAR M. CULLEN of Kings.

Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals—WILLIAM E. WERNER of Monroe.

A week ago it was announced in THE TIMES that the friends of Gov. Odell had agreed upon the nomination of Higgins for Governor and that of M. Linn Bruce for Lieutenant Governor. When the Governor was questioned next day by afternoon newspaper men as to the truth of the announcement, his comment was:

"It is a pipe dream."

At the close of the conference ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff announced that his position was unchanged. He said he still intended to go into the convention to-morrow and contest for the nomination with Mr. Higgins.

Didn't Interest Platt.

Senator Platt apparently took no interest in the doings of Gov. Odell and his friends. The Senator was apprised before dinner that it was the intention of Mr. Odell to have a conference of leaders in his room for the purpose of agreeing upon a slate, but the shades were pulled down on the windows of his cottage shortly after the conference in the cottage across the way had begun, and a persistent effort made by Mr. Woodruff and William Barnes of Albany to gain entrance about 10:30 o'clock failed. The Senator and his family evidently had retired for the night.

The conference in Odell's rooms began about 9 o'clock, and lasted until 11. The leaders who were seen to enter the Governor-Chairman's apartments were:

National Committeeman William L. Ward, President Murray of the New York County Committee, Executive Chairman Halpin, ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, George W. Aldridge, Louis F. Payn, Congressman Lucius N. Littauer, Edward Lauterbach, Congressman James S. Sherman, Speaker Nixon, Secretary of State John F. O'Brien, Senators Raines, Brackett, Brown, and Elsberg; Congressman Wadsworth, Francis Hendricks, Abraham Gruber, Senator Stevens, ex-Mayor Franchot of Olean, George Cromwell, ex-Senator Hobart Krum, and B. B. Odell, the father of the Governor.

When the conference broke up and the result was announced Gov. Odell was asked if he had anything to say as to the motive which led to the selection of Linn Bruce for Lieutenant Governor and Mr. Wallenmeier, Jr., for Treasurer, those being the only two places over which there had been doubt. Julius M. Mayer for Attorney General had been agreed upon at the conference held last night, and all the other candidates agreed upon for places on the State ticket will receive renominations, except Judges Cullen and Werner, who were agreed upon as the men to go on the judicial ticket some time ago.

"No, there is nothing to say," responded the Governor, "except that the action of the caucus was unanimously in favor of the nomination of Messrs. Bruce and Wallenmeier, just as it was on the selection of all the State officers who are to receive renominations."

No Suggestion from Platt.

"Was the suggestion of Mr. Bruce for Lieutenant Governor made by Senator Platt?"

"No, we received no suggestions from the Senator."

"What do you think of the ticket?"

"I think it is a strong ticket in every respect, and we will proceed to elect it. There is no doubt that we will be able to do so, and by a large majority."

There had been some talk during the evening of the probability of both Mr. Higgins and Mr. Woodruff withdrawing at the last moment and J. Sloat Fassett being made the nominee for Governor. Gov. Odell was asked about this report.

"I have heard nothing of it," he said. "No overtures for a compromise have come to me from Senator Platt and there can be no compromise now. The ticket agreed upon at the conference to-night will be nominated by the convention to-morrow."

One of the most important absentees from the Odell conference held to-night was William Barnes, leader of Albany County and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee.

While the conference was in progress Mr. Barnes was in a back room of Mr. Woodruff's cottage, in earnest consultation with him. About 10:30 o'clock he came out and went to the cottage of Senator Platt. He tried to get in, but failed.

Then he went to Mr. Woodruff's cottage and brought Mr. Woodruff back with him. They both tried all the doors of Senator Platt's apartments, but were unable to get a response. When asked if they had anything of serious importance to ask the Senator they said they had not.

Mr. Barnes then went into Gov. Odell's

DIVORCED MRS. CLARKE WEDS.

Catholic Court Approved Her Marriage to Mr. Donnelly.

Mrs. Alline Stocking Clarke, who was recently divorced from Charles Sumner Clarke, was married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Charles Donnelly, Jr., of Pittsburg in the parsonage of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The Rev. Father Richard O. Hughes officiated. The bridesmaid was Miss Kate Stocking, sister of the bride, and the best man was William Blakely of Pittsburg.

Mrs. Clarke wore a traveling dress. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Clarke went to the Hotel Manhattan, where Mrs. Clarke had gone on her arrival from Atlanta with her sister on Tuesday.

Owing to the fact that the Catholic Church was known to be opposed to the marriage of divorced persons, it was expected that the couple would meet with opposition. The rumor that Archbishop Farley had objected to the marriage had already been circulated when the wedding took place.

It was not until the service was over that it became known that the couple, knowing the attitude of the Catholic Church, had taken the pains to inquire concerning their standing. They did this soon after Mrs. Clarke had obtained her divorce, about two weeks ago. The case was referred to the Ecclesiastical Court of the Catholic Church with the religious standing of all the persons concerned and the finding of the court, in regard to the recent divorce which Mrs. Clarke obtained. In the words of a priest in the position to know, the Ecclesiastical Court took this ground:

"The Church says that baptized Christians may not marry unbaptized persons without dispensation. Mr. Clarke was unbaptized; therefore no marriage existed between Mr. and Mrs. Clarke in the eyes of the Church."

All those concerned were in town yesterday morning, the bridegroom with his best man stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria. Word of the favorable finding of the Ecclesiastical Court reached the bridegroom first, and he hurried to the parish house in a cab. He expected, of course, that his bride-to-be had been notified as well, and was rather nonplused when he reached the parish house to find that she was not there.

There was a hasty consultation by telephone, and this resulted in the arrival of a second cab bearing Mrs. Clarke and her sister.

Miss Stocking at the time of her marriage to Mr. Clarke was described as one of the most beautiful women in the South. Her marriage to Mr. Clarke took place at Atlanta on Jan. 9, 1896.

Two Men Refused to Help Drowning Lad —Mrs. Guyer Saves Him.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 14.—After two men had been appealed to in vain to rescue from drowning Leonard Beach, a six-year-old boy of this city, Mrs. John Guyer, who was near by when the little fellow fell into the water, plunged in and saved the boy's life.

He was playing on the dam of the Howell Hirshman pond, when he slipped. He was going down for the third time when Mrs. Guyer jumped in and held his head above the water until assistance arrived.

The boy was unconscious when rescued, and it was with great difficulty that he was revived.

BEGIN SUIT FOR HARLEM.

Descendants of Original Settlers Serve Notice on City Officials.

Papers in the suit of the various descendants of the twenty-three men who founded the Town of New Harlem, to recover from the City of New York all the land between Seventy-sixth Street and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, running from river to river, were served yesterday upon the Corporation Counsel and Controller. The action is brought by Toler & Nutting, the senior member of which firm is a brother of Henry Pennington Toler, who resigned from the Stock Exchange a year ago to press the case.

The papers are entitled "The Town of New Harlem, Plaintiff, versus The City of New York, Defendant." The claim sets forth that in the year 1664 Charles II. of England issued to his brother, the Duke of York, a charter conveying to him the Island of Manhattan; that in 1686 York issued a patent grant to the Freeholders of the Town of New Harlem, and the town was duly incorporated, embracing territory to which claim is made.

It is stated further that in 1688 the King of England, through his Deputy Governor, Thomas Dongan, issued a third grant to the inhabitants of New Harlem confirming the other two grants, and that this last grant is now on file at Albany. To the papers is affixed the seal of the Town of New Harlem embracing the years 1666 to 1903.

JAIL RATHER THAN $20 FINE.

Brooklyn Real Estate Owner Talks Back to Court.

Rather than pay a fine of $20, which he declared the court had no right to impose on him, Thomas J. Keenan, a South Brooklyn real estate owner, yesterday allowed himself to be committed to Raymond Street Jail for ten days. Mr. Keenan, who lives at 796 Bergen Street, intends to fight the case, and it will probably reach a higher court.

Among the houses owned by Keenan are two on Fifteenth Street. A sanitary Inspector connected with the Health Department complained that the cellars of these houses were not in proper condition. Keenan disputed this and the department had him before Magistrate O'Reilly, who ordered him to obey the orders of the department. Several weeks later the Inspector reported that no improvement had been made, and the matter then got before the Court of Special Sessions.

The case dragged on until yesterday, when Justice Fitzgerald told Keenan he would have to pay a fine of $20 or go to jail for ten days. Keenan said he would not pay the money and declared that the court had no right to impose the fine. The court gave him several minutes to decide as to what he would do.

Falling Pole Kills Boy.

Abraham Kleinman, thirteen years old, of 105 Clinton Street, was killed in a peculiar manner yesterday afternoon while playing at Clinton and Delancey Streets.

On the northeast corner a large building is being erected and trucks were delivering beams there all day yesterday. Shortly before 6 o'clock a truck driven by Thomas Kenny turned the corner. The rear wheels slipped on the asphalt and struck an iron electric-light pole. The pole was pulled over, and the Kleinman boy was struck. He was killed instantly. The driver was arrested.

LIGHTNING HITS TOWER OF NEWARK SKYSCRAPER

Police Fear Prudential's Structure Is Weakened.

BELLEVUE PUT IN DARKNESS

Furious Surf Lashes Coney Island and Lights Go Out—Harlem Suffers from Storm.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 14.—During a severe thunderstorm here to-night a bolt of lightning struck the north tower of the Prudential Insurance Company's Building on Bank Street and part of the structure fell to the ground, one piece crashing through the roof of the three-story building at 15 Bank Street.

It is feared that the tower, which is 264 feet high, has been weakened, and the police have stopped all traffic on Bank Street between Broad and Halsey. The tower is on the building opposite the main structure, which covers half of the block on the north side of Bank Street, between Broad and Halsey Streets. It is impossible to-night to learn the extent of the damage, but it is feared that it will amount to considerable, as a great quantity of debris fell into the street.

One huge boulder fell into Bank Street and crashed through the plateglass window of the office of the Fidelity Trust Company in the main building, at Bank and Broad Streets. Several large stones struck the roof of Police Headquarters, at 9 Bank Street, while another fell on the roof of a shed in the rear of the building at 17 Bank Street, completely demolishing the structure. The flash of lightning was followed by a terrific thunder clap that startled the entire business section of the city. The fall of the huge stones could be heard for nearly five blocks.

The lightning, striking the tower, ran down and struck the building at 11 Bank Street occupied by Griffin's restaurant. Here it passed from the dining room to the kitchen and out through a rear window. Charles Miller, the cook, was knocked from his feet, while Joseph C. Thomas and wife, who were eating supper, were both stunned.

The storm which the Weather Bureau predicted would strike New York last night descended on the city with all its fury at 8 o'clock promptly, and in ten minutes all five boroughs and neighboring places for a radius of thirty miles were flooded. Coney Island felt its effects most, and within a half hour after the storm started the place was as dead as it is in midwinter. The southeast wind raised an unusually high tide, which put the lower parts of the island entirely under water. Surf Avenue was flooded in all except a very few of the highest places, and the surf rolled unbroken up the Ocean Boulevard as far as Neptune Avenue.

An ordinarily large number of people were in the various places of amusement when the storm broke. They did not wait for any letting up of the rainfall, but bolted for the trains, leaving the island deserted. Then all of the electric lights were turned off, and at 9 o'clock the place was perfectly dark, except here and there where an arc light shed its rays. At the height of the storm the tracks of all of the roads running to the island were under water.

Harlem received a good drenching, and for a time One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street for a distance about Seventh Avenue stood almost knee-deep in water. A sudden burst of wind which passed through the street shortly after the storm started took with it awnings, signs, and showcases, leaving intact only the political banners, which had been hastily furled.

The electric lights in Bellevue Hospital were put out of commission during the storm last night, and the hospital was practically in darkness all night. The channel in which the wires were placed became filled with water, and the power was shut off.

When the lights went out attendants hustled around and secured a supply of candles, which were placed in the wards. The gas was turned on, but the light was very poor and was of no aid to the physicians. In the psychopathic ward there was no light for more than an hour until candles were placed in the ward, and nurses and doctors had considerable trouble with the patients. In the other wards there was also no light and the nurses were compelled to go about with candles.

Carl Hertzner, a tailor, thirty-five years old, of 304 East Houston Street, was instantly killed last night in front of the house at 40 Clinton Street by a piece of the fire escape which fell on him from the second floor.

The storm was most severe at the time, and he was walking along with an umbrella down over his head. Just as he reached the house, which is a six-story tenement, the front railing of the fire escape fell and struck him on the top of his head. The piece of iron weighed about 150 pounds.

It is thought that the wind was responsible for the accident.

TEARS SKIRT FOR BANDAGES.

Girl Binds Up Wounds of Teamster Train Hit.

A train of the Long Island Railroad bound for Sheepshead Bay yesterday afternoon struck a team of horses driven by William Pudusky of 278 Belmont Avenue, in Vesta Avenue, near Sutter Street, East New York. The outfit was wrecked and the horses badly injured. Pudusky was pinned down under the wreckage.

The train was quickly brought to a stop and the crew extricated Pudusky. A young woman passenger tore several strips from an underskirt with which to bind up a deep wound in the injured man's head. He was removed to the Bradford Street Hospital, and may die.

A similar accident occurred at the scene of yesterday's mishap a week ago.

Town Sues for Clams.

BABYLON, L. I., Sept. 14.—The suit of the Town of Babylon to test the validity of its ancient title to land under water in the Great South Bay, which has been in contemplation for several years, has finally been started in the shape of a civil action for damages against John Leech and William Darling of Sayville.

The town asks for the value of clams taken from ground under water in the Town of Islip, between the first and thirtieth days of May last.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 14.—D. R. U. S. CONSUL IS DISMISSED.

President Acts on Charges Against Robert M. McWade of Canton.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 14.—Robert M. McWade, United States Consul General at Canton, China, was removed to-day from office by President Roosevelt. Charges made against him recently were investigated by Assistant Secretary Peirce, who went to the Orient to make an investigation of several of the United States Consulates in China and Japan. Secretary Peirce in his report strongly sustained the charges made against McWade, and the order for his dismissal went forward this afternoon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The announcement of the removal of Consul General McWade came with a shock unusual in the passing dull period. It has been so long since any Government official went far enough wrong to feel the weight of official displeasure that there was keen curiosity to know what the Consul General had done. At the State Department nothing could be learned except that orders had been issued that nothing was to be said about the matter.

It is known that last January charges were filed at the State Department to the effect that McWade had been taking pay for issuing certificates to Chinamen who desired to come to America. These charges were not acted on at the time, but were handed over to Assistant Secretary Peirce, who has charge of the Consular Service. In February he set out on a tour around the world to inquire into complaints made against several Consular officials. Mr. Peirce went into the matter in Canton and heard Mr. McWade's defense. The case has been in his hands ever since, and it is understood that he sifted the evidence, which was not much in quantity, but very direct and conclusive, and made his report to the President at Oyster Bay.

McWade was appointed Dec. 9, 1902, on the recommendation of Senators Penrose and Quay. He has shown an interest in commercial matters and his reports to the Consular Bureau have been frequent and valuable. The removal takes effect to-day, and the Consulate has been placed in charge of the Vice Consul, Russell Colegrove. The Canton Consulate was worth in salary and fees $5,000 a year.

PRESIDENT'S SON IN CANADA.

Theodore, Jr., Traveling Incog. with a Physician—Going to Lake St. John.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 14.—The officials at the Windsor Station of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which also is the terminus of the New York Central, say that Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., passed through Montreal on his way to Lake St. John this morning. He was accompanied by Dr. Alexander Lambert as friend and physician, and no one would have known of their presence but for the fact that young Roosevelt lost the key of his valise and that some of the United States immigration officials were appealed to for the purpose of finding a key that would fit it.

They were traveling incognito, and Dr. Lambert asked those whom they met to be quiet about their presence here.

Dr. Lambert, when spoken to, said: "We prefer not to have it known that we have been here, for if our presence is known we will no doubt be asked to accept all sorts of hospitality, which we are sure will be offered with the best of intentions, but which we cannot very well accept. Our intention is to go to Lake St. John, have some fishing and hunting there, and to have a change of climate and a good rest, and we expect that we will have a very good time."

From other things that Dr. Lambert said it is inferred that the President's son is threatened with a severe illness, and that they intend on that account to stay for some weeks in the northern climate about Lake St. John.

PHIPPS DIVORCE SETTLEMENTS

Mrs. Phipps to Have Income on $750,000 —Equal Custody of Children.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 14.—In less than ten minutes to-day the divorce case of L. C. Phipps against his wife was settled. The controversies concerning the Phipps property are disposed of as follows:

Mrs. Phipps conveys to Mr. Phipps the residence property at Pittsburg, the residence property in Denver, and transfers to him all the bonds of the United States Steel Corporation now standing in her name, valued at $500,000. In consideration of this Mr. Phipps transfers to a trust company $750,000 in United States Steel Corporation bonds to be held in trust to pay the income thereof to Mrs. Phipps so long as she remains unmarried, and in the event of her remarriage to pay her for life thereafter the income on $250,000 of these bonds.

As to the children, it is provided that their legal residence shall be that of Mr. Phipps, but their custody is to be shared equally. During Mrs. Phipps's custody, two months is to be given to travel with her. They are to pass the Christmas holidays with each alternately, and when in the custody of either of the parties, free access is to be allowed by each to the other at all reasonable times, and they are not to be taken out of the United States by either, except by the written consent of the other.

Each party is to pay his or her legal expenses in connection with the divorce. Mr. Phipps is to repay the money expended by Mrs. Phipps on the Grand View residence, and she also is to have the interest which has accrued on the $500,000 of the bonds of the United States Steel Corporation.

TACOMA ARRIVES AT RIO.

Cruiser Rounds the Horn in Vain Search for Missing Ship.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The Navy Department is informed that the cruiser Tacoma, commanded by Commander R. F. Nicholson, arrived at Rio de Janeiro yesterday, having cruised from San Francisco down the west coast of South America and around to the Brazilian port in search of the missing merchantman Conemaugh, which has not been heard from since her departure from a Chilean port several months ago.

The Tacoma failed to find any trace of the missing steamship and practically has abandoned the search. She will continue her cruise northward to the West Indies, and possibly may be attached to the Caribbean Squadron.

JUDGE PARKER STARTS FOR CITY IN STORM

Yacht Sapphire Had not Arrived at 3:30 This Morning.

WAS EXPECTED AT MIDNIGHT

Candidate Will Probably Return To-morrow and Hopes to Solve Many Problems During Stay.

Special to The New York Times.

ROSEMOUNT, Esopus, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Judge Parker departed from here for New York at 6:11 P. M. on board John B. McDonald's yacht Sapphire. Secretary Arthur McCausland and Smith M. Weed accompanied him. The Clinton leader, however, went only as far as Poughkeepsie, taking train there. Mr. McDonald and his guests expect to arrive in Manhattan waters about midnight, anchoring off the station of the New York Yacht Club, at the foot of West Eighty-sixth Street.

A landing will be effected about 8 o'clock to-morrow morning. The candidate will be driven direct to the Hotel Astor, Times Square, and so far as now known will remain there for the holding of all conferences. In fact, when he left here there was nothing to indicate that he would go to the National Committee headquarters or anywhere but the Hotel Astor until he is ready to return to Rosemount.

While the time of his stay in the metropolis can only be conjectured at this time, yet the best information points to a return to his home by Friday afternoon.

Judge Parker hopes to solve a score of problems before he again sees Rosemount. He expects to meet great numbers of leaders. But just how extensive and just how important his first visit to New York since the convention will be no one can estimate accurately. There is some belief that the fruits of the conferences with the Presidential candidate will not appear until some days have passed.

Senator Gorman, ex-Senator Davis, William F. Sheehan, and the entire Democratic galaxy will no doubt meet the candidate during to-morrow and Friday morning.

Expressions have been heard about Rosemount to the effect that to-night, the third anniversary of the death of William McKinley, marks, by the departure of the Democratic candidate, the real beginning of the campaign by the party now out of power.

It was conceded that, save for the rest he will get on board the Sapphire, Judge Parker will obtain none practically until he is again under the roof of Rosemount.

The craft which was to bear him away was sighted to the southward at 5:11 P. M. It steamed to a line running due east and west between Rosemount Landing and Esopus Island, with a heavy haze almost shutting its white outlines from view.

Rain was pouring in torrents, in fact the heaviest rainstorm since Judge Parker became the nominee was in progress when the Sapphire anchored fifty yards out in the stream.

Mr. McDonald came ashore in the tender and was met on the dock by Frederick Parker with a carriage. Hardly more than a half hour passed before the candidate's party was in readiness. Time for dinner was not taken.

Smith M. Weed with George A. Hall of St. Lawrence had arrived less than an hour before. Mr. Weed had no time to discuss politics if he was to accept the invitation to go boating in the wind and rain to Poughkeepsie.

With a suit case the candidate entered the cabriolet and was driven down the hill to the dock.

His departure was marked by a great display of natural pyrotechnics. The lightning flashed and the thunder crashed, and with a heavy haze settling down like a huge canopy, shutting off all view of the eastern shore, and the candidate going on a swift drive down the rocky hill road through the rain, disciples of the strenuous life would have been quite well satisfied with the stage set for the Judge's entry into active work.

At 3:30 o'clock this morning the Sapphire, bearing Judge Parker, had not been sighted off the yachting anchorage at the foot of West Eighty-sixth Street, where the yacht had been expected to arrive about midnight. At that hour a fierce gale was blowing over the Hudson River.

Some speculation was excited here among local politicians over the departure of National Chairman Taggart for the West on the eve of Judge Parker's visit to the city.

DISAPPEARS WITH DAUGHTER.

Lenahan of New York Takes Girl from Wife—Pair Are Separated.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Sept. 14.—The police are searching to-night for Eugene Lenahan of 1,067 First Avenue, New York, who is wanted here for taking his eleven-year-old daughter from the custody of her mother. Lenahan and his wife have not lived together for the past seven years, during which time Mrs. Lenahan and the girl have been in this city.

Lenahan arrived here yesterday, and failing to find the girl at the home of her aunt, where she and her mother have been staying, intercepted her upon her way home from school and induced her to go with him. The police think that he has gone to New York.

ALBANIANS REVOLT AGAIN.

Turkey Mobilizing Militia—Rebels Have 30,000 Martini Rifles.

SALONIKA, Sept. 14.—Sixteen battalions of Ilaves (local militia) have been ordered to mobilize in the districts of Kilkish, Seres, and Berat. They will be dispatched to Prizren to suppress the insurgent Albanians.

The Albanians are again revolting, and are demanding the acceptance of their demands in full.

WOULD SELL HER BABY GIRL.

Mrs. Rosenthal, Though, Wants Her Back in Five Years.

Mrs. Sarah Rosenthal, a young woman of 708 Fifth Street, who was once in prosperous circumstances but is now destitute, said yesterday that she would sell her four-weeks-old baby girl for $400 to any one that would guarantee the child a good home and would promise to give her back when she was five or six years old.

Three years ago Mrs. Rosenthal was living in a small town near Warsaw, Poland. Her father was a well-to-do merchant. From childhood she had known Eis Rosenthal. He became a salesman and the father of the girl finally consented to her marriage to the young man. After a few months they came to America. They left their little girl with her brother, expecting to send for it when they had established themselves here. Young Rosenthal had a hard struggle to establish himself here, and one day he disappeared.

AUTO HIT ONE, CAR THE OTHER.

Raum Seriously Hurt Going to View Dead Friend's Body.

John George Raum, fifty-three years old, a German who speaks little English and who lives at 756 Tenth Avenue, was taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital last night suffering from a number of scalp wounds and a possible fracture of the skull. He is in a critical condition. Raum was on his way to view the body of a lifelong friend who died yesterday from injuries received several months ago in being run down by an automobile. He boarded an Amsterdam Avenue car, intending to get off at One Hundred and Fifty-third Street.

When the car reached that point Raum alighted, but becoming confused because he thought he had mistaken his street attempted to board the car again, only to miss his footing and fall. He was struck by the running board and knocked unconscious. Several of the passengers on the car carried him to a neighboring drug store, where he was attended by an ambulance surgeon.

HURT IN C. N. BLISS'S AUTO.

Levi Van Nest Has Leg Broken at Oceanic.

OCEANIC, N. J., Sept. 14.—Failure of the steering gear to work on a big Panhard touring car, recently purchased by Cornelius N. Bliss, who has a Summer place at Oceanic, last evening resulted in an accident in which Levi Van Nest had one leg broken in two places.

The accident occurred while the chauffeur, Thomas Haggerty, and Mr. Van Nest were out testing the machine. When the chauffeur attempted to swerve the machine the steering apparatus failed to work, and the auto smashed into a tree. The machine was badly damaged. The chauffeur escaped with slight injuries.

CONEY PENINSULA HEREAFTER.

Two Hundred Yards of Separating Creek Filled with Rubbish.

Coney Island was stunned yesterday when it learned that it was no longer an island, but had been made a mere peninsula by means of several thousand tons of Brooklyn rubbish and ashes dumped into the creek.

For a week or more the Brighton Beach Racing Association has been filling that portion of Coney Island Creek which runs through its property north of Neptune Avenue, and the filling has been completed for about 200 yards.

It is likely that other property owners will follow the action of the association. The idea of filling in the creek has aroused some indignation among the fishermen and boatmen, who declare it is a defiance of the Federal statutes, but the War Department has held otherwise.

FOOTBALL PAIR'S TROUBLES.

Mrs. Harry Batchelder Pleads Guilty to Taking $2,600—Yale Tackle in Jail, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

READING, Penn., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Harry S. Batchelder, wife of the famous Yale tackle, was arraigned in court to-day to answer the charge of embezzling $2,600 from the firm of Berg Brothers while employed by them as cashier. She pleaded guilty and through District Attorney Wagoner made a request that her sentence be deferred until Sept. 24, which Judge Ermentrout granted.

A big crowd packed the large courtroom and was disappointed at the abrupt ending of the case. Last night Mrs. Batchelder visited her husband in the Berks County Jail, to which he was sentenced for a term of six months for allowing gambling for cigars and money in his poolroom and cigar store.

STRENUOUS "FARE" FAINTED.

Poked His Hand Through Cab Glass While Near Theatre.

Harry L. Ghormley, who described himself as a stock broker of 60 Broadway, with a residence in Mount Vernon, left the Café Martin at 8 o'clock last evening and got aboard the hansom cab of Peter Harrison.

"Broadway Theatre," said he.

In front of the theatre there was a line of hansoms ahead of the Ghormley-Harrison chariot.

"Go ahead," said the stock broker. "Edge off and corner the market."

"Must wait my turn," said Harrison, "or I'll get arrested."

Presently the rain-slide of plate glass burst and a hand protruded. Policeman Kearns of the theatre squad went to investigate and found the stock broker in a dead faint as a result of a gash on his left wrist. Assisted by the cabman, Kearns carried the broker into the theatre, where he was revived. Then the officer took both Jehu and passenger to the Tenderloin Station.

The cabman wanted damages for the plate glass and full-time fare. Ghormley wanted Harrison locked up. They were both advised to be more civil in their action than they were in their language.

TRAIN DIDN'T KILL HIM.

Farrell, Afraid of Operation, Jumped in Front of Express.

Special to The New York Times.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 14.—Determined to end his life rather than undergo an operation for appendicitis, John H. Farrell, aged twenty-five, slipped away from his home in this city yesterday afternoon and went to New Haven. In the presence of a crowd of 200 persons at the depot he jumped in front of a rapidly moving express train.

The engine struck him, and he was thrown a distance of twenty-five feet, but clear of the track. He was not seriously injured, but bemoaned his luck in being frustrated in his attempt to end his life. He begged the police as he was being taken to the hospital not to allow the doctors to operate on him, but to leave him alone to die.

CAR HITS POLICEMAN'S BUGGY.

William A. Purcell of King's Bridge Station May Not Survive Injuries.

William H. Purcell, a patrolman attached to the King's Bridge Police Station, who lives in Liberty Lane, King's Bridge, was run down yesterday by a car of the King's Bridge line while riding in a buggy and received serious injuries. At the Fordham Hospital, where he was removed, it was said that his condition was critical.

Yesterday was Purcell's day off, and he was returning home. Driving fast to avoid the approaching storm, he was about to round the curve at the foot of the hill on Bailey Avenue, when his vehicle was struck by the car and demolished.

He was thrown about twenty feet, landing on the tracks, where he lay while the fender of the car passed over him and the wheels came within a few inches of his body. The motorman, Cornelius O'Connell, jumped from the car, and with the assistance of some of the passengers pulled him out cut and bleeding. Purcell's horse ran as far as Two Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street. The Coroner took Purcell's antemortem statement last night.

GEN. RUTKOVSKY'S DEATH

Defeat of Orloff's Wing Turning Point of Battle.

WHOLE ARMY IS NOW SAFE

General Praises Intelligence and Bravery of Men—Casualties 17,000, of Which 4,500 Were Killed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—Under date of Sept. 11 Gen. Kuropatkin reports to the Emperor as follows:

"It is now possible, from details of the battles since Aug. 26, in which various army corps participated, to furnish to your Majesty the following report of operations:

"On Aug. 26 the Manchurian army occupied three groups of positions—the first at Pettsu and An-Ping, on the left flank; the second at Lian-dian-Sian, in the centre, and the third at An-Shan-Chan, on the right flank. The same day the Japanese assumed the offensive along the whole front. At Lian-dian-Sian all their attacks were repulsed, and on the left we retained our principal position at An-Ping.

"After a desperate battle the Japanese, however, succeeded in securing the position at Pettsu, thus threatening the line of retreat of the corps along the Tan River. Simultaneously a turning movement by considerable forces of Japanese was observed on the left flank of our position at An-shan-Chan.

"Taking advantage of our positions at Lian-dian-Sian and An-Ping, in order to gain time and inflict severe losses on the enemy, I withdrew all the army corps from advanced positions to Liao-Yang.

Difficulties of Retreat.

"In consequence of the mountainous nature of the country on our front and the bad condition of the roads toward the south, the two days' march toward Liao-Yang was of the most difficult kind, and only the devotion of all the troops on the east front enabled it to be carried out in good order. Only after incredible difficulties was it found possible to drag all the guns without exception and all our baggage through the passes.

"Some of the guns were carried through the mountains by infantry. Difficult as was the retreat through the passes, under pressure from the enemy, the march across the open country was still more arduous. The left and centre columns succeeded in getting all their artillery and baggage to Liao-Yang.

"The march of the right column, which was obliged to cross westward to the railway, where the country had suffered most severely from rains, was especially difficult. Considerable forces of the enemy followed the rear guard, which maintained a stubborn resistance. The guns of one of the retiring batteries began to sink in the mud.

Gen. Rutkovsky Killed.

"Every effort was made to save them. Twenty-four horses were hitched to each piece, companies of infantry assisting with ropes. The horses and men, however, sunk so deep that it was necessary for the comrades of the latter to haul them out. Gen. Rutkovsky remained so long covering the extrication of the guns that his force lost heavily, and the General himself and Col. Raben, commanding the Fourth Regiment of East Siberian Sharpshooters, were killed. Notwithstanding all efforts, it was finally necessary to abandon the guns.

"On Aug. 29 the army concentrated at Liao-Yang. One corps took a position on the right bank of the Tai-Tse River, while another held the left bank.

"On Aug. 30 and 31 the Japanese attacked our advance positions with great energy, but everywhere were repulsed with enormous losses. There was desperate fighting on our left flank and centre, accompanied by a number of counter attacks, resulting in bayonet fighting, and I was compelled to reinforce the fighting line with the special reserves and the general reserves.

Attempt to Hurl Back Kuroki.

"During Aug. 31 it could clearly be seen that a considerable force of Gen. Kuroki's army had crossed to the right bank of the Tai-Tse River. Owing to attacks on our left on Aug. 30 and 31, it was to be supposed that the main body of Kuroki's army had been told off to turn the left flank of our position and attack our line of communication.

"In consequence I resolved to withdraw the advance troops to the main position and concentrate a large force against Kuroki and attempt to hurl his army back upon the Tai-Tse River. Only at certain points was this carried out successfully.

"At nightfall, undisturbed by the Japanese, we commenced the evacuation of our advanced positions, which already had readered great service in weakening the enemy by enormous losses. Thanks to the sufficient number of bridges and the manner in which the roads leading to them had been laid out, all the troops destined to take the offensive were safely on the right bank of the river on the morning of Sept. 1. The enemy did not occupy our abandoned advance positions until the evening of Sept. 1, when they opened an artillery fire upon Liao-Yang. No trophies of war fell into the hands of the enemy.

Kuropatkin Describes Plans.

"I adopted the following plan of operations: Having crossed to the right bank of the river, the army had taken up a position between the village of Sy-kwan-tun and heights near the Yen-Tai Mines, which it was intended to occupy with all our detachments, composed of thirteen battalions.

"Taking the position near Sy-kwan-tun as a pivot, it was intended that the army effect a movement to flank the Japanese positions, which extended from the Tai-Tse River, near the village of Kwan-tun, toward the Yen-Tai collieries. Offensive operations began when all the troops had taken up their allotted positions.

"The night of Sept. 1 the commander of the corps on the right flank sent a dispatch stating that the Japanese, having taken the offensive and occupied the district northwestward of our Sy-kwan-tun position, which was of great importance to us, the Russian regiment holding the district was forced to retire, and I was obliged to change my plans in order to retake the lost ground the following day. It was not until the evening of Sept. 2 that the entire mountain village of Sy-kwan-tun was in our hands.

Detachments Mixed Up.

"At first our attacks did not succeed, but the fighting was continued with unabated vigor, even after darkness had set in. We repeatedly gained possession of the heights, but were finally compelled to withdraw temporarily. Many of our detachments became mixed up, and in the disorder unity of command was rendered very difficult.

"Leaders of individual detachments, however, continued the attacks time after time, and at last succeeded in occupying the desired position, thereby attaining the object of the operations of our right flank. As soon as the left flank in the vicinity of the Yen-Tai mines, on Sept. 2, (Orloff's detachment,) occupied the heights to the north of the mines, holding a strong position facing south, he opened fire with two batteries and engaged the army in an artillery duel. Orloff's right flank was then four miles from the left flank and the remainder of the army. In order to aid our troops holding positions near Sy-kwan-tun, Orloff sent part of his force from the hills and attacked the enemy in the direction of the village of Sakhumoon.

"This movement was carried out in cornfields. Our men met with a frontal and a flank fire, and, losing their bearings in the cornfields, began to retire. The troops remaining in the hills also retired westward.

"By that time Orloff's detachment was within a mile and a third of our other forces. Orloff himself was wounded, as also was Gen. Fomin, who subsequently died.

"After the evacuation of the position which had been intended to serve as a base for our attack, the Japanese extended northward and occupied the whole range of hills and the Yen-Tai mines. Samsonoff's sotnia of Cossacks dismounted and defended our positions with the utmost courage, but were gradually driven back.

"The enemy was now established in an extremely strong position on the hills, and it would have been too hazardous for our left flank to attack them, in view of the losses sustained in the previous five days. We therefore withdrew to the village of Talien-ko, and I decided to retire to Mukden, the retreat being accomplished on Sept. 7.

Evacuation of Liao-Yang Begun.

"The evacuation of Liao-Yang began and was concluded the morning of Sept. 4. All our equipment was removed, and there was no time to save the commissariat reserves, which was sufficient to last the whole army eight days. These were all destroyed.

The pontoon bridges were dismantled and carried off by the troops, while temporary pontoons were burned and the railway bridge wrecked. The army retired in perfect order. The enemy attempted to pursue, but were repulsed.

"Precautions were taken on Sept. 3 and 4 to prevent a timing movement from the east. The Japanese to the southward took no vigorous initiative, but Gen. Kuroki assumed the offensive to the eastward. Our detachments holding positions at Talien-ko sustained a furious night attack, which was particularly desperate on Sept. 5. We retained our position, but suffered heavy losses, one regiment, which bore the brunt of the fight, losing 500 in killed or wounded.

"By evening of Sept. 5 the danger of a simultaneous attack on our front and left flank had disappeared. The removal of our artillery, transport and baggage trains was effected in the face of immense difficulties, but was successfully concluded. Our retirement on Mukden on Sept. 7 was covered by a strong rear guard of cavalry.

"We abandoned nothing from Aug. 30 up to the time of our arrival at Mukden. Our engineers worked with the greatest devotion. Throughout all the fighting they rendered invaluable service in making and repairing roads and assisting in the railway traffic."

In the opinion of officers who have read the report, it is favorable to Gen. Kuropatkin, practically disarming the previous disposition to criticise him. The report explains the successive withdrawal of his three lines south of Liao-Yang, how the main army crossed the Tai-Tse River, Gen. Kuropatkin's assumption of the offensive Sept. 3, Major Gen. Orloff's reverse, and the consequent order for the retreat of the whole army to Mukden Sept. 3.

Orloff's Reverse Responsible.

The circumstances of Major Gen. Orloff's reverse, which Gen. Kuropatkin considers responsible for the necessity of his retirement, substantially agree with Gen. Kuropatkin's version.

The latest reports of the War Office, coupled with Gen. Kuropatkin's detailed report, give a distinctly more cheerful view of the situation. The army is "rested and reinforced by the whole of the First European Corps. The bulk of it is encamped and intrenched around Mukden, with the rear guard fifteen miles south."

On the other hand, the War Office's information indicates that the Japanese forces, which have not yet recovered from their terrible exertions and losses at the battle of Liao-Yang, are concentrated at Yental, not venturing north. Small columns of a few thousand men each occupy positions along the roads leading to Mukden east and west of the railroad.

The War Office has no information to show that Japanese columns are north of Mukden.

The total Russian losses are below 17,000, of which 4,500 were killed.

CHINA WANTS MANCHURIA BACK

Reported to Have Appointed a Special Envoy to Japan and Russia.

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 15.—According to a dispatch from Shanghai to The Morning Post, the Chinese Government has appointed a special envoy to Japan and Russia to arrange for the retrocession of Manchuria to China.

MAY STAND AT MUKDEN.

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—Field Marshal Oyama, in a report of yesterday's date, says:

"The position of the enemy south of the Hun River is unchanged. His scouts are in touch with our outposts. In the San-kwai-Shih direction a small force with guns makes occasional attacks.

"Russian cavalry and small encampments are visible at Wuli-tai-Tse and Shwang-tai-Tse, (both about twenty-five miles south of Mukden.)

"Russian troops occupy various points between Sing-min-Tung (thirty miles northwest of Mukden) and Mukden.

"The Russians are engaged in fortifying both banks of the Liao River at Tie Ling, (Pass)."

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Thursday, Sept. 15.—The Tageblatt's correspondent at Tie Pass, cabling under date of Sept. 14, says that the evacuation of Mukden by the Russians is not being considered at present, and that the field of operations seems to be moving eastward.

In a previous dispatch the correspondent said:

"The Russian Army is disposed south of this point. The Japanese have advanced only about six miles north of Liao-Yang."

ST. PETERSBURG, Thursday, Sept. 15.—Gen Kuropatkin, telegraphing on Tuesday evening, says 3,000 Japanese are bivouacking at Bentsiputze, and that the bulk of the Japanese forces is south of the Yen-Tai branch railroad. The Japanese, he adds, are not advancing.

The War Office is extremely reticent regarding the present situation and future plans at the front. It is stated in general terms that the army is concentrated around Mukden, leaving the inference that it is ready to make another stand.

There has been no rain during the past two days, and it is probable that the country will now dry up and leave two months of good weather for a Fall campaign.

Many things may happen during this period, but The Associated Press is informed by a high authority that preparations are being steadily pushed looking to a wintering of the Russian army at Harbin.

MUKDEN, Sept. 14.—Much bushwhacking is going on upon the road south of Mukden, and many Russian soldiers have been killed from the fields of Chinese corn.

However, the corn harvest will soon begin, and when the fields are cleared the country will be much more suitable for military operations.

The weather continues unsettled.

ALEXIEFF'S POWER REDUCED.

He Remains Viceroy, but Kuropatkin Controls Military Operations.

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 15.—The correspondent at St. Petersburg of the Echo de Paris says:

"I learn authoritatively that Viceroy Alexieff asked to be relieved of the functions of Commander in Chief by land and sea of the Russian forces in the Far East, but not of those of Viceroy, his object being to avoid giving a semblance of consistency to the reports of antagonism between himself and Gen. Kuropatkin.

"He asked that he be allowed to continue to be responsible for the political and diplomatic administration in the Far East and to remain at Harbin.

"The Emperor granted this request, and, therefore, Gen. Kuropatkin henceforth will be solely responsible for military operations there."

BRITISH SHIP AFTER THE LENA.

Cruiser Grafton May Follow Her—Report That She Was in Action.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 14.—His Majesty's ship Grafton, flagship of the Pacific squadron, which left here some days ago for her annual heavy gun practice at Comox, returned unexpectedly to Esquimalt early on Tuesday, making the trip from Comox under forced draught and in record time.

The cause of the Grafton's return is connected with the appearance of the Russian auxiliary cruiser Lena at San Francisco.

A significant circumstance connected with the Grafton's appearance at Esquimalt is that all shore leave has been indefinitely suspended. The big cruiser also maintains her steam pressure at unusual strength.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The Inspector of Hulls and Boilers at San Francisco has submitted to the Department of Commerce and Labor a report regarding the condition of the Lena. The report is substantially as follows:

The boilers and engines are badly in need of repairs. To put in new boilers will require from four to six months. The tubes of the boilers are badly pitted, but the Lena has on board 200 additional tubes which could be put in in a short time. In from twenty to thirty days the Lena could be repaired so that she would be able to make about eight knots.

This is regarded by officials of the Navy Department as entirely within the term "reasonable time" used in the President's proclamation.

The State Department is awaiting the detailed report of Admiral Goodrich before taking further action.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 14.—Count Yama Osichi has passed through St. Paul en route to Seattle. He is a distant relative of Gen. Kuroki. In speaking of the Lena incident, he said:

"I heard two weeks ago that the Lena was watching for vessels bound to Japan from Puget Sound, and I also heard that two light cruisers of my country had been detailed to take the ship. They followed the Lena when she broke away from the Vladivostok squadron, and I understand that somewhere in the vicinity of Redfield Reef, hundreds of miles west of Cape Flattery, there was another action that has not been heard of so far.

"The Lena is badly damaged by gunshots, I understand, but she is being so carefully protected from investigation by her marines and the United States Government that the nature of the injuries cannot positively be determined.

"Somewhere off to the westward of the Farallone Islands, I am confident, there are two Japanese cruisers, watching for the big Russian to come out."

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Capt. Bertinsky of the Lena went to Mare Island to-day. The avowed object of the trip was to call on Rear Admiral McCalla, the commandant of the navy yard.

The watch kept on the Lena is even more rigid than at first. The gunboat Bennington has moved nearer to her, and the patrolling launches are relieved every day.

No confirmation can be obtained here of the story to the effect that the Lena was engaged with two Japanese cruisers in the vicinity of Redfield Reef. United States Inspector Bulger found no marks on the Lena indicating that she had been in conflict.

SAYS PORT ARTHUR'S STATE IS DESPERATE

Stoessel, it Is Reported, Announces Shortage of Ammunition.

READY TO BLOW UP FORTS

Preparations Made in Event of Successful Assault—One Japanese Attack Repulsed by Garrison.

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 15.—The Journal's St. Petersburg correspondent says:

"A very high personage informs me that the Emperor has received a report from Lieut. Gen. Stoessel to the effect that the situation at Port Arthur is most critical.

"For a week there has been no meat and only a small quantity of flour, while of ammunition there is not sufficient for a long resistance.

"Everything is prepared for the blowing up of the fortifications in the event of a successful Japanese assault."

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The Emperor has received the following dispatch from Gen. Stoessel, dated Aug. 28:

"I am happy to report to your Majesty that at 3 o'clock in the morning of Aug. 27, during a violent rain and thunder storm, the Japanese again attempted to capture our left flank positions, near No. 1 Fort and Udan Mountain. Their attack was everywhere repulsed.

"Our losses were small—3 men killed and 2 officers and 98 men wounded. The wounded were brought in and are being carefully tended.

"A number of Japanese corpses would have been picked up by us, but the enemy prevented us from so doing by opening fire on the hospital attendants, who had been sent out under the Red Cross flag."

Another dispatch from Gen. Stoessel to the Emperor, dated Sept. 2, says:

"On the night of Sept. 1 the enemy attacked Visokaya and Dlinnaya Mountains and the neighboring fortifications, opening simultaneously an artillery fire on the forts and mountains. The leading files of the enemy, with the Japanese columns following them, were discovered in good time, and our batteries opened on them.

"The leading files fortunately encountered some automatic mines, and many of the enemy were blown in the air. The attack was repulsed in an hour.

"Our losses were inconsiderable—one officer and seven men wounded."

CHE-FOO, Thursday, Sept. 15 (12:15 A. M.)—A Chinese who left Liao-thie promontory on Sept. 10 says that the general assault on the stronghold, which, it was reported in some quarters, would be made on Sept. 9, did not take place.

He declares that the Russians are giving most of their attention to the forts on the northeast line, which include Rih-lung-Shan and Kik-wan-Shan.

The Russian soldiers are living on black bread and seldom get soup. There are only a few head of cattle in Port Arthur, and these are reserved for the highest officials.

Hardly a day passes in which Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, generally accompanied by Gen Balashoff, Chief of the Red Cross at Port Arthur, does not ride over the entire line, having alterations made here and giving suggestions there and complimenting or censuring his troops. His indefatigable efforts and his composure do much to sustain the spirits of the garrison, in spite of their hard fare and the sleeplessness which results from being constantly on the qui vive.

JAPAN PLEASED WITH GERMANY

Berlin Foreign Office Denies Report of a Secret Pact with Russia.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—The Foreign Office here, taking notice of the article in The London Times to-day setting forth that a secret understanding exists between Russia and Germany in regard to the Far East, depending on Japan's defeat, informs The Associated Press that Japan, since the Russian warships sought refuge at Tsing-Tau, has twice formally expressed her satisfaction with Germany's careful observance of neutral obligations.

The Foreign Office says the commercial treaty recently concluded with Russia contains no political clause. It is what it purports to be and nothing more. Nor has Germany concluded any political agreement with Russia. The commercial treaty is the only treaty arranged with Russia in a long time. Nor does any special agreement on political subjects exist between the two Governments.

The Russian ships, it is declared, have not found an asylum at Tsing-Tau, but a prison.

JAPANESE TAXING MANCHUS.

Mukden Dispatch Also Says They Are Establishing Music Halls.

MUKDEN, Sept. 14.—The Japanese are causing a sensation among the natives of Manchuria as they advance by establishing their own system of taxation and administration as though the country were actually Japanese territory. They are paying for supplies with promissory notes on the war fund, a blanket note being given for the payment to each village on the basis of population, leaving the residents to divide pro rata.

Few of these notes have yet been collected in cash, but Japanese officials are collecting a cash tax levied "for war expenses." They have even notified the Governor of Mukden to discontinue the salt tax, as it will be readjusted upon a Japanese basis.

The Japanese have almost doubled the custom dues at Yin-Kow and have placed such a heavy tax upon the thousands of boats sailing thence as practically to paralyze trade.

The conduct of the Japanese since their occupation of Liao-Yang indicates a laxity of discipline. One of the first incidents after the occupation was the opening of a number of music halls.

RUSSIA HOLDS THE CALCHAS.

Judge Advocate Protests Against Court's Order for Ship's Release.

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 13—(Delayed.)—The Prize Court has decided to release the British steamer Calchas, (captured while bound from Puget Sound ports to Japan by the Vladivostok squadron,) and also the neutral portions of the vessel's cargo.

That part of the cargo consigned to Japan, consisting of flour, cotton, and timber, is confiscated.

The Calchas will be detained three months in order to allow to her owners time for an appeal from the Prize Court's decision.

The Russian naval representative before the court protested against the release of the vessel.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The decision of the Russian Government in regard to contraband of war will probably be communicated to Ambassadors McCormick and Hardinge to-morrow. It will be favorable to the contention that foodstuffs are conditional contraband if addressed to private concerns at an enemy's unblockaded ports.

The American view regarding some of the other points, however, is not conceded. For instance, it is believed that Russia will insist on the contraband character of railroad material.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The Post Office Department has taken up the complaints of citizens of New York and Pennsylvania that mail matter sent to Japan on the steamer Calchas, which left Seattle July 8 and was seized by a Russian cruiser July 26, has not reached its destination. The Calchas, although belonging to Alfred Holt & Co. of England, had been chartered by the Northern Pacific Railroad and Steamship Company.

WOMAN'S BODY IN A TRUNK.

Mrs. Inez Smith of Cleveland Murdered —Husband Said to be Missing.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 14.—The body of a young woman was found to-day crowded into a trunk which was picked up in the water under a coal dock on the lake front. Half a dozen detectives were at once put at work on the case, with the result that late this afternoon the body was identified as that of Mrs. Inez Smith of 93 Oregon Street, this city.

The woman disappeared on Sept. 6. That she was murdered and her body placed in the trunk and thrown into the river the police say is certain. Some time ago the woman applied for a divorce, alleging that her husband, Samuel Smith, had another wife living, whom he married in 1892.

"MEN IN BLUE" ROBBED HIM.

Patient Who Made Charges Exonerates Bellevue—Tells Another Story.

Superintendent Rickard, with Drs. Gregory, Sinclair, and Corbin, began at Bellevue last night an investigation into the charges recently made by William Conlin, a patient in the psychopathic ward, who, alleged that he had been robbed of $280 while in the hospital. The charges were seconded by Dr. Daniel A. Sinclair of 226 East Sixty-second Street.

Mr. Rickard stated that Conlin was brought to the hospital on Sept. 9, after being searched at a police station, and also at the Roosevelt Hospital, where he was taken first. Several nurses were brought into the room last night, but Conlin failed to recognize them. When the last nurse was brought in he got up in his chair and said:

"I know now who robbed me. Men in a blue uniform stole my money. I didn't have the money when I entered Bellevue. In my dreams I saw men in blue uniforms distributing my money between them."

The charges affecting Bellevue were dismissed.

FOUND HIS SON INSANE.

Father Thought Boy Dead Even After Being Summoned to Bellevue.

August Flebbe of Carlstadt, N. J., went to Bellevue Hospital last night and found his son, whom he had believed to be dead. The son, who is twenty-five years old, was taken to the insane hospital at Islip, L. I.

About two months ago the son, August Flebbe, Jr., was removed from the Alabama Hotel, Rivington Street and the Bowery, to Bellevue suffering from pneumonia. He was immediately transferred to the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island, but when he recovered his health he began to act queerly, and he was then removed to the Bellevue psychopathic ward. A few days ago he told the surgeons that he had a father living at Carlstadt, N. J., and asked that he be sent for.

When Mr. Flebbe arrived at the hospital last night in response to a telegram he said:

"I have no son living. My only son went to England five years ago. He was taken ill there and died two years later."

When the patient was brought into the room, however, Flebbe exclaimed:

"Yes, that is my son. I thought him dead."

BOY "HOLDS UP" HIMSELF.

Butcher's Driver Ties His Hands and Feet After Collecting Bill.

Had Edward Kass, eighteen years old, employed by J. M. Farrington, a butcher, of 361 Fourth Avenue, not chosen to make the confession he did yesterday, detectives might have been busy yet trying to solve what seemed to be a most daring hold-up.

Kass has been an errand boy for Farrington for about eight months. During the last week or so the driver has been on his vacation, and in his absence Kass ran the wagon. When he started out about 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Farrington told the boy to collect a bill for $113.45 at Browne's chop house, in Broadway. Ordinarily Kass returned about 9 o'clock. Yesterday he remained away a little longer, and his employer became uneasy. Pretty soon a young man came rushing in and told him that Kass had been robbed in Madison Avenue, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Streets, and that the police were about to take charge of the wagon.

Later, when sharply questioned, he said he had lost the money and then tied his own hands and feet to mistlead the police.

The Pianola Piano

The One Piano That Witholds Its Full Possibilities from No One.

PERSONS who may be contemplating the purchase of a piano either now, or in the near future, should not miss the opportunity to become posted on the great advantages of this new instrument.

The Pianola Piano unites in one case a perfect piano and a Metrostyle Pianola. It is playable, both by the fingers and by means of a perforated music roll, the change from one method to the other being so quick as to be practically instantaneous.

The Pianola Piano (known as "The First Complete Piano") differs in no essential respect from the usual type of upright of the highest grades, but, in addition, its value is multiplied by all the tremendous possibilities of the Metrostyle Pianola.

Pianos for Sale in Exchange Department.

The introduction of the Pianola Piano has been the means of bringing into our hands a collection of Uprights and Grands, representing the best known makers in this country. Experts in the trade declare this collection is unequalled, for the fine condition and uniformly high grade of the instruments, by any similar offering ever known in the piano business. Only an extraordinary occasion could have brought such a desirable lot of pianos into the market. The prices at which we offer these exchanged pianos render this an exceptional opportunity for the economical buyer.

Exchangeable Pianolas.

The great popularity of the Metrostyle Pianola has caused many owners of earlier models to make exchanges. A special sale of these exchanged Pianolas will begin next week, full details of which will appear in subsequent advertisements.

HIS NIBBLE COSTS $6,500.

Brooklyn Candy Man Victim of "Wire Tapping" Game—Two Arrests.

Capt. Cottrell and detectives of the Tenderloin Station uncovered an alleged "wire-tapping" game yesterday, in which the innocent who nibbled says he paid $6,500 for his experience. He is Constant Dalury, a candy manufacturer of 709 Broadway, Brooklyn. Two of the men, who, according to the victim, got his money were arrested and held in $2,000 bail for further examination.

Dalury told Capt. Cottrell that early last month he was approached by a stranger, who held out glittering promises of the money there was to be made in beating the races by inside connections with the telegraph and telephone companies. He didn't consent to take up the proposition until the middle of August, when he followed his new acquaintance into what appeared to be a business office in East Twenty-third Street. There he saw a dozen or more men sitting at roll-top desks and apparently busy answering telephones. After several visits Dalury was induced to place $1,000 on Aug. 18. The horse lost, but his advisors convinced him that there was only a slip in their arrangements. He invested the next day and won $250, $150 of which one of the men borrowed on the pretext that he wanted it to pay a telegrapher.

On Aug. 25 Dalury was told that he was due for a "killing," and he placed $2,000. Then he was told that the telegrapher "on the inside" had been discharged by the telegraph company, but that in a few days they would have another man. Five days later word was sent to him in Brooklyn that everything was ready, and he hurried over with $2,600. When this was swallowed up Dalury was told that a storm at the track had interfered with the wires.

Dalury, on the advice of his friends, went to Capt. Cottrell, and the place in Twenty-third Street was raided yesterday afternoon. On the second floor of the building, which was once a residence, the raiders found a well-equipped suite with roll-top desks and a dozen telephones. Only one of the telephones was connected, the others being fakes. Frederick Harris, thirty-one years, of 378 West Seventy-eighth Street, and John Ryan, thirty-five years, of 450 Amsterdam Avenue, were arrested.

STORER AT OYSTER BAY.

Ambassador to Vienna Sees the President—Theodore, Jr., on a Hunt.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 14.—Ambassador Bellamy Storer, America's representative at the Court in Vienna, arrived here this evening and is a guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill. Ambassador Storer is in the United States on leave of absence. He said his visit to the President was of a personal nature and practically devoid of official significance. He will leave to-morrow morning for New York and will go thence to his home in Cincinnati.

Pending his return to Groton School, Theorode Roosevelt, Jr., the eldest son of the President, has gone to Canada to hunt moose. He accompanied Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York.

As the weather was too disagreeable for outdoor pleasures, President Roosevelt passed the greater part of to-day in his library.

FIGHT STIRS UP FERRYBOAT.

Negro Porters Battle on Decks, Frightening Women and Children.

When the ferryboat John Englis, plying between Broadway, Brooklyn, and East Forty-second Street, Manhattan, started on her trip for her Brooklyn slip, crowded with passengers, soon after 5 o'clock last night, two colored porters, Frederick James, thirty-five years old, of 383 South Fourth Street, Brooklyn, and George Waters, thirty years old, who lives at 326 West Twenty-seventh Street, Manhattan, became involved in an altercation over the condition of the men's cabin.

Blows followed and the men fought each other all about the deck, until Waters tried to throw James over the guardrail into the river. Several passengers interfered at this point, and the wildest excitement prevailed among the women and children on board. When the boat reached her Brooklyn slip James turned to Waters and told him he would report his conduct to the Superintendent of the ferry company, whereupon Waters furiously attacked him with a stout stick, and might well have killed him had not Policemen Kinley and Brennan of the Bedford Avenue Station stopped the trouble by placing Waters under arrest.

BREAKS McCARRENITE'S HEAD.

Wilson Was First Assaulted and Then Used His Cane.

Within a few feet of the Greenpoint Avenue Police Station in Brooklyn, Bingham T. Wilson, a contributor to literary magazines and a Democratic political speaker, early yesterday morning fractured the skull of Peter Hughes, a picture frame maker of 226 Monitor Street, with a heavy cane. Wilson declares that he struck Hughes in self-defense.

Hughes is a follower of Senator McCarren, whom Wilson spoke against in the primary campaign and made his headquarters in a saloon in Franklin Street, Greenpoint. Hughes admitted to the police that in this saloon on Tuesday night an attack upon Wilson was planned, and that he was urged to do the punching.

Magistrate O'Reilly, in the Manhattan Avenue Court, held Wilson in $500 bail for a hearing next Wednesday on a charge of felonious assault.

MAGISTRATE RESENTS LETTER.

Barlow Doesn't Want Outsiders to Interfere in Liquor Cases.

When the case against Ernest Luhrs of 731 Eighth Avenue, who was charged with violation of the excise law, was called in the West Side Court yesterday a letter was given to Magistrate Barlow by Henry Von Minden, President of the United Wine and Trading Company of 424 Greenwich Street, who requested the Magistrate to be as lenient as possible in the case before him and to do what he could for the offender. After the Magistrate had read the letter he turned to Mr. Von Minden and said:

"This proceeding is highly improper. This is the second time within twenty-four hours that I have been approached by politicians and asked to exercise leniency in such cases. I resent strongly any attempt at interference in my official duties, and wish it clearly understood by you and every other man who has political friends that I do not propose to put up with it any longer. The only bearing which such a letter could have, if any, would be to convince the Court that the prisoner was guilty."

Mr. Von Minden then left the court room. The letter, according to those who saw it, bore the official stamp of the Court of Special Sessions. Luhrs was held in $500 bail for examination Friday.

EARLY MORNING HOLD-UP.

Three Men Fight Harlem Police After Attacking Butcher.

Samuel Appul, a wholesale butcher, residing at 131 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, was on his way to work about 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning when three men suddenly appeared from behind the elevated pillars at One Hundred and Tenth Street and Eighth Avenue and wanted to know the time. Appul started on the run for the elevated station.

One of the men tripped him up and another made a grab for his watch and chain. In falling Appul dragged one man down with him and held him.

In the meantime a cabman who had witnessed the hold-up found Roundsman Downey and Policeman Schreyver, and started back for One Hundred and Tenth Street at breakneck speed. A chase and then a hand-to-hand struggle followed, until finally the policemen drew their revolvers. Two of the men surrendered, but the third, who had also drawn a revolver, ran to the Park wall, vaulted over, and disappeared in the bushes. In the Harlem Court yesterday morning the prisoners were remanded until to-day.

COCKRAN AT RALLY FLAYS ROOSEVELT

"Letter Breathes Triumphant Plunder," He Says.

TAMMANY CROWD CHEERS

Republican Candidate's Letter Attacked at Wigwam Meeting—"Democracy a Faith, Republicanism an Appetite."

Tammany Hall last night ratified the nomination of Parker and Davis and pledged its support to the Democratic ticket and principles. If it had not rained all sorts of cats and dogs there would, the Tammany men say, have been an old-time Tammany rally outside the Hall. As it was, there was a good crowd inside and W. Bourke Cockran stirred that crowd to an enthusiasm that made the leaders grin with pleasure.

Besides Mr. Cockran, Congressman Sulzer and M. Warley Platzek spoke. James W. Gerard presided. Resolutions were adopted that called attention to the extravagance of the Republican Administrations and other issues of the campaign, not excepting Mr. Roosevelt's personality. When Mr. Cockran appeared, some one shouted, "Three cheers for the next United States Senator," and the cheers were given with a will. Those cheers, however, did not compare with the enthusiasm manifested when Mr. Cockran got up and tried to speak. The band tried to drown out the noise, but it broke out afresh when the tooting ceased.

"Three cheers for the real leader of Tammany Hall," yelled some one, and the crowd went wild again.

Mr. Cockran began in his usual measured manner, but warmed up to his subject as he went along, drawing cheer after cheer from the crowd, and almost driving the corps of stenographers to distraction. He made a vitriolic attack on the President and his letter of acceptance. He said that before the letter was published the Republicans tried to make it appear that there was really no difference between the parties, and in fact that the candidates were so alike that they could hardly be told apart; that Roosevelt, instead of being strenuous, violent, and picturesque, was calm, introspective, and almost common place, and that he strayed the paths of sweet reasonableness. The letter, he said, tore off the disguise, and showed that one candidate was the self-seeking egotist and the other the modest self-effacing patriot. He said that the letter not only showed a violent disregard for Constitution and law but showed also that Roosevelt was incapable of logical processes of thought.

In part Mr. Cockran said:

Mr. Cockran's Speech.

"Every page of this letter reads absolute contempt of the Constitution. He does not disguise it. Roughly speaking, it may be divided into two heads. One part of it—and the more important—deals with the policies which he contemplates and the purposes which he has formed in the event of his re-election. The other merely deals with the events of the past, most especially those which concern his own Administration. This again can be subdivided into taunts of his opponents and into laudations of himself, but the note of contempt for the Constitution and for restraint of law permeates it all. At the very beginning he discusses what was denounced on the floor of the House as a gross act of usurpation. He does not pretend that it was in conformity with the Constitution. Nay, more—he shows that he does not understand the meaning of Constitutional authority, that he does not understand the consequence of loyalty to the principles and plans of the Government which he administers. Lest I do him an injustice, let me read you precisely what he says upon this subject:

"'It is easy to test our opponents' sincerity in this matter. The order in question is revocable at the pleasure of the Executive. If our opponents act in that matter they can revoke this order and announce that they will treat the veterans of sixty-two to seventy as is presumably in full vigor and not entitled to pensions. Will they now authoritatively state that they intend to do this? If so, we accept the issue. If not, then we have the right to ask why they raises an issue which when raised they do not venture to meet.'

"Now, my friend, just conceive the sequence of that statement. You will remember that this ordering question was defended and is defended here upon the ground that it was a mere interpretation of the law passed by Congress. The act was attacked upon the ground that it constituted a virtual appropriation of money by the Executive, and therefore amounted to legislation. It was answered that it was not legislation, but merely interpretation of existing law. Now, conceive the consequence in the light of that explanation of this line of the letter.

"What is the meaning of that? That the Executive claims the right to change the interpretation of the law as he pleases, revokable at his pleasure? That the law may mean one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow? That the Executive is to decide its meaning from day to day, changing it as he pleases? Why, if the declaration of a legislative intent and changing it from hour to hour does not constitute legislation itself, then it is impossible to say of what legislation consists. And, mark you, he asks, What will the Democrats do? Will they come out and make it an issue how we shall interpret the law? To make the interpretation of the law by a sworn officer a political issue? Conceive the infamy of that suggestion. Infamy none the less because the man who puts it forward does not seem to grasp its enormity.

What the Democrats Will Do.

"What will the Democrats do, he asks? I will tell you. Democrats can do but one thing, and that is obey the law. Whatever that law means, a Democratic Executive will declare, and having declared, that declaration will last for all time.

"And in the same paragraph and dealing with this same question, the President attempts to explain the interpretation on the ground that the veterans were deserving of the highest and best treatment that human beings ever won by heroic sacrifices for their country. Nobody disputes that.

Mr. Roosevelt evidently seems to think that the principle of our Government is the despotic principle that the law is what the Executive wishes it to be, that he can make the law what he thinks it should be, and that in enforcing it he interprets it, not according to the intent of the law-making power, but according to the wish of the officer who is charged with its enforcement. What would Democrats do about the pension law? I will tell you. A Democratic Executive, if he finds that the appropriation for the support of the veterans be not sufficient, will communicate to Congress his conclusion and he will ask the body charged by the Constitution with the power to control the money to make appropriations adequate to the Nation's gratitude. That is the American system of law."

Mr. Cockran then took up President Roosevelt's assertion that his opponents did not dare to tell the truth about the coal strike settlement and the merger suit.

"I challenge Mr. Roosevelt," said Mr. Cockran, "to name a single Democrat who ever openly or covertly, by himself or by an agent, criticised those two acts of the Executive.

"Let us know the agents that went from Theodore Roosevelt to the trusts, who at one time were threatening him and who are to-day supporting him with money and with influence. What was the consideration of this support? Was it not the promise of Mr. Knox, the Attorney General, extraordinary though it was, not to enforce the law which he had sustained in the Northern Securities case against the other trusts who on every side were plundering the people, and at the same time subscribing to the Republican war chest? The most extraordinary thing, perhaps, in the history of Constitutional government was that interview by Mr. Knox.

"Think of what it means, the President of the United States, through his Attorney General, assumes the right to exercise a kind of dispensing power, not to pardon past offenses but to license new offenses, to authorize continual violation of the law and promise immunity for it. Here we have a Republican Magistrate openly declaring through his Attorney General that if certain trusts behave themselves, although he has just had their method of organization pronounced illegal, that if they continue to maintain their organization for the plunder of the community, that they will be safe, provided that a portion of the plunder finds its way into the Republican corruption fund. That is it, and yet, my friends, that general promise of immunity was not sufficient to bring these trusts into active support for Mr. Roosevelt, for after Mr. Knox's interview they were still hostile.

That "Corruption Fund."

"Who were these agents who have wrought this miracle? There Mr. Roosevelt can speak with authority. He makes a statement on its face positively incorrect. He has a chance to make one commending himself to the American people. He has shown commendable candor in displaying his purposes in this letter of acceptance. He can render a crowning service to political parties by declaring now how it is that the trusts that opposed him four weeks ago are to-day giving up checks through the means of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island to make the corruption fund. There is another statement to which I desire to call your attention in this letter; it is an illuminating one. It is worth repeating. He claims credit here especially for the establishing of the gold standard, and he says: 'The record of the last seven years proves that the party now in power can be trusted to take the additional action necessary to improve and strengthen our monetary system, and that our opponents cannot be so trusted.'

"You will observe that he is very skillful in fixing the period of seven years. It is quite true that for the last seven years the Republican Party has been faithful to the maintenance of the gold standard, but it was just seven years ago that the Republican Party discovered that it paid politically to support the gold standard.

"Passing now to the declaration of future policy, we find that it practically announces that the existing tariff will be maintained, that, so to speak, he becomes the pattest of the stand-patters; that the trusts have no relation to the tariff at all, and some day promise of legislation is held out the character of which no man can infer, and the Philippine Islands are to be held, and if you don't like it what are you going to do about it?

"Now, in his discussion of protection he sheds a flood of light upon the purpose of the party. Mr. Hay, Mr. Root, Mr. Moody, and Mr. Taft never gave the slightest indication of what the intention of the party was. Here we have it in full. We have the declaration that our prosperity depends upon the protective tariff system, and has to be maintained. Now, bear in mind Mr. Roosevelt and all Republicans are very ingenious in trying to make it appear that the Democrats are opposed to all customs duties. Customs duties have been levied in this country since the organization of the Government.

"It is a Democratic doctrine that taxes can be levied only for the support of the Government, and then only to the extent that is absolutely necessary.

"The Democrats regard taxes of every description as a burden necessary to be borne. The Republicans, on the other hand, seem to believe that taxes are not a burden but a benefit; that the more you tax a man, the richer you make him; they must be not to support the Government but to enrich some favorite of the Government.

"Mr. Roosevelt is very clear in his statement—it is fair to say here he speaks with breezy audacity of perfect innocence. [Applause.] No question at all about his faith in himself, and that faith proceeds on curious grounds. He tells us we must not consider this question, and in considering this question we must not follow professional counselors.

"Anybody who reads this document will see how carefully he followed his own advice. He certainly has not read anything about the tariff, and yet he must have at least seen the outside of these books, because he is a college graduate; he must at least be assumed to have some familiarity with Adam Smith, Mill, Bastiare, and Badger, but he assures us that he is entirely independent of that kind of information, because we find him acquiring his tariff information from the enobling, inspiring influences of Lou Payne, Tom Platt, Matt Quay, Boies Penrose, and the rest of the tribe.

Mr. Cockran then took up Mr. Roosevelt's tariff arguments in detail and attacked them all. He accused the Republicans of seeking new plunder in the Philippines and with extravagance at home. He concluded thus:

"Every line in this letter breathes the spirit of triumphant plunder. Not a single word is uttered there that does not show consciousness of plunder, although it seems to be in some instances a case of unconscious cerebration. The State of Panama has been wrenched from the country to which it owed allegiance. That is past and gone; it cannot be repaired. We must treat the condition that we find, but I would like to know who got those $10,000,000, and where did the $50,000,000 go to. I would like to know what commissions were paid to induce our Government to enter into conspiracies in the Waldorf Hotel with reckless adventurers from across the sea.

"Democrats are a party of principle. They follow principle and value it more than profit. Republicans have differed more widely than Democrats upon every question which has been active in our politics. They have differed about the Philippines, about the tariff, the gold question, about Cuba, about every single question which has come before the public, but their differences never prevented them from coming back as one man the moment there was a chance of getting possession of the Government, and putting their fists into the Treasury. Democrats, on the other side, have thrown away prospects of success rather than surrender their principles to which they were committed. Democracy, in fact, is a faith, and Republicanism is an appetite."

Speaking of the promised ship subsidy, Mr. Cockran said:

"We have been told that that money is to be paid out because they cannot carry on their business unless they get assistance from the Government, but if you pay a man for going into a losing business, why would it not be better to pay him for going into a profitable business? Why do you need any excuse at all for giving a man the contents of the Treasury.

"Why isn't the possession of it ample reason for looting it? That is the issue in this campaign. Shall this system of plunder go on further or shall we now declare the intention of the American people to turn the prow of her ship of state away from the rocks that threaten her existence, and then head her in the direction of that swift, smooth stream which is called Democracy?

"Choose between the imperialism of Roosevelt and the constitutionalism of Parker. Choose between the prosperity from industry and the prosperity from skillful plunder. Choose between the stream that aims at making success in life depend upon skill in production and that which reserves the greatest awards for those who show the highest skill in corruption. Choose between a government resting upon the shoulders of prosperous, contented laborers and this system of restricted protection and enormous profits for a few capitalists.

"Commodities will be growing dearer and the payment for the laborer ever growing narrower.

"Choose between this system which recognizes the plunderer or the laborer. Choose then for your city and for your State and for your country, for civilization, for the welfare and prosperity of the whole human race.

MAY DECIDE TO-DAY.

All the Big Democratic Leaders Here to Discuss the Governorship.

Nearly all the big Democratic leaders will be here to-day to await word of the choice of the Republican Convention of a candidate for Governor, and before the day is over there will be a conference to select a candidate to oppose him.

It was said last night that ex-Senator David B. Hill, in the event of the nomination of Higgins by the Republicans, would strongly urge the claims of Stanchfield. While the talk about District Attorney Jerome continues, the leaders have made no move to consult him, nor has he made any move to see them.

"I will not look up any one. If they want me they must come to me," was all that Mr. Jerome would say yesterday.

Many persons high in the councils of the party have expressed the conviction that should the fight be close, Mr. Jerome, by his campaigning methods, could pull the State into the Democratic column, and his name will be seriously considered to-day. Mr. Shepard is the other candidate whose claims will receive careful consideration, and some of the leaders were talking of him yesterday with a confident air.

Randolph Guggenheimer announced himself as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor yesterday after a talk with Charles F. Murphy. The Tammany leader assured him that in the event of the nomination going to an up-State man he would have the support of the Wigwam.

Mr. Hill was inaccessible to interviewers yesterday. At 9 o'clock he left his apartments in the Hoffman House and went to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where he had a long conference with ex-Senator Davis, Senator Gorman and Mr. Belmont were at the conference, and later Mr. Taggart joined it. Afterward Mr. Hill conferred with the State leaders, McCarren, Rodie and Cord Meyer, and at 5 o'clock he had another talk with Mr. Davis. Between these conferences it is believed that he saw Mr. Murphy.

When Mr. Hill went back to the Hoffman after his talk with Mr. Davis, Victor Dowling met him in the corridor. Dowling was the bearer of a message and after a few words both went up to the committee rooms, where they talked for some time. After that Mr. Hill went out, and at the same time Mr. Murphy was not at Tammany Hall.

Chairman Taggart started for the West at 5 o'clock last night.

MAINE'S PLURALITY 27,130.

Great Democratic Gains Since 1900, Especially in Frye's County.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14.—A Republican plurality of 27,130 is shown by complete returns from the State election of Monday, the unofficial tabulation of which from the 522 cities, towns, and plantations was completed to-day.

The total vote for Governor, as tabulated, was: Cobb, (Rep.,) 78,460; Davis, (Dem.,) 51,330.

The vote in 1900 was: Hill, (Rep.,) 73,470; Lord, (Dem.,) 40,086.

While these figures show a Republican gain of 4,990 votes over 1900, they also indicate a Democratic gain of 11,244, or a net gain for their party of 6,254.

Few elections in Maine have attracted more interest than this one, on account of the significance attached to the result by the leaders of both parties. The point of attack on the part of the Democrats was the Republican plurality of 1900.

All four Republican Congressmen are returned by pluralities ranging from 5,000 to 7,000.

In the Legislature the Democratic gains have borne fruit in the election of four Democrats to the Senate in the place of one in the last Legislature and thirty Democrats in place of twenty in the lower branch.

Most of the Democratic gains were in the four Counties of Androscoggin, Cumberland, Knox, and Lincoln. In Androscoggin, Senator W. P. Frye's county, one Democratic Senator was elected, and also for the first time a Democratic Sheriff. The Democrats practically swept Cumberland County and materially increased their percentage of gain over the Republicans.

CONNECTICUT NOMINATIONS.

Republicans Name Roberts to Succeed Gov. Chamberlain.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 14.—The Republican State ticket placed in nomination by the convention in this city to-day was as follows:

For Governor—HENRY ROBERTS of Hartford.

For Lieutenant Governor—ROLLIN S. WOODRUFF of New Haven.

For Secretary of State—THEODORE BODENWEIN of New London.

For State Treasurer—JAMES F. WALSH of Greenwich.

For Controller—ASAHEL W. MITCHELL of Woodbury.

For Representative at Large—GEORGE L. LILLEY of Waterbury.

The platform adopted was short, and was an indorsement of the party's policies in the State and Nation.

While the votes were being counted the following telegram was sent to J. Sloat Fassett, temporary Chairman of the New York Republican State Convention at Saratoga:

"Connecticut Republicans, in State Convention assembled, extend to New York Republicans their best wishes. Forward, march."

GOV. PEABODY RENOMINATED.

Colorado Republicans Say He Has "Rebuked Spirit of Lawlessness."

DENVER, Sept. 14.—The Republican State Convention to-day renominated Gov. James H. Peabody. The platform indorses the administration of Gov. Peabody and calls on all citizens, irrespective of party, to support him in his efforts to "rebuke the spirit of lawlessness which would turn popular government into irresponsible despotism and keep alive class hatred, lawlessness, and treason."

It pledges the candidates to restrain any excesses, whether practiced by capital or labor. An eight-hour law in favored.

A full State ticket was nominated, including Katherine L. Craig for State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

TO NAME BLACK IN JERSEY.

He Will Be Choice of Democratic Convention Which Meets To-day.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 14.—The Democrats of New Jersey will meet in convention here to-morrow, and Charles C. Black of Hudson County will be nominated for Governor.

All chances of a contest have been eliminated by former United States Senator James Smith consenting to allow Hudson County to name the nominee. The names of Senator Hudspeth of Hudson County and ex-Congressman Farrell will go before the convention, but the nomination of Black is assured. John R. Harden will be Temporary and Permanent

Dollar Shirts For Men

We have tried to improve on our Wanamaker Dollar White Shirts for Men, but have had to give it up. Other stores haven't been able to get anywhere near them, in general excellence, at the same price. The nearest approach to them costs $1.50.

We base this statement on a careful dissection of every other Dollar Shirt on the market.

These Dollar White Dress Shirts are made in five styles:

Open front and back, with studs or eyelets; or short bosom, with one stud or eyelet.
Open back; regular or short bosoms; single or double plait.
Coat Shirts, for studs only.
All sizes, and sleeve lengths in each style.
Bosoms are of fine linen; body of shirts is of good muslin, amply and correctly cut, carefully put together, and accurate and roomy in dimensions. $1 each.

Then we are also proud of our splendid new showing of

DOLLAR COLORED SHIRTS

for men's Autumn and Winter wear. In neat black polka-dots, or fine stripes or figures in blue or black; all sizes; detachable cuffs. Made by the maker of the dollar white shirts, and fine shirts at their price.

Broadway and Ninth street.

Young Men's Suits

Brimful of style and character that will specially appeal to the young men of 15 to 20 years for whom we have planned these new Suits. We have a fine supply of them with double-breasted coats—the popular style; and the materials are handsome fancy cheviots, many of which are in the favorite browns.

Prices run from $10 to $18; and every suit is a bargain at the price.
Suits of blue and black cheviots, sizes 15 to 20 years, are $8.50 to $20.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Hard Suits for Boys to Wear Out

The "Wanamaker Special" Suits for Boys will stand the most severe test that school or play can subject them to, and come out with colors flying. One mother we know keeps her five boys dressed in them; and there are many other parents who are equally appreciative of the splendid wearing qualities of these suits.

The Double-breasted Suits, for example—blue or mixed cheviot; knee trousers with seats and knees reinforced; seams silk-sewed and taped throughout. Suits for which $6.50 would be a fair price—sizes 8 to 17 years—at $5 a suit.

All-wool school Knee Trousers, sizes 6 to 16 years; a special line at $1 pair.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Men's UNDERWEAR

For men accustomed to wearing the best Underwear there is, it's interesting to know that we carry complete lines of the famous English makes of J. and R. Morley, Allen Solly & Co., and other equally noted firms. These garments come in medium and heavy weights; and are made up to our order, from our own specifications, to suit them to American wearers:

At $1.50 each—Morley's heavy balbriggan Shirts and Drawers; fashioned. Drawers have spliced seats.

At $2 each—Morley's medium-weight fine gage balbriggan Shirts and Drawers; fashioned and regular made.

At $2.50 each—Silver-gray llama wool Shirts and Drawers; medium weight, guaranteed unshrinkable.

At $3.50 each—Silver-gray llama wool Shirts and Drawers; medium or heavy weight, guaranteed unshrinkable.

At $4 each—Heavy or medium heavy unshrinkable wool Shirts and Drawers; extra fine in quality and finish.

Paris Silk Waists

Temptingly Priced

These dainty waists of China silk have just completed their ocean trip, and are full of Paris freshness and charm. Besides, they are very moderately priced, for waists that have so much hand-work about them—

$8 Each

And you'd say they should command a good one-third more. In black or white plaited; with yoke of rows of hand-made faggoting; full sleeves and deep cuffs.

There is also a taking group of Paris waists of fine albatross, hand-made, with hand embroidery and trimmed with Cluny or Irish lace. These are $27.50 and $36.

Second floor, Tenth street and Fourth avenue.

Girls' REEFERS

The new "Wanamaker Special" Reefers for girls are here. They fairly tingle with brisk, snappy Autumn style; and bespeak lots of cold-weather comfort for their 6 to 14-year old wearers.

They are exceptionally good value, too—you'd pay $10 for them if we hadn't stirred the maker to special effort, so that we could sell them for

$7.50 Each

Stylishly made in three-quarter length regulation style; of rough brown or navy blue cheviot. Velvet collar, red flannel lining; made to button high or low in neck. Brass buttons, chevrons on sleeves. Splendidly made and finished throughout.

A New Book of AMERICAN HUMOR Published Today

A great many thousands of people thoroughly enjoyed The Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, by George Horace Lorimer. Now the second book of these letters is just off the press. Its title is Old Gorgon Graham. While it is more letters from the same father to his son, it deals with the young man's problems from a distinctly new standpoint. The old man has gradually come to regard his son as more of an equal, and he writes to him as one of the managers of his business. He attempts to help Pierrepont with his domestic problems, and this part of the letters will be read with delight by women as well as men.

Speaking of his son's marital troubles, the old man remarks: "So far as I can see, your mother-in-law is the only real trouble you have married. You simply want to dodge when she leads with the right, and take your full ten seconds on the floor, and come back with your left cheek turned towards her. There is nothing like using a little diplomacy in these matters. Then mother'll mellow up into a nice, old lady, who will brag about you to the neighbors."

There are so many good things in the book, that quotations would scarcely stop until the whole book was quoted. It is a book to take the cobwebs out of the brain, and make men forget their business troubles. Price, $1.08.

YOUR FALL SHOES
Ready---at Large Savings

The cool days and rainy days call sharply for new shoes. Oxfords and thin-soled shoes are kind to the doctors, when their results do not overwork the entire fraternity. There will still be days undoubtedly, to wear low shoes, but high ones should be handy to put on when wanted.

Each year, just when the people begin to feel this anxiety for new shoes, we prepare to supply them in a very large way, and at very much below the usual prices.

The Autumn SHOE SALE Is Ready

This year we have done better than ever before in a good many ways. Most of the shoes which we have provided for the occasion are brand new, in the most popular shapes and styles, having been made up especially for us, during the dull Summer months, when the manufacturers were glad to forego profits to keep the wheels going.

Of course, we have taken many special lots of shoes that the market offered, when we found them worthy of this occasion. They are in great variety for men, women and children.

Those who take advantage of this sale will secure, in almost all cases, exactly the shoes desired, with the assurance that they are worth, on an average, one-half more than the price paid for them. Here are the prices and descriptions of the various groups:

Women's Shoes at $1.50 a Pair

Patent leather, lace; kidskin, button and lace, in ten styles. Hardly any shoe need that you cannot fill from this lot; and they are fairly worth a third more than $2.60.

Rugs of the Orient

We have assembled here at the present time, such a collection of fine and practical Oriental Rugs, as might well constitute a great under-price offering, if these rugs were compared with the usual market valuations; but this is not a bargain announcement, however attractive the values may be.

We have gathered these artistic rugs with the utmost care. We have selected only those which appealed to us by reason of their beauty, and their qualities of excellence.

The Eastern Rug has won its place of pre-eminence by reason of the artistic beauty and great care with which it has been constructed. There is a thoroughness to Oriental workmanship in picking out good wools, in having dyes that last almost for centuries, and the hand-weaving is thoroughly done, to the tying of the last thread.

Rugs possessing these virtues are still to be had, but commercialism has crept in and destroyed the instinct of honesty in some sections of the East; and shoddy, badly-made rugs, which have something of the Oriental characteristics, are being foisted on the public in large quantities.

It is our office to sift out these unworthy sorts, and present to you only authentic and honestly made rugs of the Orient—in that way securing us and you.

With this assurance of excellence, we are still able to quote prices that are often lower than those on shoddy rugs of the same size. While the effects secured in the cheap rugs are very carefully worked out, by a little careful comparison any one can distinguish which is the true and which is the false.

We particularly wish to have you see the following important groups:

About four hundred Rugs in carpet sizes, from 6 x 9 feet to 25 x 35 feet, at prices from $40 to $5000. These rugs are in grades of recognized merit, from Persia, India and Turkey. The kinds include Goravan, Kirmanshah, Tabris, Kurdistan, and Fereghan in the ancient grades. The more modern rugs in this group are Savalan, Axar, Ouchak and Kassaba.

About one hundred Soumac and Afghan Rugs, in sizes from 6½ to 8½ feet wide by 9 to 12 feet long; priced from $65 to $125.

About five hundred Shirvan, Kazak, Mosul, Hamadan, Kirmanshah, Fereghan, Tabris and Silk Rugs; 3 to 6 feet wide by 4 to 9 feet long, at $4.50 to $450.

We Still Have a Fine Large Collection Of USED PIANOS
And Angelus Piano Players

It would have taken a far more gloomy day than yesterday to dampen the public enthusiasm over this Piano Sale; but while yesterday's sale was very large indeed, the collection of pianos prepared for this occasion was an unprecedented one, and the largest two days' selling must necessarily leave a remarkably fine selection for those who did not get here first.

Eighteen Thousand Yards of $1.25
Mohair Nub-figured Cheviots
At 65c and 75c a Yard

First, consider that cheviots are in high favor this Autumn; and are commanding full prices readily.

Next, look at the excellent quality of the Cheviots in this offering—hard-twisted, free from oil, firm and even in texture, and diversified with glistening spiral or straight nubs of self-colored mohair, which gives life and attractiveness to the fabric; with the addition, in some cases, of short dashes of white.

Then, glance at the splendid range of colorings—including plenty of the favorite browns, blues and dark greens—forty-two shades, and black, in all:

Light Browns	Medium Browns	Dark Browns	Cardinals	Garnets	Dark Tans	Cadet Blue	Light Gray
Royal Blues	Navy Blues	Hunter's Green	Dark Greens	Reseda	Plum	Black

Then remember that most cheviots are 45 or 46 inches wide, while these are full fifty inches!

And, lastly, think of the price:

65c and 75c a Yard, Instead of $1.25

—and you'll not think us sanguine for predicting that the entire quantity will go in a trice.

All this season's goods, and the entire surplus the mill had left, after filling the jobbers' orders at a higher figure than the one at which we are now offering the goods.

Some of the foundations for these statements:

HIGGINS AND BRUCE CHOSEN BY ODELL

rooms, Mr. Woodruff walking back to his own cottage. Mr. Barnes was not in the Odell cottage more than five minutes when he came out again and went to join Mr. Woodruff once more.

Conference with Woodruff.

As the conference of the Odell leaders broke up Senator Raines and Edward Lauterbach went into Mr. Woodruff's cottage, and the impression spread that they were the bearers of some sort of a peace message from Gov. Odell. Their coming was eagerly awaited by a large crowd of interested politicians. When asked what the nature of their talk with Mr. Woodruff had been, Senator Raines said:

"We called on him to ask whether he would not consent to an amendment of the resolution introduced in the convention by Mr. Dutcher to the effect that when the nomination for Governor was reached the roll should be called and each delegate be privileged to cast his vote individually. The amendment which we suggested was that if any delegate was unavoidably absent the Chairman of his delegation should be permitted to cast his vote."

"Did he agree to it?"

"He and his friends are now considering it."

At 11:30 Mr. Woodruff came from his headquarters after a protracted conference with friends and said:

"My name will go before the convention to-morrow."

Replying to an inquiry as to the number of votes he would have, he said:

"I don't know. That does not have much to do with the matter anyway."

The Nominees.

M. Linn Bruce, the prospective nominee for Lieutenant Governor, was formerly the Chairman of the New York Republican County Committee. He was removed at the instigation of Gov. Odell when the Governor assumed the leadership of the organization. Bruce had been made Chairman by Platt, and Gov. Odell thought it was necessary for him to remove Bruce and name a man of his own to succeed him in order to demonstrate his sway over the organization.

The relations between the Governor and Mr. Bruce, however, have remained cordial, and when to-night the nomination of Mr. Bruce was strongly urged by ex-Gov. Black and many other prominent up-State leaders, Gov. Odell acquiesced, although it was generally understood that his personal choice would have been Mayor Erastus C. Knight of Buffalo.

Mr. Wallenmeier, Jr., the nominee for State Treasurer, is the Postmaster of Tonawanda. He is said to be a man of wealth and of influence with the German element of the population of the northern part of the State. His nomination was suggested by State Committeeman William C. Warren of Buffalo.

Mr. Wallenmeier was one of the original McKinley men in New York State, and went as an alternate to the convention of 1896.

Compromise Was Impossible.

During the afternoon there was a good deal of talk about the advisability of some compromise on the Gubernatorial nomination. It proceeded from men who are not especially bound up either to Gov. Odell or to Senator Platt, and its inspiration was an apprehension that unless better feeling was restored in the organization than now exists the State ticket would be in grave danger.

Those bent on harmony soon ascertained, however, that a compromise was impossible—that the only possible settlement of the exasperating condition with which the party is confronted to-night would be the withdrawal of either Mr. Higgins or Mr. Woodruff from the contest. Friends of both are equally determined that if their favorite cannot be nominated his rival shall be.

This determination absolutely blocked Gov. Odell from taking up a third candidate. He could not get away from Higgins without accepting Woodruff, for scores of the Higgins men threatened to go into the convention and vote for Woodruff if anything of that kind should be attempted.

Many of the old-time politicians affect to believe that the damage which will be done by the conflict between Gov. Odell and Senator Platt over the make-up of the ticket is being overstated. They point to the fact that a number of Senator Platt's friends, men who have always been with him in all the fights he has had with Gov. Odell over the leadership, are supporting the candidacy of Mr. Higgins.

Nevertheless it is evident from the talk which is heard on many sides that the candidacy of Mr. Higgins is not likely to create any great amount of enthusiasm among the party workers. Mr. Higgins is not a man who is particularly well known to the latter.

Owing to the manner in which the nomination will come to him he will have to overcome a prejudice in many parts of the State, it is said, and there are many who doubt whether he is temperamentally adapted to a task of that kind.

WOODRUFF FORCED INTO FIGHT.

Compelled by Loyalty to Platt to Brave Odell Machine.

Special to The New York Times

SARATOGA, Sept. 14.—The situation which makes it necessary for the friends of Timothy L. Woodruff to stand up in the Republican State Convention to-morrow and be counted was not created either with the consent or knowledge of Mr. Woodruff. It was brought on by Senator Platt entirely of his own volition.

Mr. Woodruff accepts it with what grace he can. He professes complete ignorance of the motive which led Senator Platt to refuse to go into a conference on the nomination, as Gov. Odell suggested.

His friends admit that he would much rather have taken his chances in a conference than to have a line-up in the convention. His wishes, however, were not consulted by the Senator.

He was forced into a situation where but two courses are open to him. He must either have his friends stand up and be counted or turn tail. Admitting defeat to be inevitable, he believes the best course for him to follow, all things considered, is to make the best fight he can.

When it became generally known to-day that it was not by Mr. Woodruff's desire that the fight was to be carried into the convention much wonderment was expressed over Senator Platt's course. Why he should conclude to have a fight in the convention when Mr. Woodruff himself was not anxious for it puzzled the politicians.

When an explanation of the Senator's strange attitude was asked of one of the leaders here who is able to get behind the scenes and who is an astute observer, his reply was:

Platt's Non-Political Advisers.

"Senator Platt's stand is taken on advice from his household, not after counsel with the friends on whom he formerly was wont to rely. As a result Mr. Woodruff is being sacrificed. In the circumstances his only course is to make the best of an unfortunate situation. If Senator Platt were ten years younger these conditions could not have been brought about."

The Kings County delegation held a caucus this morning and adopted a resolution introduced by Hugo Hirsch to the effect that the delegates in the convention be allowed to express their individual preference on the roll-call for Governor. In explanation of their action members of the delegation expressed the opinion that if every delegate in the convention were allowed to cast his own vote Mr. Woodruff would secure a majority.

The caucus elected Mr. Woodruff Chairman of the delegation. In accepting the election Mr. Woodruff said he had served in that capacity six or seven times. Some one shouted, "And you can keep on being elected as Chairman as long as you'll take it."

This sally, as, indeed, every other mention of Mr. Woodruff's name, was received with continued cheers and shouts of enthusiasm.

The caucus also appointed a committee of eight to confer with the delegates from other counties with a view of determining what is best to be done. Mr. Woodruff was made Chairman of this committee, the other members of which are Michael J. Dady, Judge Brenner, Robert A. Sharkey, Philip T. Williams, John Neal, and Harry A. Hanbury. The impression which was created by the appointment of this committee was that an opportunity was being afforded to Mr. Woodruff to get out of the race in the event that he should conclude at the eleventh hour that such was the advisable course for him to take.

When Gov. Odell was seen shortly after the adjournment of the Kings County caucus and informed of its action, he said:

"So far as I am concerned, I hope that the resolution in favor of having each delegate in the convention vote as he pleases will be adopted by the convention. My position all along has been in favor of having convinced that a very large majority of the delegates favor Mr. Higgins."

Senator Platt said to-day that the reason why he did not see fit to go into the conference of leaders called by Gov. Odell was because of his belief that it was Odell's firm intention to secure an indorsement of Francis Hendricks.

"He wanted to commit me to Hendricks by the action of the conference," said the Senator, "and I told him 'Not by a damned sight.' Mr. Higgins called on me yesterday as soon as he arrived and he talked splendidly. I have a high regard for Mr. Higgins. My objection to his candidacy is not personal to him.

"I told him that I was against him because I found that there was a preponderance of sentiment in favor of Woodruff and because the open espousal of his candidacy by the close friends of Odell had caused too much talk about 'the tag' to be healthy. He said that he had learned from his friends that a majority of the delegates favored his nomination, and while he regretted being at odds with me that he intended to become a candidate. I told him he had that privilege."

A sharp interchange of personalities characterized the arguments before the Committee on Credentials this afternoon over the contest in the Nineteenth Assembly District of New York City. The participants in this exchange of opinion were Lemuel E. Quigg and John S. Wise. Mr. Wise, in speaking for the contesting delegates, attacked Mr. Quigg in a personal way, and, although Mr. Quigg's reply was less heated, the ire was several times passed by both sides. The committee decided against the contesting delegation.

The primary fight in the district was between the followers of ex-Deputy State Controller Theodore P. Gilman and Representative William H. Douglas. At the close of the open session of the committee Mr. Douglas rose to deny Mr. Quigg's prediction that he and his followers intended to bolt the coming district convention for the nomination of an Assemblyman.

FASSETT PLEASES DELEGATES.

Chairman's Speech the Feature of First Day's Session.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Sept. 14.—It was a dreary and bedraggled Saratoga that greeted the Republican delegates and shouters this morning when they got out of bed to prepare for the first session of the State Convention. Nature seemed determined to throw cold water on the entire proposition, and made good its determination.

Because of the rain and the generally gloomy conditions, all of the delegates were late in arriving at the convention hall, and at noon, the hour set for calling the body to order, there were few more than five hundred persons in the building, which can hold 5,000 people.

The stage was draped with flags and also showed pictures of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. Prominent in the decorations was an enormous silk flag, showing an old-time arrangement of the stars in the field. This flag had been brought from the Capitol at Albany for the convention, and is the flag that covered the coffin in which Abraham Lincoln lay in state in the old Capitol.

First of the big men of the party to arrive was Senator Chauncey M. Depew, who came in a few minutes after noon, and who was cheered and applauded as he walked through the aisles to his seat with the New York delegation. While Depew was being cheered Mrs. Depew and the Senator's son, "Buster," both of whom were occupying seats on the platform, beamed enthusiastically.

The biggest demonstration of the day, however, except that given for Senator Platt, started at 12:10 o'clock, when Timothy L. Woodruff came in and took his seat with the Kings County delegation. From all parts of the hall came cheers and shouts and handclapping, and when the Kings County contingent took up the cry and sustained it until Mr. Woodruff was seated, the noise was well-nigh deafening. Borough President George Cromwell of Richmond, came in with Mr. Woodruff and escorted him to his seat.

By this time all of the delegates were on the qui vive for Senator Platt and Gov. Odell. The latter disappointed them, as he did not show up in the hall at any stage of the day's proceedings.

Barnes Opens the Convention.

William Barnes, Jr., the Chairman of the State Executive Committee, called the convention to order at 12:15 o'clock, in the absence of Gov. Odell, who should have called it to order, because of being the Chairman of the State Committee.

When the prayer was over Mr. Barnes announced that Mr. Fassett had been selected by the State Committee for the temporary presiding officer of the convention, and named Senator Depew and ex-Gov. Black to escort Fassett to the chair. The ex-Senator was warmly greeted as he took the gavel from Mr. Barnes's hands. Among the things he said were these:

"We challenge a contrast between what we have done and what our Democratic friends have done when they themselves have had the power and control.

"If it be true that Providence has done it all, our reply is that Providence seems to have retired from business whenever the Democratic Party has come into power. If Providence is willing to co-operate solely with the Republican Party, it would seem wise for the American people never to seek to dissolve the partnership.

"Again, they tell us that we did not accomplish alone all that has been done. This also is true. But as a party, as a Democratic organization, our opponents have at every step opposed our progress and delayed our advancement.

"Animated by no enduring principles or consistent purposes, they have only agreed upon opposition to whatever we proposed. Our Democratic friends are, however, sometimes enabled in retrospect to see something excellent in what we have done. There are many of them to-day who eulogize Lincoln and Grant and McKinley.

It was 2 o'clock when Mr. Fassett concluded his speech, while the band struck up "Yankee Doodle." The Chairman proceeded then to perfect the temporary organization through the naming of the Secretaries and the committees.

Michael J. Dady of Brooklyn was made Chairman of the Committee on Permanent Organization, Senator Edgar Truman Brackett of Saratoga Springs was made Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, and John A. Bleicher of New York was made Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. All committees were ordered to meet later in the afternoon.

"Open Convention" Resolution.

While these committees were being named Silas B. Dutcher of Kings County secured recognition and presented to the convention the "open convention" resolution, which had been agreed upon by the Kings County delegation at its meeting earlier in the day.

"I have been assured this is to be an 'open convention,'" said Mr. Dutcher, without even the faintest semblance of a smile. "I also believe that in every Republican convention we shall always have the right to express our own preferences. Therefore, I offer this resolution, which I shall read:

"'Resolved, That when the vote for candidates for Governor is taken the roll of the individual delegates shall be called, so that each delegate may arise and explain his personal choice and that of his constituents.'"

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Resolutions, and at 2:10 o'clock the convention adjourned to meet again at 11 o'clock in the morning.

FREMONTERS HEAR SPEECHES.

Republican Semi-Centennial Celebration at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, Sept. 14.—Rain which fell in torrents did not prevent a good attendance at the Republican Party's semi-centennial this evening. Occupying seats on the platform were 125 white-haired veterans who voted for John C. Frémont. Frederick W. Seward, son of Lincoln's Secretary of State, presided.

Senator Fairbanks delivered an address in which he said:

"Where are the trophies of the Republican Party? There is our financial credit, as sacredly preserved as the life of the Republic. There is the gold standard. There is our industrial system, which is the marvel of the age.

AUTO BOAT MACARONI.

Said to be Speedy and Will Enter for Challenge Cup.

A new auto boat that is confidently expected to attain high speed will be brought to this city within a few days, and if her trial trips prove satisfactory the craft will be entered in the Challenge Cup races to be held late this month under the auspices of the American Power Boat Association. The new boat has been built in Boston, and will be entered in the coming race by Hollander & Tangeman, whose Flat boats appeared in a number of motor boat races early in the season. The odd name of Macaroni has been given to the boat. It is one of those self-explanatory names, somewhat on the fashion of W. K. Vanderbilt's Hard-Boiled Egg, but which proved a misnomer. The Macaroni, on the other hand, is believed to be a dandy, as auto boats go, and, according to the "Yankee Doodle" line—"he stuck a feather in his cap and called it macaroni"—so the boat will be ornamented on the prow with a rakish looking hat showing a feather sticking through it.

The ingenuity of auto boat names has been one of the characteristic features this season, and if the boats themselves have often been a disappointment in speed, there has been no lack of novelty and surprises in names.

The Macaroni is 32 feet long and will have an engine of about 60 horse power. With this new boat and the fast Mercedes boats already entered, one owned by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in addition to the Vingt-Un and the Challenger, the contest for the Challenge Cup promises to be the most satisfactory auto boat race of the year. It will be held on the Hudson, starting from the Columbia Yacht Club, foot of West Eighty-sixth Street, the first of the three races being on Sept. 21.

VESPER BOAT CLUB RESIGNS.

Claims Its Members Were Not Treated Fairly in Middle States Regatta.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 14.—It leaked out late to-night that the Vesper Boat Club had resigned from the Middle States Regatta Association. This action was caused by the treatment of the oarsmen who rowed on the Harlem River on Labor Day. In that regatta the Philadelphia crews, who furnished a large percentage of the entry list, did not win a single event. The claim is made that they were treated in an unsportsmanlike manner.

In the four-oared barge race the Vespers were obliged to row in a borrowed boat. When the start was made the crew was fully twenty feet from the line, and the other contestants were sent away, with the Philadelphians in this position. This removed all chance of the Vesper sweeps taking the race, as they finished about this distance behind the leading crew.

In the four-oared shell race the Vespers were strong favorites and were neck and neck with the Ravenswood four all the way down the course. A cannon boomed, which the visiting oarsmen understood was to mark the end of the race, and they stopped rowing. The judges decided that Ravenswood had won by six inches, although it is claimed that the Philadelphians were in the lead at the time the signal was given.

NEW YORK RIFLEMEN WIN.

Seventy-first's Team Took the Cruikshank Trophy at Creedmoor.

New York riflemen carried off first honors again yesterday in a military target competition at the Creedmoor range.

Six members of the Empire State's Seventy-first Regiment of citizen soldiery won the $300 trophy, presented by E. A. Cruikshank, and $7 in cash, constituting the leading prize in the Cruikshank trophy match. The winning score was 567 out of a possible 630. The team representing the First Regiment National Guard of the State of New Jersey finished a close second with 563. The second prize was $50. The third prize, $25, was captured by the Seventh Regiment of New York. Two teams from the United States Marine Corps engaged in the contest and made good scores.

The scores were:

Selling Race Bids and Claims.

H. T. Griffin, known from New York to California as "Halter" Griffin, has been active in his old practice of bidding up and claiming horses out of selling races since the Brighton Beach meeting opened, and as a result there has been a number of quick changes in ownership in the past two days. Griffin ran Jane Holly, claimed but recently from J. C. Yeager, in the third race at Brighton yesterday, and the mare finished second to William Lakeland's Little Em. Griffin promptly bid up the winner, entered to sell for $1,600, to $2,600, her owner retaining her for $5 additional. The fashion having been set, E. E. Smathers, whose colt Dick Bernard was bid up by Griffin the day before, acted on his right to claim through Stevedore, beaten in the race, and claimed Jane Holly for $1,840, while J. W. Colt, owner of the beaten horse Dapple Gold, put in a claim and secured the Patchogue Stable's Eagle for $2,840. Griffin on the day before secured Mrs. L. Curtis's Stolen Moments by a claim out of the selling race won by Dick Bernard; after having bid up the winner, so that after yesterday's claiming a half dozen stables are entangled in the bidding and claiming, and the prospects are that selling races for the remainder of the Brighton meeting will be productive of excitement other than that of the actual contests.

How Madden "Squared" Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 14.—The story reached here to-day of how John E. Madden repaid John A. Drake for selling him Britisher for $25,000. Madden had a good thing bottled up in the Watercress colt Waterside, and through Senator P. H. McCarren placed several thousand on him at 20, 15, and 10 to 1. He told Mr. Drake that he wanted to make him even on the Britisher deal, and asked him to play heavy on Waterside, which Drake did and cleared up over $50,000. McCarren's commissioners took out of the ring about $90,000, of which $75,000 went to Madden. Waterside was bought by Madden for $4,800, and it was his first win, and Madden was so certain that he would hold his field to the good that he put his friends next for good fortunes. Senator McCarren told a Lexington friend of the whole deal, and said Mr. Drake was not well satisfied with his purchase of Britisher.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

THE SORROWS OF PLATT.

In reciting the glorious achievements of the Republican Party to an audience of men whose minds were wholly occupied with the rivalry between WOODRUFF and HIGGINS and the "fight" between PLATT and ODELL, Mr. FASSETT wasted his words and their time. For have they not already learned from the lips of Mr. ROOT and Mr. HAY, and from the pen of President ROOSEVELT, that for half a century every blade of grass, every stalk of corn, and every individual growing thing in this broad land has been planted by the Republican Party, watched, watered, and tended by the fathers of the protective tariff, and brought to maturity and fruition by the only party in this country that is "fit to govern"? Mr. FASSETT was saying undisputed things in a reiterative and tiresome way. His audience, we have no doubt, was eager to get down to business. Unfortunately the "business" of the Convention had not been advanced by its managers to a stage of preparation which permitted it to be completed yesterday; hence an adjournment to this morning, when, if the "fight" has not been ended by the usual dickers and handshakings, it will be resumed. We have little doubt that it will be ended; at least if it is resumed it will hardly be either gory or protracted. Poor Mr. PLATT is not the man, not the leader he was ten or fifteen years ago. Gov. ODELL is not only powerful, he is relentless. He has feeling, mercy, and consideration for PLATT only so far as he thinks an appearance of decent harmony will be helpful to himself. PLATT no longer has much strength, anyway, and the little that he has he is scarcely sure of in a "fight." A man who is Governor, Chairman, and boss occupies a position of indubitable advantage.

Governor and Chairman ODELL appears to be of the opinion that this State is going Republican, that his candidate, even though it should be Mr. HIGGINS, will be successful. Mr. HIGGINS would indeed prove to be a natural leader of men if he could triumph, weighed down as he will be by the unpopularity of the man who nominates him.

FIGURING ON MAINE.

We have no more inclination to claim the result of the election in Maine as a sure indication of a change in public sentiment strong enough to overcome the Republican plurality of 1900 than we felt in the case of Vermont, but we think that our neighbor The Sun is a little imprudent in assuring its Republican friends that "Vermont and Maine are sufficient proof that there is no water for a Democratic 'tidal wave.'" Some of the cipherers at the Roosevelt headquarters, taking this same view, have been applying the time-honored method of percentages to sustain it. But percentages in this case are fatal.

The following little table shows the Democratic and Republican vote in Maine in the year 1900 and in this year, with the percentages of increase in each case:

	1904.	1900.	Per Cent.
Republican	75,964	72,541	+ 4.7
Democratic	50,017	39,714	+25.9

It will be seen that while the Republican vote increased only 4.7 per cent., that of the Democrats increased 25.9 per cent. If we suppose that similar changes take place this year in the State of New York, we should have the result shown in the next table:

	1900.	Increase. Per Cent.	1904.
Democratic	678,384	25.9	854,071
Republican plurality			6,554

The Republican plurality would be reduced to 6,554, and that, in a total of over 1,500,000, and the Odell-Platt fight still "on," is not at all a sure margin. If we apply the same test to the vote of the State of Illinois, we get the following table:

	1900.	Increase. Per Cent.	1904.
Republican	597,985	4.7	626,080
Democratic	503,061	25.9	633,352
Democratic plurality			7,272

The Democrats would have a plurality of 7,272. In Indiana there would be still more striking effects produced:

	1900.	Increase. Per Cent.	1904.
Democratic	309,584	25.9	390,717

The Democrats would carry the State by 42,000.

We think ourselves that the election in Maine has very little value as an indication of what the result will be in November, and that such significance as it possesses is not altogether encouraging to the advocates of Judge PARKER. But there are the figures, and if our sanguine friends on the other side insist on basing large superstructures on them it is worth noting that the basis is frail and uncertain. And as far as "tidal waves" go, it is to be recalled that the latest and worst of them occurred in the tranquil waters of the Pacific and gave no warning of its approach. What happens in physical nature sometimes happens in politics.

THE MAYOR TO THE BANKERS.

Mayor MCCLELLAN expressed some contrition in his address of welcome to the bankers yesterday that he had "preached." We do not think it was to be regretted. The little preaching he did was on a subject he understands and one of great importance to his hearers, of importance perhaps greater than their interest in it, the direct and considerable responsibility of their class—we may well say their profession—for currency legislation.

It is perfectly true, as he said, that the currency laws are in some respects as "archaic and unsuited to our modern development as the old militia law." And the following statement is equally true:

> Congress is always upon the eve of an election. The fear that one side or the other may make political capital has caused Congress, no matter which party may have been in power, constantly to defer the consideration of an adequate currency law, until the question seems to be almost as impossible of solution as the riddle of the Sphinx or the squaring of the circle. You have it in your power to prove to the people of the United States that the question of the currency is in no sense political. You have it in your power to so educate public opinion that Congress, regardless of section, or faction, or party, will enact a currency law adequate to the needs of modern conditions, which will not be in the interests of any community or group of men, but in the best interests of the whole people.

We like to think of ourselves as an advanced people, and in some very essential things we are advanced indeed, but in financial legislation we are far behind some other countries. This is not at all due to lack of general intelligence or to lack of special intelligence in those who deal most directly with the matter. It is chiefly due to the great resources and rapid growth of the country, which have enabled us to bear almost without realizing them the burdens our defective system imposes, and in part to our decentralized system of government, which has many advantages, but which scatters responsibility and makes united action difficult. The spring for such action lies in public opinion, and that the bankers should be able to guide.

THE MONEY VALUE OF RAPID TRANSIT.

The fact that the time between two points as widely separated as, say, Rector and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Streets will by the subway be reduced an average of ten minutes, thus saving twenty minutes daily to those who traverse this distance habitually, or two hours in each week, suggests a calculation which some will be likely to consider interesting and others profitable.

Let us suppose that there are 10,000 persons who will daily go south and north between these two stations; their aggregate saving in time will be 3,333 hours a day, or 19,998 hours a week. Allowing for the class who will thus travel the customary two weeks' annual vacation, their fifty weeks of daily travel will be shortened by 999,900 hours, or 41,662½ days of 24 hours. As the average business day does not exceed eight hours, this saving would represent 124,987 business days in every year. If the time of these 10,000 habitual travelers is worth 50 cents an hour, each one will have gained by the saving in time devoted to travel 16 2-3 cents a day, or in round numbers $37.24 per year of 286 days. The aggregate money advantage to 10,000 people in the ordinary business year should be $372,400.

On this basis it would be very easy to figure that the average saving in time effected by the subway for the total number of people moved daily would alone represent interest on considerably more than its cost. For example, if a million people travel by the subway daily, each passenger average a gain of five minutes, and this time be worth .83 cent a minute, or 4.15 cents per trip, a million people would show an aggregate saving of $41,500 per day, or $12,450,000 per year of business days.

If it be objected that the time thus saved will not be so profitably utilized as to vindicate this calculation, the appropriate answer is that time is money, and that if not utilized to the best advantage the fault is with the person who wastes his time, and not with the calculation as to what that time is worth to him if he did utilize it. Moreover, whatever saves time increases the productiveness of a community and adds to the National wealth. To lengthen by a third of an hour the average business day of even ten thousand people without curtailing the time which may be devoted to rest and recreation is arithmetically equivalent to increasing the productiveness of these 10,000 persons by the added labor of 416.6 persons through each eight-hour business day. From this point of view the subway is undoubtedly the best of possible investments for New York.

SMOKELESS COAL AND NAVAL REQUIREMENTS.

The much-discussed proposition to reserve for the exclusive use of the Admiralty what remains of the definitely limited supply of smokeless steam coal in the thirteen or more collieries which now supply coal for the British Navy has called out a wide diversity of opinion. Perhaps the most interesting contribution to the discussion is that of Mr. J. MCCAULAY, General Manager of the Alexandra Docks and Railway, who becomes prophetic as follows:

> At the worst—and that is probably a hundred years distant, at least—with an exhausted supply of steam coal, we will be no worse off than our rivals. But with science making the strides it does, who can imagine for a moment that such a crude form of generating power as the direct burning of coal in a furnace will then obtain? Instead, possibly having passed through an intermediate stage of oil fuel, a practicable method of cheaply storing electrical power may have been discovered, and the picture of the "coaling of a battleship in 1904" be found hanging as an interesting curiosity upon the cabin wall of the commander of the period, much as we hang pictures of stage coaches upon the walls of our drawing rooms. The battleship of 1954 or 2004—if she will have herself survived—will moor alongside the power station at the naval base, connect a few wire ends with those upon the quay, and have her accumulators charged in a few hours for three months' continuous steaming, the power being cheaply generated by "producer gas" engines, by tidal rise and fall, or by the harnessing of some other natural force.

The idea that buried coal will be of much less use to coming generations than to that which now occupies the centre of the terrestrial stage is not a new one, but comparatively few have found the courage to predict the trend of mechanical development quite so positively as Mr. MCCAULAY has done. His main point, however, is apparently unanswerable: Posterity will best be served by doing all that can be done with available resources in promoting the welfare of humanity along the lines established by the beneficent arts of peace. Half a century ago there was a strong public sentiment in Great Britain in favor of the preservation of English oak for the exclusive use of the navy in building the "wooden walls" which were the safeguards of the nation. That it was not done may be regretted, but not because the wooden frigate of half a century ago would be of any use to-day. It is a very safe prediction that the era of the steam engine will not last until coal is scarce: but just what will take its place is a matter of conjecture in which a lively imagination has an advantage over one which moves more sluggishly. It is impossible not to agree with Mr. MCCAULAY that: "A talent is not given to be buried, but to be put into immediate and active circulation for the purpose of gaining the fullest measure of working power. It is for that power, best adapted from its breadth to advantageous working expression by the changing methods and forces of progress, that our descendants will thank us." This is a sane and wholesome view of the duty of the present to the future.

REAL AND MIMIC WAR.

The Russian General, SASSULITCH, who was erroneously reported to be one of those captured by the Japanese, is very unpopular at the St. Petersburg War Office by reason of the fact that he is rather too much of a fighter to conform to Russian standards. A year ago he was in command of a division of infantry at the manœuvres near St. Petersburg, and insisted upon storming and capturing heights occupied by artillery and in the face of a fire which, theoretically, should have exterminated his column. The judges were disgusted, and instead of a compliment Gen. SASSULITCH received a reprimand and a rating of zero.

Of course, if a man plays a game he should play it according to the rules; but recent experience should modify the harsh official judgment of the irrepressible and undisciplined commander's concept of the conditions of real war. On more than one occasion the Japanese have stormed and taken positions which were deemed impregnable and in the face of a fire which any umpire of a battle with blank cartridges would have decided was hot enough to wither any attacking column. The success of the Japanese would seem to lie chiefly in the doing of things which the Russian strategists—if there be any—deemed quite impossible.

THE LUNCH HABIT.

The "coming man" has not been much discussed of late. The debate to which he gave rise was inconclusive, since it did not leave us quite sure whether he would have hair or be bald, whether he would be greater or less in stature than the present average, or what his tastes and habits would be. Perhaps the most interesting question concerning him which has not been discussed ad nauseam is, Will he eat luncheon?

A well-known business man lately remarked: "Emancipation from the lunch habit is, in my judgment, the most important step which a young man can take in the direction of practical success." This apparently extravagant statement he subsequently explained very convincingly by his own experience. Early recognizing that he could not do his duty by his employers if he cut his day in halves and absented himself from his post for even a short period, he saw also that an important advantage was likely to come to himself by doubling his vigilance at the time when that of those about him was likely to be relaxed. This foresight was quickly vindicated by a number of incidents which, for the moment, made him the most responsible employé of the house he worked for and called attention to his capacity and fidelity. Since then he has not found time during business hours to set apart for lunch thirty to forty-five minutes of very valuable time, and the clerk who needs this indulgence is one who has no chance in his office for advancement beyond routine work.

The authority quoted has observed that the lunch habit is one which grows upon the person who yields to it, gradually expanding into a dinner habit and unfitting one for effective work during the afternoon. One thus overfed feels very well for a few minutes, but soon becomes "logy" and sleepy if his digestion is good, or irritable and nervous if his digestion is poor. He finds it impossible to take interest in his work and the last hours of his business day are spoiled by physical incapacity to devote his best energies to what he has to do. If he takes a light supper after his day is over he must go to bed early, or by 10 or 11 o'clock he will need another supper, which is likely to spoil his night's sleep. Very likely he will rise unrested and unrefreshed, with no inclination for other breakfast than strong coffee, and begin his day in bad condition, to be "good for little until he has had his midday feed and good for nothing thereafter."

There is an increasingly large number of business and professional men to whom this view of the lunch habit appeals strongly. In their opinion the sane habit of eating under normal conditions of business life in a city calls for a substantial breakfast, and regards the disinclination to eat upon rising as evidence of a disordered stomach and impaired digestion. By one who has thus begun the day properly the need for food is not again felt until, say, 6:30 or 7 P. M., the hour at which civilized communities dine. He is then comfortably hungry, wants a good dinner, and enjoys it, and is in the best condition for a pleasant and profitable evening. If wise he will avoid late suppers, and his sleep will not be disturbed by the results of indigestion, unless by reason of imprudent drinking, which should be avoided, whatever his habits in other respects.

This is a matter concerning which opinions are likely to differ as widely as habits. It is, however, one which has for the average business man a greater interest than he may have realized, and is likely to repay thoughtful discussion.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—A correspondent who is himself a doctor commends and corroborates our somewhat impatient denial of the claim so often made by members of his profession—the claim that they alone among men are sufficiently forgetful of selfish interests to labor earnestly at the task of destroying the conditions out of which they make their livings. "Medical men," he says, "are no better than other men, and the profession as a whole reflects the virtues and shortcomings of the age. No sensible men elect to become doctors simply from altruistic motives. They enter the medical profession partly from choice and chiefly to make a living." Our correspondent insists, however, that the doctors do see life from a point of view which is rarely granted to other workers, and that this outlook is favorable to the development of altruistic conduct on the part of medical practitioners. Nobody denies, or thinks of denying, that assertion, but it does not conflict at all with ours, which was that the progress of preventive medicine is not appreciably decreasing the doctor's opportunities to collect his well-earned fees, and that the ideal world whence all illness has been banished is obviously of an attainment so close to infinitely remote that no measurable self-sacrifice is directly involved in the most energetic of struggles toward it. That doctors, or many doctors, are generous and charitable is beyond question; it is probable, indeed, that they do more work for nothing than the members of any other profession. Most of them admit, however, that they make the rich pay for the poor as much and as often as they can, and their pecuniary rewards are not so small, considering that with the money goes so large an amount of the public's cordially expressed respect that the doctor's social position is distinctly above that of a vast majority of his fellow-men. They are doing something, even much, toward the banishment of diseases, but if they are banishing disease, it is at a rate much too slow to affect their incomes for many a century to come. As our correspondent puts it, "society is as successful in multiplying causes and conditions favorable to the development of disease and accident as medical science is in discovering means for heading off and stamping out diseases." And that is putting the case very charitably for the doctors—and even more so for society.

—Capt. GEORGE MARSTERS of the Nova Scotian schooner Theta will have to do a lot of able explaining before he convinces the owners of the vessel—unless she happens to have but one and the one himself—that his abandonment of her was in accord with the nautical standards of right and wrong as set in bluenose circles. To be sure, the Theta was run down by a steamer, which made a big hole in her bow, killed one of her officers, and stove all her boats, thus creating a situation that was distinctly unpleasant and not without its elements of danger. Making, no doubt, a judgment of the prospects as careful as the circumstances and his temperament would permit, Capt. MARSTERS decided that they were hopeless and allowed himself and his men to be "rescued" by a Clyde liner and taken into Wilmington. So hasty was the departure from the apparently sinking schooner that none of her canvas was lowered, and she made off into the fog off Five Fathom Lightship on the wildly erratic course chosen in such cases by all sailing vessels except those rigged by the eminent Capt. SLOCUM of the incredibly intelligent Spray. But the Theta did not sink when she was expected to; as a matter of fact, she did not sink at all, thanks to her cargo of pine, and, another steamer coming along in due time, a prize crew of men less excitable than her original company was put on board and she was towed safely, and with no difficulty at all, into this port on Tuesday. Hence an all-comprehending salvage. Hence, also, many evil moments for Capt. GEORGE MARSTERS, since the outcome of the episode proves him to be a man unduly prompt in reaching an expensive conclusion—a trait at which Nova Scotia frowns even more severely than do countries where the neighboring waters are not of a kind to make navigation a constant emergency, and any consideration of personal safety by a skipper too absurd to pass muster even as a joke. Yet it is very much more than possible that Capt. MARSTERS is an able commander, for other able commanders have made again and again the mistake he made—to their endless regret, as bitter, no doubt, as his is, and with the most serious of consequences to their professional careers.

—From Hoboken, whither we are constantly looking for the grand, the gloomy, and the peculiar, comes a suggestion—which is at least peculiar—with reference to improved abbreviations for the names of two of the States, Missouri and Mississippi. "Miss.," it seems, is well enough, except for the fact that Mississippi's claim upon it is no better than Missouri's, on any grounds, and not as good on the ground that if Mississippi gave it over to Missouri for use in place of her present absurd and arbitrary "Mo.," the generous State would at once be led to make a really brilliant geographical joke. For the first two syllables of her name, if viewed in just the right light, reveal that for her the destined contraction is "Mrs.," not "Miss." An elderly State, she could wear with dignity and honor the matronly title, while that of maidenhood would do excellently well for Missouri, which, though it entered, or was admitted to, the Union only four years later, was much more than four years younger at the time and has remained so ever since. We do not consider it absolutely necessary that this suggestion from Hoboken should be adopted, and we appreciate that to do so would involve a lot of trouble for map-makers and the postal clerks, neither of whom have much sense of humor, but it is a good suggestion for all that, and its careful discussion would lend a welcome diversity to the now monotonous chorus of political controversy. Both of the Presidential candidates could express opinions on it with perfect safety, and they could toss a coin to decide which should argue for and which against the proposed change.

—Dislodged from its position that no Southerner could, even if he would or should, talk after the Northern fashion, The Charlotte (N. C.) Chronicle has withdrawn to an inner line of defense, and, making an obstinate stand there, declares that, though the Southerner who lives long in the North may abandon a good many of his peculiarities of pronunciation and intonation, he will never give them all up, but will remain to the end of time—or, at least, of his time—a man whose tongue marks him as unlike ourselves. "We doubt," it says, "if THE TIMES can show a real Southerner who has, in fact, lost the Southern accent and has picked up the Northern tongue with any degree of accuracy. But, if THE TIMES is sure of its ground, if it really knows that the people we are sending up to its section are paying as the penalty a change of intonation from that of the harp to that of the cymbal, we beg it to aid us in putting a stop to it. If people can change their accent, then let the changing be done by the people who, like THE TIMES, live up North and mostly up in the air." This appeal touches us by its pathos, but we are as helpless to aid one way as The Chronicle is to prevent the other. It can have the consolation of knowing, however, that the unification of American speech is a matter of compromise, not of imposition, and that each body of citizens is giving and taking in the process that is going on. In the years to come none of us will talk exactly as he does now, and of the best of everything something will survive in the end.

H. H. ROGERS HOME AGAIN.

Has Been Busy Having a Good Time—Mark Twain Meets Him.

H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company, Mrs. Rogers, and Mrs. Simpson Rogers were passengers on the White Star Line steamship Oceanic, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool. Mark Twain was at the pier to meet them. Mr. Rogers said that he went abroad seven weeks ago because Mrs. Rogers was in ill-health and needed an outing. They spent their time in Europe at Vichy.

Mr. Rogers refused to discuss the political situation, saying that he had been so intent while abroad on having a good time that he had completely lost track of affairs. He said that he had not thought of business while away. He said that he met Commodore Plant, the owner of the racing schooner Ingomar, in Paris, and that the Commodore was greatly elated over the victories he had won abroad. He will return on one of the ships due here on Saturday.

Mr. Rogers said that he had no plans for racing his yacht Kanawha; that, as a matter of fact, there would be nothing for him to beat until the new turbine yachts come out.

THE PASSPORT PROBLEM.

Argument of Russian Origin to Abolish the Custom.

From The London Standard.

ODESSA, Aug. 31.—The Yuzhanin, a journal published at Nicolaieff, contains a somewhat strongly worded article advocating the immediate and entire abolition of the Russian passport system. It is pointed out, among other things, that in the most flourishing years the revenue from this source has never exceeded four to five million rubles, or about one-half per cent. of the total revenue. During the current year, it is officially admitted, the income from passports will barely cover the cost of printing, administration, &c. It is a proved fallacy that the passport system affords any essential security to life or property.

Moreover, the system is a standing hindrance to free communication and ordinary travel, and is a source of constant vexation to all respectable and law-abiding people, who are practically made responsible for the criminal minority. It promotes official venality, and induces otherwise upright citizens and foreign residents to pay blackmail when, before receiving free passes, they are confronted with all kinds of formal obstacles, deliberately raised by corrupt officials. In fact, the passport system curtails the liberty of the subject, and hinders his movements and business avocations. Instead of reducing crime it is notorious that the passport system fosters criminality. The art of forging false passports has become a national institution, and people "wanted" by the police are, when traced, generally found in possession of correctly drawn-up "papers of legitimation."

German Graves 2,500 Years Old.

From The London Standard.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—According to reports from Kostiach, in the district of Aitkirch, interesting prehistoric graves have just been excavated on the Kastelberg, six hundred and forty metres above the level of the sea. Numerous persons thronged around while the excavations were being made. On the skeletons of the dead appearing, at the end of much assiduous digging, the conductor of the excavations turned to all those who were assembled around him, and addressed them as follows: "Gentlemen, we are standing here at the grave of three men who, beyond all doubt, fell here, more than two thousand five hundred years ago, while fighting for their most sacred possessions. Honor to the remains of these heroes! I request you all to take off your hats." Hereupon all present acquiesced in the Director's request, a forester who was presented fired a shot from his gun, and thus honor was duly paid to the remains of the discovered ancients.

Russian Wives for Sale.

From The London Express.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 2.—In the Kharkoff, Poltava, and Ekaterinoslav Provinces of Russia, says The Novoe Vremya, there is a rapidly growing trade in the sale of wives, frequently at their own desire.

The usual cause is the extreme poverty of the husband, who can no longer keep his wife; though it is often because the wife desires to be free from a cruel, drunken partner. The trade has become so common that few markets are held without such transactions, which are considered so binding that no case has been known of a husband demanding his wife back.

Their market value varies from £8 to £15. More is never paid. The women are required to be good housewives and fieldworkers.

Practically Admitted.

From The Philadelphia Press.

Tess—May is considerably older than Bess.

Jess—Yes. May practically admitted it to me the other day.

Tess—You don't say?

Jess—Yes, she said, "Bess is just about my age."

Pandora Started It.

From Judge.

Pandora has just opened the casket. "Now," she said, "the lid is off."

This is the origin of the expression, Devery to the contrary notwithstanding.

Small Potatoes.

From The Chicago News.

Mifkins—What do you think of that young man who is calling on your daughter?

Bifkins—Oh, he's the limit. He reminds me of a cipher with the rim off.

Her Economical Ways.

From Puck.

"Is your wife economical?"

"Very. She can fix over a ten dollar hat for fifteen dollars so it will look just as good as a new one."

Achievement.

From The New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"Rightleigh says he has finished the most difficult part of his new novel."

"Found a publisher, has he?"

MR. SHEPARD FOR GOVERNOR.

Everett P. Wheeler Says His Candidacy Would Unite Democrats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is no candidate for Governor of New York whose nomination would unite the Democracy as effectually as Edward M. Shepard. There are many of us who felt obliged to oppose him for Mayor who would gladly support him for Governor.

We recognize the effective canvass he made at that time, and the powerful and persuasive manner in which he discusses political questions.

He has strong convictions, unusual tact, high character, great executive ability.

EVERETT P. WHEELER.

New York, Sept. 12, 1904.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This is no time for the bosses to figure on any camp followers or party hacks to place in a position of this kind and at this particular juncture, where so much depends on success. The man that looms up the most prominent and pre-eminent of them all is that sterling Democrat Edward M. Shepard, whose very name inspires confidence, whose ability stands unrivaled, whose integrity is beyond question, and who in fact is a very giant among the Democrats of this part of the country, or in fact any part of it.

It seems to me that when such a man can be induced to run for this office, high as it is, there should not be a second choice, nor should there be a division of sentiment. Our enemy's guns would be silenced when trained on Edward M. Shepard, as they cannot point their finger at a single act in his political life that has not been prompted by the highest devotion to the purest principles. The high intellectual ability of which he is master and his ripe experience of the law would enable him to suggest laws which would be a permanent benefit to the people of this great Commonwealth.

This is a time when the leaders should pay heed to what the plain people demand and for the Democracy which has in the past made so many blunders that it is a common saying among the Republicans that the Democrats can always be depended on to make some blunder at a crucial time that allows them to retain power. Democrats of all kinds are united as they have not been in years. The standard bearer of our National ticket is a man of whom we can be proud—square, honest, and judicial, firm, in fact sane and sound, and we want a man at the head of this great State who will enable him to carry the vital point and insure his election.

M. E. MOORE.

Kingston, N. Y., Sept. 13, 1904.

LEGAL AID SOCIETY'S APPEAL.

Business Increasing and More Funds Needed—14,000 Aided.

A statement has been issued calling attention to the increase in the business of the Legal Aid Society, which up to the first of the present month has assisted 14,000 persons. A majority of the cases were where wages had been wrongfully withheld from domestic servants and seamstresses in sweat shops.

The society acknowledges the receipt of $1,925 in contributions ranging from $20 to $700, and states that, with the increased demands upon its services, its income is still insufficient to cover the expenses of the four offices which it is forced to maintain for the convenience of its clients. Contributions may be sent to Louis Windmüller, Treasurer, 20 Reade Street.

St. Thomas's R. C. Church to be Completed.

Plans have been filed at the Building Department for the completion of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, of which only the basement story has been erected, on One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, just west of St. Nicholas Avenue. Upon the present foundations will be built a superstructure of Gothic design, 76 feet high, with a façade of brick and terra cotta. The completed edifice will have a frontage of 65 feet and a depth of 151 feet. The work will cost $75,000, according to the estimate of Architect T. H. Poole.

THE WATCH.

'Twas hers—she loved it. When she died
I grew to hate the thing—its pearly face,
The tiny, fragile hands, the golden case,
Which she in laughing fun and pride
Had often kissed.

I could not bear the sound of old;
Its faint, weak pulses had no right to beat
While hers, so strong and true, so full of sweet
And joyous life, were still and cold
Forevermore.

I thrust it from my sight in grief,
And, drunk with sorrow's bitter cup, I slept,
And, sleeping, dreamed of her, and sorely wept;
The fevered rest brought no relief,
And I awoke.

Within the silence of the room
I heard the hateful, haunting thing again;
It seemed to mock me in my dreary pain.
A moonbeam pointed through the gloom
To where it lay.

And then, in garments white, she came—
The light of heaven on her hair, her eyes
Seraphic with the love that never dies;
How changed she was! and yet the same,
Beatified.

"To comfort me she comes," I thought,
But with a strangely tense and steadfast look,
Her treasured toy instead she sought and took.
And hot with madness, I—"What aught
Hast thou of time?"

And now I felt her softly place
The vibrant gold upon my aching breast.
As healing touch of sacred relic blest,
As swift, divine effect of grace,
It brought me peace.

GWYD LANG.

TODD WRITES TO PRESIDENT.

Complains to Mr. Roosevelt of Treatment by Washington Officials.

Charles Burr Todd yesterday sent the following letter to President Roosevelt:

"The Constitution of the United States declares that no person 'shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.' The statutes of the District of Columbia provide that no person shall be committed to the Government Hospital for the Insane without first a complaint against him duly signed and sworn to by some reputable resident of the District, to be presented in open court to a Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; second, an examination by two reputable physicians to be appointed by the court, who shall appear at his trial and give sworn testimony as to his mental condition; third, a trial, where he shall have the benefit of counsel, confront his accusers, and may be questioned by his Judge.

"In no State may an alleged lunatic be committed to an insane asylum without a judicial proceeding of some sort.

"While serving on State commissions, and unwittingly by my writings, I had made bitter enemies, and on experiencing what seemed undoubted symptoms of poison I went to the Chief of Police of Washington on Oct. 27, 1903, to have him investigate the matter. Without making such investigation, his subordinate, Sanitary Officer Frank, on pretense that I was insane, seized my person, robbed me of my money and valuables, threw me into a police cell, where I remained nearly twenty-four hours, and then, after the merest farce of an examination, a few questions being thrown at me from outside the barred door of my cell in a coarse, brutal, insulting manner, by two police surgeons, paid servants of the department, I was committed to the Government Hospital for the Insane, and the statement that I was insane given to the press, to be sent throughout the country, injuring my reputation, blasting my literary career, and bringing poignant anguish to my friends. In that hospital I remained eight days, suffering the horrors that a sane man must feel in being herded with madmen, and then was released, a physical wreck as the result of the nervous strain undergone. While in the hospital the police broke into my lodgings, seized my private papers, my manuscripts and personal effects, and carried them to the police station.

"I am not the only citizen of repute that has been kidnapped by these men.

"The Commissioners of the District, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, appealed to, sustain their Chief of Police in these lawless acts. The facts are now laid before your Excellency for you to take such action as you may deem proper."

FEWER PUPILS ON PART TIME.

Net Decrease 6,698—Incomplete Figures Give Total of 564,447.

Statistics tabulated last evening at the headquarters of the Department of Education in regard to this school year registration and part-time pupils made it clear that, although the registration has increased from that of a year ago at about the usual ratio, there is a satisfactory decrease in the number of part-time pupils, which will be still further decreased by recasting and distribution of classes and the sending of children to schools that are not full.

The figures show so far, with nine schools missing, a registration of 564,447 and 80,859 part-time pupils, a net part time decrease of 6,698. Estimating the registration at the nine schools not heard from at 13,000, the total registration this year would be about 578,000. The part-time pupils are estimated to be 82,600.

The official figures are:

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

Boroughs.	Register.	Increase Over 1903.	Part-Time Pupils.
Manhattan	296,119	14,586	29,000
*Brooklyn	186,553	15,370	30,034
*Bronx	43,800	2,090	2,137
*Richmond	11,616	948	1,280
Total	541,712	36,253	80,859
*High schools	22,735	1,916	None
Total	564,447	38,169	80,859

*Incomplete.

The total increase of 888 in the number of part-time pupils is divided between Richmond and Queens, and is confined to elementary schools. There is a decrease of 7,153 in the elementary schools in the other three boroughs. The net decrease of the number of part-time pupils is 6,698. The part-time increase in Richmond is due to the fact that 901 pupils are put on part time because of the non-completion of School 17, in that borough. This condition will probably be relieved in a very short time.

ADMIRAL WALKER ON PANAMA.

Says Things Are Ready for Beginning Actual Work on Canal.

That the United States will maintain two ports of entry in the Panama Canal zone, one at each end of the canal, was announced yesterday by Rear Admiral Walker, the head of the Panama Canal Commission, when he arrived from Colon on the steamship Finance.

They will be Ancon on the Panama side of the Isthmus, and Cristobal on the Colon side, and a custom house will be established and duties collected at each.

Admiral Walker said that everything was ready now for beginning the real work, and that the health conditions on the Isthmus were excellent, although this was the unfavorable season of the year. Effective sanitary measures have been taken, under which mosquitos are being rapidly exterminated and malarial infection correspondingly reduced. At the Government quarters at Ancon, near Panama, and at other points on the Isthmus mosquitos have almost entirely disappeared. The Admiral said that there was no yellow fever on the Isthmus.

In the Republic of Panama, he said, everything is quiet, and the people contented.

DELANY ASKS FOR INCREASE.

Corporation Counsel Wants $85,040 More This Year Than Last.

Corporation Counsel John J. Delany submitted his estimate for the expenses of his department for the year 1905 to the Board of Estimate yesterday. In line with other heads of departments, he, too, asks for an increase.

Mr. Delany wants $570,600 to run his department for the coming year. He asks for $25,000 more for this year's supplies, contingencies, and deficiencies than the $100,000 allowed for 1904. He asks for increase of salaries to the amount of $45,350, the total recommended for salaries being $405,600. Last year's appropriation was $485,500.

Money for Seamen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Let me draw the attention of the readers of your paper to the fact that all the moneys collected at the concerts on the homecoming voyage on board the transatlantic liners are turned over to the American Seamen's Friend Society, 76 Wall Street, where the money is evenly divided among the following four seamen's charities:

The Mariners' Family Asylum, Staten Island, N. Y.

The Society for the Relief of Destitute Children of Seamen, Staten Island, N. Y.

New York Port Society, Catharine Street, New York.

The American Seamen's Friend Society, 76 Wall Street.

The moneys are not used for missionary purposes—only for the specific purpose of relief of the widows and orphans of seamen, destitute and shipwrecked seamen.

The feature of the revival of Langdon Mitchell's dramatization of "Vanity Fair" last night at the Manhattan was George Arliss's performance of the part of the Marquis of Steyne, in which he succeeded Tyrone Power, who created the rôle. The occasion called in requisition much the same abilities which Mr. Arliss displayed in his recent performances of Zukkari, the War Minister, in "The Darling of the Gods."

There was the same polished, self-control, the same recklessness, the same subcurrent of lechery, flaming forth in the crisis of a moment, that made his recent triumph so memorable; but the art of the actor was evinced in his differentiation of the two characters, which was at once subtle and signal. That was a part of their romantic horror, as detached and curling as a fantasy of crime from the pages of Poe. This was the embodiment of a concrete, realistic character, such a one as might be met in this present year of grace—or otherwise.

From the moment Mr. Arliss appeared, high on the landing of the scene at the Duchess of Richmond's ball before Waterloo, his very simplicity and quietude dominated the audience. Every movement as he moved among the revelers by night was the acme of subdued realism—and theatric effect. The refinement of generations of nobility was suggested in every simple attitude, with its polite cynicism and cold, decorous selfishness.

In the scene of the supper with Becky the feeling of suppressed desire heightened and kindled beneath that cold and world-weary mask, until it flamed forth for a moment as he grasped his victim by the wrist—only to be frustrated by the return of "Mrs. Crawley's husband," and turned to bodily violence and defeat.

Up to this there had been times when Arliss's sense of character and atmosphere made the work of a generally excellent company seem cruelly out of the picture, but in the passage that followed with Mr. Mason and Mrs. Fiske the performance ran to the greatest height of ensemble acting. No gesture was extreme, there was not a suggestion of the hysterics of the theatre. Mr. Mason was tense and agonized, even when he hurled the libidinous nobleman headlong to the floor.

Mrs. Fiske was brave and contained even as she contemplated with horror the hour of her ruin. And Mr. Arliss, groveling on the floor at the feet of the outraged guardsman, and fading, frustrated and routed, out of the door, was consummately high bred and master of himself. It was a moment of perfected theatric art not to be surpassed in the great artistic theatres of the Continent.

As for Mr. Mason, his performance as a whole was not on this high level. It was, in fact, far below the work of Maurice Barrymore—one of that actor's ablest achievements. Mr. Mason lacked the robust vitality and the expansive good humor of the guardsman, and some measure of the affection of the husband and the father. The passage in which he read his son's letter from school (a part of the letter had been cut, had it not?) was particularly deficient in emotional color. The part was able and consistently toned, but the predominant note was of quietude and softness, scarcely its dominant trait.

Mrs. Fiske's Becky has long been familiar. Its fidelity to the original in the novel has been questioned, and it may be granted that it lacks the element of Thackerayan charm, both physical and temperamental. But do not such criticisms ignore the essential limitations of the art of the theatre? How can it hope to transfer the atmosphere of Thackeray's genial discursiveness to the stage?

Within the inevitable limits it is a creation of the highest histrionic art, as is evident in the fact that in spite of its quietistic restraint it still holds the stage, and seems destined to do so for years to come. It was finished as ever in its hard, yet airy, deviltry, its glib resourcefulness. The young, maidenly "Yes, Mamma" song at the spinnet was sung with the same dramatic ebullition of diabolic triumph.

The monotone by the fire, in which Becky moralizes on the vanity of human wishes, sounded again the note of tragic futility. The supper scene with Steyne had all the old glittering recklessness of abandonment to fate. At times the familiar trick of monotonous volubility tantalized with its inaudibility and its slurring of legitimate points. But this is a defect one willingly forgets in the greater moments.

Mrs. Fiske's new "Manhattan Company" worthily carries on the high traditions of the theatre. In the coming season we are promised a revival of Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," the unexpected success of which was cut short last year by out-of-town engagements, and, besides, a list of new plays by American authors.

TREE STAGES "THE TEMPEST."

Reopens His Majesty's Theatre, London, with a Splendid Production.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A notably smart audience, which included Prince Francis of Teck, Lord and Lady Warwick, Sir Charles Wyndham, and many professional people, assembled at the reopening of His Majesty's Theatre to-night with Beerbohm Tree's splendid pictorial production of Shakespeare's "The Tempest."

The presentation has never been surpassed for mechanical and scenic ingenuity, beauty of costumes, and background scenes. Particularly notable were the opening realistic shipwreck scene, Prospero's cave, and the dances of the Naiads, in which beautiful children participated.

Mr. Tree gave an admirable impression of Caliban, but his daughter Viola was less successful as Ariel.

No Receiver for Wild West Show.

TRENTON, Sept. 14.—Judge Lanning, in the United States Circuit Court to-day, dismissed the suit of Frederick E. Maeder for the appointment of a receiver for the Buffalo Bill Wild West Company. Judge Lanning also decided that Maeder was not entitled to any interest in the assets of the company, and he refused to set aside the transfer of certain stock of the company to James A. Bailey.

Decorative Art Museum Open.

The Cooper Union Free Museum for the Arts of Decoration reopened yesterday. It is open to the public every day except Sunday and Monday, and on all holidays which do not fall on Monday.

McADOO DEFENDS DEPARTMENT

Commissioner Declares the Police Are Not Demoralized.

Commissioner McAdoo announced before leaving Police Headquarters last evening that he would make public to-day the names of probably more than seventy Detective Sergeants whom he intends to put in uniform. In regard to criticism of the department, he said:

"I can truthfully say as if I were in a court of justice that there is not, as represented, any demoralization in the New York police force. I have examined the town first hand, and I know the police conditions that exist. They are satisfactory and wholesome, for I have examined the town microscopically. I want to say that the Police Department is under my control absolutely, and there is no evidence of the opposite.

"I am not at all worried by the attacks of the press on this department. I do say that if anything would tend to demoralize the force it would be such criticisms as have appeared of late in the public press."

The Commissioner was asked if he had anything to say of the criticisms of former Superintendent Byrnes.

"I have not now nor will I ever have anything to say in reply to 'Tom' Byrnes or 'Thomas' Byrnes," was the reply.

The Detective Sergeants to be detailed to various precincts will not be responsible to Headquarters, but will have regular tours of duty, like ordinary Sergeants and Roundsmen. The Commissioner has been somewhat handicapped in taking this action by the fact that the legal status of a Detective Sergeant has never been exactly defined. His action has started talk of the possibility that some of the Detective Sergeants whom he may detail to uniform duty may make a test case.

ELEVATED TO CARRY FREIGHT.

U. S. Express Company Arranges for Battery-Harlem Service.

The United States Express Company has completed arrangements with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for carrying express matter on elevated railroad trains from the Battery to Harlem, and this morning the system will be put in operation. Heretofore whatever matter was addressed for Harlem has been sent on wagons, and throughout Upper Manhattan and the Bronx has been handled by the Borough Express Company. Beginning to-day, all matter received at the down-town offices for points above Fifty-ninth Street will be handled on the elevated.

For this purpose the railroad company has provided a number of special cars which will not be attached to passenger cars, but will be drawn by motor cars. To prevent interruption of the passenger traffic, express matter will not be handled at passenger stations, but at storage yards and on sidings.

Express matter will be placed on elevated trains at the side track adjoining an elevator at the foot of Trinity Place, near the junction of Morris and Greenwich Streets. From that point a train can be sent to South Ferry and switched over onto the tracks of the Second or Third Avenue divisions, or can proceed up town on the Sixth or Ninth Avenue divisions. All matter collected at the up-town stations will be taken from the elevated trains at this point.

BOLOGNA FAMINE HITS JAIL.

Kings CountyPrisoners Overwhelm Warden with Protests.

Without a slice of bologna sausage in the pantry and every one of his several hundred guests, Oliver Twist like, crying for more, Warden Patrick Hayes of the Kings County Penitentiary is in a terrible stew. The packing firm having the contract to supply the county sanitarium at Crow Hill with bologna has failed to deliver any of the delicacy for two weeks, and the anxious Warden has doubled the guards for fear of a general outbreak among his guests.

"Give us bologna sausage or give us liberty!" comes the cry from every cell, and the Warden, hearing it, trembles while he telephones frantically to Correction Commissioner Lantry for relief.

"If you can't send over seven or eight hundred yards of bologna sausage at once you'd better call out the militia," he warns.

The Commissioner is urging the packing firm to work its plants night and day if necessary to satisfy the craving for bologna sausage out at Crow Hill. The packers' strike is supposed to be responsible for the harrowing situation in Warden Hayes's snug retreat.

RARE LACES AS SOILED LINEN.

San Francisco Couple's Trunks Are Held Up by Customs Men.

Various trunks and packages belonging to Mr. and Mrs. J. Baer of San Francisco, who arrived on the Kronprinz Wilhelm on Tuesday with fourteen pieces of baggage, were taken to the Appraiser's Stores yesterday for examination. In the bottom of one of the trunks, concealed in two bundles which apparently contained soiled linen, was found a lot of lace, said to be worth $2,000, and several valuable furs.

Mr. and Mrs. Baer declared several thousand dollars worth of dutiable goods in the regular way, but it is understood that some of the excess will be seized.

There were also received at the Appraiser's Stores twenty-one pieces of silk, valued at $1,500, which were found in the hold of La Touraine. The Customs authorities believe that the goods were either stolen from the cargo by members of the crew or were stolen in Europe.

No Further Seizure on La Touraine.

Special Treasury Agents Hooley and O'Neill made another search of the French Line steamship La Touraine yesterday in the hope of finding more goods intended to be smuggled ashore, but they discovered nothing. The silk and cigars which were seized on Tuesday were taken to the Appraiser's Stores. The Government has dropped the case of the two boxes containing valuable gowns that were found on the pier.

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

William Waldorf Astor attended the matinée performance of "The Spellbinder" at the Herald Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. He sat alone in a stage box. It is said that this is Mr. Astor's only visit to the theatre since he came to this country.

"Home Folks," a pastoral drama by C. T. Dazey, will be produced on Christmas Day at the New York Theatre by Joseph Brooks. Richard Marston has been commissioned to prepare scenic models. The play will be in four acts.

The New York National League baseball team will see "Girls Will Be Girls" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre to-night.

Charles Bigelow reported for rehearsal with the Weber-Ziegfeld company yesterday. He had a face swathed in bandages. Bigelow tried to run a motor boat yesterday, and a crank handle turned the wrong way and hit him on the nose.

A delegation of army officers from Governors Island will see "Taps" when it is presented at the Lyric Theatre Saturday night. Most of them are on Adjt. Gen. Corbin's staff.

Selene Johnson was engaged by Arnold Daly yesterday for the leading part in the new Shaw play, "How He Lied to Her Husband." The first performance of the play will be Sept. 26 at the Berkeley Lyceum.

The complete cast of Otis Skinner's forthcoming production of "The Harvester" is announced. Lizzie Hudson Collier has the leading rôle. She has been in a Cincinnati stock company for three years. Others are J. M. Colville, George Clarke, Marion Abbott, Walter Lewis, Ben T. Ringold, and Russell Crawford.

To-night in Lebanon, Penn., Thomas Jefferson, a son of Joseph Jefferson, will begin a thirty weeks' tour in "Rip Van Winkle."

PEARY PLANS NEW DASH FOR POLE NEXT SUMMER

Keel for Vessel Laid and Details Worked Out.

AN ALL-AMERICAN ENTERPRISE

Explorer Makes His Announcement at Geographic Congress Dinner—His Route Presents New Features.

Commander Robert E. Peary, United States Navy, announced at the dinner of the International Geographic Congress last night at the Hotel Endicott that he would start next Summer on another attempt for the North Pole. The contract for the new ship has been signed, and the keel is now being laid. It will be an American-built vessel, manned by an American crew, and piloted by an American skipper.

Commander Peary, after recalling that seven years ago in this city upon the occasion of the presentation to him of the medal of the American Geographical Society he had outlined arctic exploration that had occupied him almost constantly since, made public his new plans. All the money for his new enterprise had not been contributed, he said, but he expected to get it by July next. He continued:

"Though I cannot expect you to feel the same interest in the matter as myself, I cannot refrain from a word or two in regard to the ship. She will, I believe, be the ablest ship that ever pointed her nose inside the arctic or antarctic circle.

"She will possess such shape as will enable her to rise to the pressure of the ice floes and escape destruction. She will possess such strength of construction as will permit her to stand this pressure without injury.

"She will possess such features of bow as will enable her to smash ice in her path, and will contain such engine power as will enable her to force her way through the ice. In maximum dimensions, viz., length over all, breadth of beam, and draught, this ship will be of the size of the British antarctic ship Discovery; in displacement she will be somewhat less; in power she will compare with our largest oceangoing tugs. She will have engines capable of developing 1,000 indicated horse power continuously, and 1,500 horse power for a limited period.

"My route north presents features very different from the route of a ship to the antarctic regions. The voyage is short, and the crux of the whole project is the successful negotiation of the comparatively short distance of ice-incumbered channels extending northward from Cape Sabine to the Polar Basin.

"What I require, then, is not a sailing ship with weak auxiliary engines, a ship capable of remaining out for a number of years and covering long distances at slow speed, with moderate consumption of coal. My requirements are a powerful steamer, capable of forcing her way through this comparatively short distance and demanding only a minimum amount of sail power to enable her to creep home in case all her coal is burned—that is what I propose to build."

"My plan of campaign, in a very few words, is to force this ship to Grand Land, taking on board at Whale Sound the pick and flower of the Eskimos, with whom I have worked and lived so long; to go into Winter quarters on that shore, and to start with the earliest returning light on the sledge journey across the central polar pack, utilizing these Eskimos, the people whose heritage is life and work in that very region, entirely for the rank and file of my party."

At the first session of the Congress, Tuesday morning, Commander Peary announced that he would have something important to say at this dinner and every one anxiously awaited the signal for the speeches to begin.

Prof. Henri Cordier, in a laudatory address, presented to Commander Peary a gold medal awarded in recognition of his arctic explorations by the French Geographic Society. After Commander Peary had concluded, the other speakers were Prof. Eugene Oberhummer of Austria, Dr. Edgar Marcuse of Berlin, Charles Ray Dean, representing the State Department, and Major Gibbons, the English explorer of Africa.

TO MEET NEXT IN GENEVA.

Geographical Congress Delegates to Go to West Point To-day.

After a lively discussion yesterday as to the merits of Geneva and Budapest for the next meeting place, the International Geographical Congress, which is holding its eighth meeting at the American Geographical Society's rooms, 15 West Eighty-first Street, selected Geneva. Under the rules the next meeting must take place in not less than three years nor more than five years from the date of the last.

On account of the proposed trial next Summer of Commander Peary, a resolution was passed urging further exploration of the Arctics while approving the work in the Antarctics.

One of the important papers read during the sessions following the business meeting was that by Prof. Angelo Heilprin, who, after studying the events at Martinique, differs as to the date of the destruction of Pompeii and the manner of its end through the eruptions of Mount Vesuvius. Prof. Heilprin says, in part:

"The eruptions of Pelée throw new light upon the first recorded eruption of Vesuvius, and render intelligible those passages in the Pliny narration which have heretofore been obscure and thought to be opposed by the facts of geology. The 'horrible black cloud,' scintillating with serpent-flashes of lightning, which is described as rolling down the mountain slope and blotting out the landscape, is seemingly the absolute counterpart of the great descending black cloud, similarly charged with electricity—which was the distinctive feature of the Pelée eruption of May 8, 1902.

"It was manifestly with the issuance of this cloud that Pompeii was destroyed, which was, therefore, on Aug. 25, (not 24, as generally stated by historians,) A. D. 79, as Pliny's narration makes clear that this climax of activity was reached on the second day of the eruption of Vesuvius."

Dr. Frederick A. Cook's paper on the comparative view of the Arctic and the Antarctic attracted a great deal of attention. He said in part:

"In forming a comparative view of the two polar areas there are encountered few points of similarity. In the Arctic the climate is usually stimulating. The storms, though at times severe, are spasmodic, and separated by intervening periods of agreeable weather, while the color effects are generally cheerful. The sea is quiet, and the land has a coastal fringe of snow and ice, where life thrives vigorously. To this the Antarctic offers a shattering contrast. Depression, despair, and melancholy are here pressed into every realm of nature. Almost ceaseless winds drive the air and water with maddening agitation. Continuous low temperatures depress ambition, and the usual play of colors is a veil of gloom. The ice-cap fits the land surface so snugly that there is almost no uncovered ground where life can subsist."

The members of the congress will to-day go to West Point, after which they will start on their trip to the St. Louis Fair. After a visit to Mexico they will return in time to be received in Washington by President Roosevelt on Oct. 11.

Stock Exchange Seats Higher.

A Stock Exchange seat was reported sold yesterday at $75,000. This is an increase of $3,000 from the last sale. Stock Exchange seats, which sold high at $82,000 in boom times, declined last year to three sixties. They have been increasing in price with the rise of the stock market.

MRS. DUNCOMBE MARRIES.

Husband Former Circus Man—Later Her Property Manager.

Mrs. Naomi Covay Duncombe of Mount Vernon, who is said to be worth $2,000,000, and Patrick J. Ring, who is manager of her estate, and was formerly a professional wrestler and "strong man," were married in Long Island City by the Rev. W. E. Schoonhoven, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church there, on Saturday. The news of the marriage first became known in Mount Vernon on Tuesday, and has aroused a good deal of interest there because only last June Mrs. Duncombe publicly horsewhipped Ring, whom she caught walking with a young woman Sunday school teacher.

Mrs. Duncombe, now Mrs. Ring, told the minister that she was forty-five years old. Ten years ago Ring went to Mount Vernon with a one-ring circus. Ring did not leave with the circus, and has since made Mount Vernon his home. He went into the real estate business, and six months later became Mrs. Duncombe's sole manager and adviser.

About this time Miss Naomi Voyce, Mrs. Duncombe's granddaughter, came home from a Canadian convent, and soon married Charles A. Hollister, a young civil engineer. A year later Hollister, when he arrived home from business, found his wife gone, and, thinking she had been induced by her grandmother to leave him, he organized a party to rescue her.

When the Hollister party reached the Duncombe home, Mrs. Duncombe and her retainers met them and opened fire on them. The next day Hollister learned that his wife was in South Dakota, seeking a divorce. This proceeding formed the basis of Supreme Court Justice Dickey's opinion that Dakota divorces have no value in New York.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN SAILS.

No Explanation as to Why Marcelle Lenoir Is Sent Back to France.

Marcelle Lenoir, the young Frenchwoman who was arrested in Chicago two weeks ago by Secret Service men, and who had been kept at Ellis Island since, was deported yesterday on the steamship Majestic, which sailed for Liverpool. She was put in charge of Purser Appleyard, who was purser on the steamship on which the woman arrived in this country a year ago.

All attempts to get at the facts in the arrest of the woman have proved futile. The immigration authorities say that they do not know what charge is against her, and that they are acting under instructions from Washington. It has been reported that she was associated with the Anarchists, while another rumor made her the kidnapped daughter of a prominent Frenchman. From the time of her arrival in this country Secret Service men have been continually on the hunt for her.

Miss Lenoir was assigned to one of the best staterooms on the Majestic when she sailed yesterday, with a special stewardess to attend her. At Ellis Island she occupied a separate room, received her meals from outside, and was shown every attention possible.

CRIMEAN VETERAN DEAD.

Mount Vernon Man Was in Party Supporting Light Brigade's Charge.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 14.—John Conner, a veteran of the Crimean war, died at his home, 109 West Sidney Avenue, from apoplexy, last night.

Conner was born in England in 1828. At the age of fifteen he entered the British Army, enlisting in the Royal Artillery. He was present at the siege of Sebastopol, and was one of the supporting party at the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. In the early 70s he came to this country.

Conner had many relics of the war between Russia and the allies. Among these are the saddle and sabre used by a soldier of the Light Brigade, a piece of the shell that killed the commander, who is said to have given the order for the famous charge, and many bullets picked up on the battle field. He leaves a widow, six children, fifteen grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren.

The dances given by the Bachelors' Cotillion Club of Baltimore are of interest to New Yorkers as well as Baltimorians, as many of the younger set here are asked to them, and a large majority of those invited attend. The dates for these dances are as follows: Mondays, Dec. 19, 1904, Jan. 2 and 16, 1905, Jan. 30, Feb. 13, and March 6. For years the cotillions have been given in Lehmann's Hall, but it has been decided to hold those of the coming Winter at the Hotel Belvedere. The first of the series of a season is termed the Débutantes' Own," for at this dance they make their first bow at a public ball. Columbus O'D. Lee and Robert O. Lehr are among others on the Board of Governors.

The Junior Cotillion Club is formed of younger men not yet eligible to the Bachelors' Club, and this organization will continue to have its dances at Lehmann's. Redmond C. Stewart, H. Carroll Brown, and W. Graham Bowdoin, Jr., are among the Governors. The dates are as follows: Tuesday, Dec. 13, Monday, Dec. 26, and Tuesdays, Jan. 10 and 24, and Feb. 7 and 21.

Henry T. Sloane and his daughters are expected to arrive at Tuxedo on Sept. 23.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Luqueer Lane and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rembert Hall, who returned some time since from abroad, are now at Lenox.

Prof. Bashford Dean and Mrs. Dean are expected to arrive in town next week, but will probably not open their house until later in the season. Prof. Dean attended the International Congress of Zoologists at Berne and also the meeting at Cambridge of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. Many of the Faculty of Columbia are returning home somewhat earlier than usual to prepare for the opening of the university.

BIG "IF" ATTACHED TO TUCK'S CHARITY GIFTS

When All His Descendants Die Bequests May Be Paid.

WILL FILED FOR PROBATE

Late New York Life Vice President Leaves Estate in Trust for Children and Widow.

When Dr. Henry Tuck died on Sept. 2 last his friends thought at least a million dollars of his fortune would go to charitable institutions in Massachusetts, where he was born. When his will was filed for probate in the Surrogates' office yesterday it was learned that while bequests had been made to many of these institutions there was a proviso that renders their chances of ever receiving them very slim. The proviso is that if his widow survives his children and all of their descendants then the institutions will come in for the portions of the estate allotted to them.

For more than twenty years Dr. Tuck was First Vice President of the New York Life Insurance Company, and after his death at his Summer home at Seabright his body was cremated, in accordance with his wishes.

The will, which is dated May 28, 1903, names the New York Security and Trust Company as one of the trustees and executors, the other being the widow, Mrs. Elenore B. Tuck, whom Dr. Tuck married a year ago. His first wife died about four years ago.

The use of the house where Dr. Tuck resided, at 39 East Fifty-third Street, is given to the widow during her lifetime. The residue of the estate is left to the trustees with the provision that two-fifths of the income is to be paid to the widow and one-fifth to each of Dr. Tuck's children. In case Shirley Tuck's wife survives him she is to receive the fifth share of the income, providing she does not marry again, and in case his daughter Rosamond dies before her husband, the husband, James H. Skillin, is to receive the fifth of the income which is left to Mrs. Skillin, providing, however, he does not marry again. Then follows the clause relating to charitable institutions:

"In case my wife, Elenore, survives all of my said children and all of their descendants, at her death I give and bequeath one-fourth of my entire estate to the Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston, one-fourth to the President of the Fellows of Harvard College of Cambridge, Mass., one-twelfth to the Boston Lying-In Hospital of Boston, Mass., one-twelfth to the Massachusetts Medical Benevolent Society of Boston, one-twelfth to the New York Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of the City of New York, one-twelfth to the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, one-twelfth to the New York Charities Organization Society, and one-twelfth to the American Unitarian Association of Boston."

WILLETS'S CHARITY BEQUESTS.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 14.—An application was made at the Nassau County Surrogate's Court to-day for temporary letters of administration on the estate of James R. Willets of Manhasset, L. I., who was Treasurer of the Children's Home at this village, to the Union Trust Company of Manhattan.

Mr. Willets leaves to his wife the residence and $10,000 cash; to Cornelia M. Peabody $5,000 and the old family silverware; to Mallie Peabody, his cousin, $10,000; to the Temporary Home for Children, $5,000 for the endowment of a free bed; to the Friends' Academy, Locust Valley, L. I., $5,000; to Westbury Literary and Historical Society, $500 for the care of Robert Titus plot; to the Jericho Preparative Meeting of Religious Society of Friends, $500 for the improvement of Friends' graveyard at Jericho, L. I.; to James R. Willets, cousin, $5,000. All the rest of the property is left to the executors, the Union Trust Company, and Annie T. Willets, his wife in trust, the income to be paid over to the wife while living, and on her death it is to be divided among various relatives.

BISHOP BURGESS ROBBED.

Burglars Enter House at Garden City Without Arousing Inmates.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., Sept. 14.—The See House, opposite the Cathedral of the Incarnation, occupied by Bishop Frederick Burgess, was entered by burglars early this morning, and so quietly did they work that none of the inmates was awakened.

They entered by forcing open one of the parlor windows, and carried away a quantity of solid silverware, clothing, $30 in cash, the Bishop's overcoat, a gold-mounted umbrella, and four silver cups belonging to the Bishop's children. The robbery was not discovered until the servants came down stairs this morning and found everything in disorder in the rooms. Tracks made by a rubber-tired vehicle were found in the street in front of the house, and the robbers are supposed to have used the conveyance.

The residence of George L. Hubbell, overseer of the Garden City Company, was also entered by the same thieves, and a considerable amount of property stolen.

ANOTHER SUIT BY MRS. WOOD.

Shipbuilding Victim After Two Trust Companies and Col. McCook.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 14.—A summons and complaint and a note of issue have been filed in the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Nassau County here in a suit brought by Mrs. Ida E. Wood, widow of Benjamin Wood, to recover $225,000 damages from the Commonwealth Trust Company, formerly the Trust Company of the Republic; its Directors, among whom are Stuyvesant Fish, George C. Boldt, Perry Belmont, and George Gould; the Mercantile Trust Company, and Col. John J. McCook. Mrs. Wood asserts that she was induced to purchase 200 of the first mortgage bonds of the United States Shipbuilding Company through false statements in the prospectus. There will be the argument here on Sept. 20 upon the demurrers interposed by some of the defendants.

ISMAY BLAMES CUNARD LINE.

Holds English Company Responsible for Rate War.

J. Bruce Ismay, head of the International Mercantile Marine, arrived in this country yesterday on his regular Fall visit to confer with the American managers of the steamship lines in the combine, and to look over the business of the company on this side of the water.

Mr. Ismay's arrival revived the rumors that the White Star Line was about to cut further the passenger rates, that freight rates were to be greatly increased, that he would settle the ocean rate war, and that the American Line was about to change to the British flag. He refused to discuss any of these matters, but another officer who stands high up in the line said that the trip of the head of the company would not affect any of them.

Several of the officers of the International Mercantile Marine were at the White Star Line pier to meet Mr. Ismay. He said that he would remain here for about three weeks. Concerning the rate war, he said:

"The fight is between the Cunard Line and the Continental lines and does not concern us. We cut our rates just to keep apace with the cut of the Cunard Line, and we will do nothing more until we see what the Cunard people will do. If they make further reductions I suppose that we will have to reduce our rates, but we shall not be instrumental in carrying the fight any further."

SUES FOR STEBBINS LAND.

Daughter's Action Forerunner of Attempt to Break Banker's Will.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Suit was brought in the Supreme Court here to-day by Mrs. Dora S. Thompson, daughter of Charles M. Stebbins, a banker, who formerly resided at Hartsdale, and who died at Berlin, against William R. Stebbins, John H. Porter, and William Garwood, all of Denver, Col. The action is for ejectment and to recover a large amount of real estate in Westchester County, in which she claims a one-third undivided interest, and which she alleges is being withheld from her.

It is said that this action is but a forerunner of a contest over the estate valued at $1,000,000 which was left by Mr. Stebbins. It is said that the will of Mr. Stebbins has just been filed at Denver, and that his four children are cut off with a small bequest, while a deed of trust is authorized in the will by which the property Mrs. Thompson claims is to provide part of the funds for the establishment of a large orphan asylum for boys at Denver. A large amount of the estate is also inherited by friends in Denver and in Berlin and Rome.

"PLEASE FIND MY PAPA."

So Writes Little Ohio Girl to Jersey City Police Chief.

A little thirteen-year-old girl who calls herself Bernice Miller has sent a letter to Chief of Police Murphy of Jersey City, which he received yesterday, asking him to find her stepfather for her. She wrote from Lima, Ohio, and said that her mother was dying and that nothing could be done for her until the missing man returned home. The little girl said in her letter that her mother had received word from some friends in Chicago that her stepfather, who is a railroad man, had gone to Jersey City as conductor on one of the trains.

"I know," she wrote, "that if he knew that mamma was sick he would come home to us, because he was so good to us before he left. If mamma dies I will be all alone, and I know you will please find my papa for me. Won't you?"

She says his name is M. Frederic. Chief Murphy started two of his men out on the search.

PENNED IN BLAZING MILL.

Several Have Narrow Escape at Fire In West Hoboken.

A fire yesterday afternoon in the big molding mill of Gardiner & Bansall, at Serrett and Spring Streets, West Hoboken, destroyed the plant, causing a loss of about $35,000.

Some of the workmen in the building had narrow escapes from death, so quickly did the fire spread. Emil Kruger of 171 Griffiths Street, Jersey City, jumped from the second story and broke his ankle. He was removed to Christ Hospital, Jersey City. Two others were severely burned.

The origin of the fire is not known. The flames were first seen in the northeast corner, and as there was a strong wind blowing the entire floor was a mass of flames in a short time.

TROUBLE OVER MEAT BILL.

Petition in Bankruptcy Filed Against Broker-Restaurant Man.

Abraham Oberstein, attorney for Jacob Katz, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday against Isador Sachs, who has for years kept a restaurant at Eldridge and Canal Streets, and who, several years ago, branched out as a broker in the Consolidated Exchange.

Mr. Sachs said last night that the trouble was over a meat bill for $692, over which a dispute arose, that he would pay the bill, and that he was perfectly solvent.

McCreery & Co. Open Pittsburg Store.

Chicago Defeated Cleveland Twice and Took Third Place—Brooklyn Won from Quakers.

By winning a well-earned victory over the Bostons yesterday, the Greater New Yorks advanced to first place in the American League again. Two games were to have been played by these teams, but the second contest resulted in a tie after five innings had been played. Chicago's two defeats of Cleveland placed Comiskey's team third, the position occupied by the Philadelphians. Only one of three games scheduled in the National League was decided, the Brooklyns winning from the tailenders in the ninth inning. Summary of the day's play follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

New Yorks Make Only Two Hits, but Win by Boston's Errors.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 14.—Manager Clark Griffith and his Greater New York team lead for the American League championship, and Griffith says he will hold the lead until the end. In weather wholly unsuitable for baseball New York defeated Boston to-day by a score of 3 to 1 in the first game, and got a draw in the second game, the score being 1 to 1 when Umpire Sheridan called the game on account of darkness. The visitors did not outbat Boston, but they fielded better and won. Boston practically gave the first game to the New Yorkers when Parent made three errors, all three of which were costly. In the second game Parent again blundered on Conroy's grounder, after which Conroy stole third base, and then on a fly to Stahl scored the run that prevented a defeat. In the first inning of the second game Stahl drove out a home run, and against Gibson's pitching the New Yorks were powerless.

Rain fell before and during the game, and a heavy fog hung over the field, making it impossible for the fielders to see the ball, or in fact each other. New York showed fight at all stages. In the first game the visitors fielded in almost perfect style, Elberfeld playing a whirlwind game at short. Both of Williams's errors were due in a measure to a bad field. New York, however, lacked in batting qualities, only three hits being made in fourteen innings. Boston, on the other hand, hit Chesbro and Powell quite hard.

In the first game New York got two runs in the first inning on Dougherty's hit and errors by Criger and Collins. Keeler bunted safely in the third inning, and scored on Elberfeld's sacrifice and Parent's bad error of Anderson's hit. Dougherty made a mess of Collins's single in the ninth inning, and Collins got to third, scoring on a passed ball.

In the second game Stahl made a home run in the first inning, and in the third inning Conroy reached first on Parent's error, and McGuire sacrificed him to second. He stole third and scored on Powell's fly to Stahl. In the fifth inning Boston received a good chance to win, but Parent forced Selbach at second for the third out.

Griffith has sent Kleinow home and expects a new catcher to join him to-day. He did not care to give his name, as the deal is not closed. The scores:

CHICAGO WON TWO GAMES.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The locals outplayed Cleveland and took both games of the doubleheader in easy fashion to-day. Long hitting and perfect fielding won the first. Good base running, aided by costly errors and wild pitching by Hess made the second very easy. Buelow was hit on the head by a pitched ball in the fourth inning of the second game and carried off the field. Scores:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Philadelphias Could Not Hit Brooklyn's New Pitcher and Lost.

Reisling, whom Manager Hanlon secured from the New Orleans Club of the Southern League, pitched his second game for Brooklyn yesterday and won by a score of 2 to 1. The Philadelphians were wholly at his mercy, notwithstanding the fact that he hit three batsmen, had a wild pitch, and gave two bases on called balls. Besides, the Brooklyns practically played with eight men, as the work of Strang at short stop was the worst, with but one exception, that has been seen at Washington Park this season. Corridon was not batted to any great extent, and the only time that the Brooklyn hits were effective was in the ninth inning, when Batch's bounding ball over first base and Jordan's hit to right field, aided by a stolen base, enabled Batch to score the winning run and the only one earned during the game.

The fielding as a rule was sharp and decisive, five double plays being executed, three for Brooklyn and two for Philadelphia. In every inning the Brooklyns got one or more men on the bases, but it was not until the sixth inning that they scored their first run. Gleason's fumble allowed Dillon to reach first base, and on Lumley's sacrifice the Brooklyn Captain landed on second. Then Sheckard hit safely and Dillon scored. Philadelphia also made a run in the sixth on Corridon's hit to left field. Thomas's sacrifice, Gleason's single, and Reisling's poor throw to third base to catch Corridon "napping." Reisling's wildest moments were in the ninth inning, when he gave a base on balls and hit a man. When Thomas took the bat three men were on bases, but he hit to second base, forcing Corridon out at the plate. The score:

HAMBURG FILLIES RAN ONE, TWO IN BIG STAKES

Duryea Entry Had a Galloping Double Victory for Produce.

SONOMA BELLE'S HANDICAP

Post Favorites Were Successful in Four of Six Races at the Brighton Beach Track.

With Hamburg fillies first and second through every jump of the race, the second part of the $15,000 Produce Stakes at Brighton Beach yesterday was reduced to the tamest possible spectacle, and for the betting element among the big crowd in attendance counted for practically no race at all, the only speculation on the result being as to which of five others might be third. For horsemen, however, the race was one of keen interest, and when the Hamburg fillies Princess Rupert and Rose of Dawn ran just as the trainer of the H. B. Duryea stable, John W. Rogers, decided they should, the men interested in breeding and racing horses had cause to wonder where the stopping point would be. The Hamburg fillies have been a leading factor in the phenomenal good fortune of the Duryea establishment with fillies straight through the season.

Seven in all ran for the race, the only withdrawals being the Duryea filly Tanya, scratched because the others were quite good enough to make the result a certainty, and Coy Maid, from the stable of A. Miller. W. C. Daly's Raiment was the best backed of the other runners for third place, the first and second being conceded to the Duryea pair, and Raiment was the only horse that ever showed before the Duryea entry in the race. The start was made with Raiment first away, but Princess Rupert, with which Mr. Duryea declared to win, ran past her in the first twenty yards and led in a big gallop from that time on to the finish, with Rose of Dawn second through the greater part of the distance. Just as the field made the turn into the stretch Raiment, under the whip, made a rush forward, and for a few strides showed before Rose of Dawn, but died away under the effort and Rose of Dawn took second place again on the straight and galloped under a pull behind her stable mate to the end, Princess Rupert winning in hollow style by a length and a half, while Rose of Dawn, pulling up at the end, was second, a similar distance in front of Raiment, third. The Duryea entry was one of four winning favorites in the course of the day, the only non-favorites being William Lakeland's Little Em, winner of the selling mile and a sixteenth, and Sonoma Belle, winner of the mile and a furlong handicap, both of these getting home first in easy style.

It was a singular fact that of the entire afternoon's programme fillies won four of the five races in which their sex was represented, The Lady Rohesia taking the first event in easy fashion from Cascine. The only flat race that escaped the mares was the sprint for maidens two years old, which Sir Brillar won in runaway order with a filly second. No mares ran in the steeplechase, which went to Paulaker, which made about all the running and galloped home first by a big margin. Summaries:

COLUMBIA'S STRONG SQUAD.

Coach Morley Encouraged by Promising Football Candidates.

Despite the rain and mud on South Field, Columbia's football candidates took hard practice yesterday. Several new men reported for work in whose praises Coach Morley was quite enthusiastic. Altogether the showing at this time of the year is regarded as very encouraging. Metzentin, Columbia's speedy half back who won the game with Pennsylvania for the local university last year, was in his togs. He was in splendid shape. Wallace from the 1902 squad and Echeverria from last year's scrub were also on hand, and showed up well as line men. D. D. Muir, who came out for the team early last season, was at practice, and showed unexpected ability in punting. Some of his kicks with a dead wind went almost sixty yards. He is expected to aid the team where it was weak last year.

Frambach of last year's Varsity and Enos, a substitute, are expected to report to-day. Morley has heard from Jones, last year's speedy quarter back, and he is expected to arrive in town within a few days to report for practice. In yesterday's practice Tom Thorpe and Capt. Stangland practiced kicking off, while Smith, Reynolds, and Muir were given much individual work by Morley in punting. Practice in crossing the line of scrimmage at the start of the ball and in catching punts was given to the other men. No work was attempted either in tie-ups or in scrimmages. E. Thorpe and Amezaga are promising interscholastic football players, are expected to become candidates for the Columbia eleven if they succeed in passing their entrance examinations to Columbia.

Boat Builders to Have a Show.

At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, at the Hotel Manhattan, it was decided to hold a National show in New York this Winter. The show will be held at Madison Square Garden from Feb. 21 to March 5, in conjunction with the Sportsmen's Exhibit Company. This will be the first National show wherein the engine and boat building industry has taken a prominent part.

Gossip of the Baseball Field.

All the games scheduled in the Eastern League yesterday were postponed on account of rain.

The postponed game of yesterday between the Cincinnati and Pittsburg teams will be played at Pittsburg on Oct. 6.

In the game between the Philadelphia Giants and Emeralds at Van Nest on Sunday Taylor, the deafmute pitcher of the New York National League team, will act as umpire. As Deegan, the pitcher of the Emeralds, is also a deafmute, Taylor will have to tell him about the balls and strikes by sign language.

At the Fourteenth Street Theatre to-night the New York National League players will be the guests of William A. Brady to witness the musical comedy, "Girls Will Be Girls," with Al Leach and "The Three Rosebuds," and to give an opportunity to the many friends of the coming champions to "root" for their favorites. Mr. Brady will add a few features interesting to baseball players.

That the owners of the Cincinnati Club are satisfied with Joe Kelley's management of the team was shown yesterday, when Kelley signed a contract to handle the team another year.

American Nickel Stock

offers the opportunity of a lifetime to alert investors and speculators. The floating shares are now being dealt in around $3 to $5 a share on the New York Curb market.

The American Nickel Company owns the only nickel mines in the United States and the only nickel mines in the world that can produce high-grade ore. The Company is in solid financial condition, no bonded nor mortgaged indebtedness of any kind. The greatest mining engineers and experts in the world report "the stock is intrinsically worth $100 a share, and will inevitably sell at $100 in time." American Nickel stock is a safe purchase for splendid profit. All bankers and brokers now execute orders to buy it on the New York Curb market.

This stock will rapidly advance to high figures and pay substantial dividends. Prof. C. T. Turner, E. M., says: "Without going down another foot the already developed in sight will pay annual dividends of from $6 to $18 a share for the next 20 years." Very valuable information and 60-page booklet, "History of the American Nickel Mines," mailed free.

Stocks Strong; Call Money Easy, 1@1 1-2.

The Rise is Renewed in the Stock Market, Following Weakness on the Produce Exchange.

When it is said that the produce market reacted downward and the stock market reacted upward the story of yesterday's business is substantially told, all else being embroidery. The produce markets weakened for the adequate and anticipated reason that there was so much grain for sale on the bad news. If the markets had risen first the later bad news would have found fewer sellers and more believers, but predictions of disaster followed by almost unlimited selling put too much strain on credulity. It is not artistic to make disturbing predictions, and have the frost—such as there is—appear in regions where the harvest is over. Oddly enough, just as the grain markets altered their sentiment over the frost outlook for the better the cotton market took a contrary view, and strengthened while the corn and wheat markets weakened. Of course it is not impossible that there should be frost in the cotton belt and warmer weather in the grain fields concurrently, but the argument does not lie on the surface. The official prediction for to-day is for rising temperatures in the grain fields, and nothing said about the prospects in the cotton region.

The bulls took their turn at taxing credulity yesterday. Not content with a natural rise on the intrinsic conditions above mentioned, aided by the clear disclosure that the market bears hard and bulls easily, they sought other explanations for what needed none, and operators were asked to believe that the Rockefeller and Harriman interests after consultation had concluded that the rise was capable of being carried further. No disproof can be cited in the action of the market, nor, on the contrary, is it fair to claim corroboration in the fact that those two classes were strong where they had been weak, for strength was not confined to them. Practically everything expressive of market temper closed higher, former favorites leading in all classes without much prejudice or preference among trunk lines, coalers, Grangers, and industrials, especially not excepting Steel and minor allied undertakings. The outlook in this industry is not yet clear. The effect of the lower prices is not agreed upon, and all the pools are not yet united in prices or policy. But the tendency is encouraging. Yesterday there was a report of an order by Harriman roads of 100,000 tons of rails, and the postponed meeting of the billet pool was fixed anew for Tuesday, with promise of unity of action. St. Paul made its annual report, showing an increase of surplus by $482,336, and Western Union showed an increase of surplus smaller than the previous year by $407,017, and yet enough to make the balance carried over larger by $1,861,704. In their case, as in others, decrease in values and decrease in price have not marched together, and if the list is returning to old-fashioned quotations, justification is clear to those who care to look for it.

Another Million-Share Day Sends Stocks Up Again—Ryan Clears Up Facts About the Mystery.

When Wall Street woke up yesterday and looked at the papers it found that the weather man had gone wrong once more, and that the predicted frosts in the corn belt had turned into rain. Consequently the market opened with quite a display of strength. This display, aided by better reports from the West and the coincident decline in the grain pits, soon overcame the resistance, and by noon the market had broadened out into a regular bull advance. The bears who had oversold themselves on Tuesday, but who had been hanging back, waiting for another decline, then got scared and rushed in, forcing up prices still further, so that the market closed very nearly at the highest.

One Big Bear is Caught.

According to gossip there is, however, one big short interest still outstanding, and before it succeeds in covering all its lines a pretty stiff corn scare will have to be developed to prevent quotations from being marked up on it. Wall Street will be rather amused if the gates behind which several railroads and large sums of money have disappeared should be forced open by an engagement on the bear side, even though the garden wall had been publicly decorated with bison horns.

***

Manipulation Continues Active.

The continuance of manipulations by pools and large interests was evident, and out of the total of 1,105,437 shares traded in a goodly percentage was furnished by such sales. Of course there were numberless rumors invented to account for the advances in the various stocks, but most of these were palpably inventions. Others seemed to have an element of truth behind them, as, for instance, the continued reports from London to the effect that Rock Island would be listed on the Exchange in that city, which made more generally believed than heretofore.

Other Prominent Issues.

Pennsylvania Railroad, Erie, and United States Steel preferred were among the leaders of the market, the sales of each of these stocks exceeding the 100,000-share mark. To explain the advance in Pennsylvania some traders had the nerve to drag forth the hoary story about a purchase of Atchison, reminding one of Jefferson keeping on playing Rip Van Winkle. It was also said that preparations were being made for another stock issue. Manipulation at this time to make a market for new stock would seem premature, as there is no expectation that there will be any further financing until next year.

Mr. Ryan and the Tipsters.

The announcement from Mr. Ryan that no one had in the past or would in the future secure an option on the stock of Metropolitan Securities, commonly known as the Mystery, without his consent was the first statement made by him since the recent talk about a deal in tractions began. Why he took the trouble to make such an announcement public at this time no one was able to explain, although every one realized that there must be some purpose back of it. The action of the Metropolitan issues gave little indication of what the meaning was. But Mr. Ryan's announcement was, to say the least, inconsiderate of the feelings of one of the Wall Street tipsters who had that very morning congratulated the Street on the fact that the Rothschild-Belmont combination was now back of Metropolitan, as exclusively indicated by him several days previously.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

According to Connellsville (Penn.) dispatches, there has never been a time in the coke region when the orders were so heavy as now, and the greatest year in its history is predicted for the region. It is said that in the next week fully 3,000 new ovens or old ovens closed down will be started in full blast.

Pittsburg dispatches state that two big electric railway projects backed mainly by capitalists of that city are to be launched in the near future. One will be known as the Pittsburg and Allegheny Valley Railway, with a capital stock and bond issue amounting to $1,100,000, and the other line will be called the Meyersdale and Salisbury Railway, and will have a capital of $1,500,000.

IRON AND STEEL TRADE.

Speaking of conditions in the iron and steel trade, The Iron Age, in its issue today, says:

The all-absorbing question whether the recent open reduction in the prices of finished materials has stimulated serious buying cannot be answered definitely as yet. With the reserve, the statement may be made that thus far the indications are not particularly favorable. There has certainly not been any rush of buying.

From all accounts current tonnage in the steel trade is good. A clear indication of this is furnished by the fact that the independent mills are taking their purchases of raw material right along, with few insignificant exceptions, and that the United States Steel Corporation has in blast close upon 80 per cent. of its furnace capacity, including a number of new stacks. During the whole of the year the policy of the corporation has been to adjust the pig iron production very closely to the steel requirements, so that the pig iron output is a very accurate measure of the deliveries of material marketed.

T. F. RYAN DENIES RUMORS.

Says No One Has Any Option on Metropolitan Securities.

Thomas F. Ryan yesterday denied a story that August Belmont had exercised an option on a majority of the stock of the Metropolitan Securities Company and that the Metropolitan Street Railway would hereafter be run in conjunction with the Interborough system.

Mr. Ryan's statement was as follows:

I have refrained from denying the many false rumors regarding Metropolitan Securities, which have been circulated during the past few months, except in the case of inquiries by bona fide stockholders, to whom I have always made prompt replies. But the papers of this morning have been imposed upon in such a glaring manner, evidently by persons knowing their statements to be false, that I feel it my duty to the stockholders of the Metropolitan Securities Company to say that neither I nor any one representing the management of the company has given an option to any one on a majority or any other amount of its stock, or knows of any such project, and that no one with the authority of the management has entertained or will entertain in the future with my consent any proposition for the control of the company by which does not give to every stockholder an equal opportunity of participation.

Upon receiving the interview Wall Street concluded that for the time being nothing more would be heard of traction mergers, and the Metropolitan issues declined slightly.

BANKERS VOTE DOWN SELF-INSURING PLAN

Controller Ridgely's Letter on Bonds Criticised.

JAMES STILLMAN SPEAKS.

National City Bank's President Urges Bankers to Co-operate—A. Barton Hepburn Points Out Tariff Evils.

In an interval between formal speech-making on current financial topics, the American Bankers' Association became involved in a bitter controversy over fidelity bonding conditions at its opening meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday morning. For two hours the two factions, one favoring the organization of a self-insuring scheme under the association's auspices, and the other maintaining that the surety concerns ought to continue supreme in their field, battled over a report on the subject, and finally the element sympathizing with the surety companies won a decided victory.

Incidental to the fight was an open criticism of William Barrett Ridgely, United States Controller of the Currency, who, as he sat on the platform, a speaker charged, that he had acted improperly in sending a letter that was read during the debate. Later, however, he took the floor in his own defense.

The speakers of the meeting included Mayor McClellan, James Stillman, President of the National City Bank; F. G. Bigelow, President of the association and of the First National Bank of Milwaukee, and A. Barton Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank of New York. Mr. Hepburn's subject was "The Money Situation." He was announced as the principal talker. As he had been suffering with his throat, he only introduced his subject, and then submitted his printed address for distribution among the members. Among the features of the speech was an attack on high tariff as unnatural and prejudicial to the best money interests of the country.

When the convention was called to order, with President Bigelow in the chair, the ballroom was packed to overflowing. According to the Secretary, 2,700 delegates were enrolled in the city. The room could not hold nearly so many. In addition to rows of chairs that were lined up until the aisles were barely broad enough for passing, seats had been put in the passageways behind both tiers of boxes, and hundreds of members stood huddled in every doorway. Most of the boxes were filled with women.

In the absence of Bishop Potter the opening prayer was said by the Rev. Dr. George F. Nelson. Mayor McClellan, who was received with great applause, alternated serious talk with facetious remarks at the expense of the bankers.

Keep Currency Out of Politics.

"There are some who see in the establishment of the present standard of value the direct interposition of a benign Providence for the purpose of settling a purely economic question," said the Mayor; "others there are who hold a simple faith worthy of earlier and better days that a patriotic Congress reconstructed our financial system upon a foundation of ministerly inactivity and unlimited 'leave to print' in The Congressional Record; but many are convinced that the standard of value was fixed beyond all question or cavil because of the demand of a majority of the people, in consequence of the economic development of our country, and that the sentiment which resulted in taking the question of the standard of value from the realm of party politics, where it ought never to have been, and placing it in the domain of pure economics, where it belongs, was cultivated and fostered and crystallized by the bankers of the United States.

"Congress," Mr. McClellan said, "was in the habit of deferring currency legislation constantly on account of fearing a change in political rule and a fear that in a campaign one side or the other would make political capital out of the subject.

"You have it in your power to prove to the people of the United States," he continued, "that the question of the currency is in no sense political. You have it in your power so to educate public opinion that Congress, regardless of section or faction or party, will enact a currency law adequate to the needs of modern conditions, which will not be in the interests of any community or group of men, but in the best interests of the whole people."

On behalf of the New York Clearing House, of which he is President, and for all the local bankers, Mr. Stillman extended a welcome to the convention. In the audience, during Mr. Stillman's speech, were many Wall Street men, who left the room immediately after he finished. He is known to be a man who seldom, if ever, has appeared as a public speaker before, and much interest was taken in his speech.

James Stillman's Speech.

"The deeper significance of this great National meeting," he said, "is to be found in the spirit of co-operation which is being matured. The growth of the spirit of co-operation is undoubtedly the most significant phase of the economic development of the present day. Almost beyond calculation are the economic results already attained in the fields of industry and transportation through the elimination of unintelligent competition—that sort of competition which has meant in the end direct and definite loss to every one concerned, loss to the workingmen, loss to owners of property, and ultimately loss to the consumers.

"In the management of the country's great industrial undertakings notable progress has been made in recent years in the direction of harmonizing divergent interests, in the wiser comprehension of the value of mutual good understanding, in the juster appreciation of the rights of competitors. Such progress in the direction of true co-operation has resulted in vast additions to the wealth of the country, as real as would have resulted from the discovery of new mines, the making productive of desert fields, or the acquisition of new sources for the supply of raw material.

"In the field of industry the beneficent economic results which followed the awakening to the value of co-operation have become too obvious to need any word of emphasis. In the field of finance, however, there is not yet such general recognition of the value of co-operation. I believe there is no more important thing left for bankers to learn. When we come to appreciate fully the great economic value of co-operation, when he see more clearly the waste which follows unintelligent competition and understand that such waste means as complete a loss of wealth as comes with a disastrous fire or a blight of crops, we shall have brought into the business of banking something of the modern spirit which has so marked the present day development of industrial affairs.

"Here in this great gathering of bankers is the evidence that we are beginning to appreciate that fact. Here is a fertile ground in which broad ideas may grow; here we may all the more easily lose our provincialism—the provincialism of the great city as much as the provincialism of the country—and here, in the good fellowship and better acquaintance for which such a gathering gives opportunity, may well be the beginning of a co-operation in financial matters which in the end will be of vast and most beneficial consequences. And they will be beneficial not to bankers alone, but to every person whose interest is in any way concerned with banking affairs—and there could be no broader category."

President Bigelow Hopeful.

President Bigelow, responding to the Mayor and Mr. Stillman, said that the association's record would show how it had influenced the keeping of the country in the sound-money fold—which sound-minded men of all parties had come to approve.

"It is fortunate for us and for all the people," he said, "that in late years the hands of all honest and sensible men have been firmly upheld in this attitude by the strength and integrity of the Government. We have greater wealth and more resources than ever before, and the way we have weathered what has come lately in this unusual period of readjustment has strengthened my conviction that the panics of 1873 and 1893 can hardly be repeated in this country. This is partly because of very strong combinations in the industrial and commercial world, some of which have overstepped the mark, but which on the whole have contributed more, I think, than anything else to this favorable result.

"We are not suffering acutely from the want of a scientific money system. We are firmly on the gold standard level with the whole enlightened commercial world; and as crises do not generally strike all nations at once, this, with our first-rate credit, would put us in better position than we have been in the two recent great crises."

The annual report of the Secretary showed that the paid membership of the association had increased from 1,570 to 7,563 since 1895, and the annual income from dues had risen from $12,975 to $122,929. The total income had reached $123,329 a year, and the aggregate capital, surplus and deposits of members amounted to $11,290,686,637 this year. Following the report of the Executive Committee came that of the Protective Committee, whose three members have their names kept secret. Association members, according to the report, suffered losses of $10,857.61 from thefts of various sorts, while non-members lost more than $75,000.

John L. Hamilton, Chairman of the Fidelity Committee, next offered the report that was to cause so much trouble. He read a long argument for establishing a fund to bond bank employes, saving money for the banks by abandoning the old surety concerns. He recalled that the committee had accomplished the adoption and copyrighting of the new bond form, which had enabled the banks to get better terms than theretofore.

No sooner had this been read than the Executive Council submitted a report recommending that the Fidelity Committee be voted down. The council pointed out that its members had, with a very few dissenting votes, failed to see the advisability of the surety scheme, arguing that it would injure the credit and influence of the association, and that it was not practicable if the organization wished to retain its prestige.

Ridgely's Letter Read.

Caldwell Hardy of the Fidelity Committee read the letter from Controller Ridgely. Afterward it was stated by the committee Chairman that he did not favor this action, and that Mr. Hardy had acted independently. Both of them said they did not think the Controller took a position hostile to the Executive Council. The letter was as follows:

Treasury Department, Washington,
July 27, 1904.

Mr. John L. Hamilton, Chairman Fidelity Committee, American Bankers' Association, Hopeston, Ill.:

Sir: In the management of the affairs of an insolvent National bank this office has experienced much difficulty in collecting from surety companies the amount guaranteed by them to secure the faithful services of National bank officials.

The bonds have usually been written upon forms prepared by attorneys for the surety companies, in which the interests of the company appear to have received exclusive consideration. Many of them have been conditioned upon the accuracy of a printed statement, to be signed by officers of the bank, couched in such language as to mislead the officers as to its legal import. Some have contained provisions in the nature of warranty as to the examination of accounts to be made and supervision to be exercised over the conduct of the guaranteed official, practically defeating the whole purpose of the bond.

With a view of endeavoring to encourage National banks to require their officers to furnish bonds of uniform character and so drawn as to furnish indemnity against their fraudulent acts, I desire to join in recommending for their use the standard form of bond approved by the American Bankers' Association. This bond seems to me clearly to protect the bank against the dishonesty of its employes, and contains all reasonable provisions guarding the surety company against imposition by the bank. I believe its general use will result in banks obtaining the security stipulated for, and which, under many bonds now in use, is not afforded.

In this connection it may be stated that it is the policy of this office, in cases where it requires fidelity bonds to be furnished, to patronize only such companies as have manifested a disposition to discharge the obligations of their bonds when no legal defense exists. Any companies, as appears from the experience of this office and in cases contained in the legal reports, have shown a tendency to evade their liability, apparently indifferent to any effect upon their reputations from such policy. As the selection of a fidelity company is usually left to the employe, who is not interested in the character or reputation of the company to be selected, but cares only for the premium to be paid, it is obvious that the insured does not have that protection from a desire on the part of the company to establish or maintain a reputation for fair dealing which belongs to one insured in an ordinary fire or life insurance company. Bankers are pre-eminently interested in preserving and properly appreciating credit. It is suggested that a careful discrimination in the selection of the fidelity company as to its credit for prompt payment, based upon its record, is the only remedy for the evil referred to, and would result in the prevention of much injustice in the future.

Respectfully, WILLIAM B. RIDGELY,
Controller.

Bonding Plan Opposed.

The members clamored for recognition from every part of the room. J. Frank Supplee, who said he represented the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Company of Maryland and the Farmers and Planters' Bank, got the floor, and spoke for the surety companies. He argued that the association could not undertake an insurance project, the "most dangerous" variety of financial venture.

"I think it is a shame," he said, "that the Controller of the Currency uses his name and the letterhead of the Treasury Department in such a cause as this."

He was followed by E. D. Durham of Illinois, who said that of the 8,033 letters received by the Fidelity Committee from members on the new plan, 7,110 were favorable. Mr. Sullivan of Cleveland, member of the Executive Council, then opposed the plan and moved to table all of the reports. President Bigelow said:

"Although a motion to table is not debatable, I must permit Controller Ridgely to make a statement."

"I only want to reply to the gentleman from Baltimore," said the Controller, referring to Mr. Supplee. "You'll find, if you examine my letter, that it does not refer in the slightest degree to your discussion here. I simply wrote to get the bankers to adopt a bond that would give them adequate protection. The letter was written after we had had some sad experiences with some bonds which we found to have been signed on the authority of the bank officials alone."

The motion to table was lost by a big majority, and it seemed as if the surety companies were about to lose the patronage of the Bankers' Association. Chairman Hamilton of the Fidelity Committee replied to Mr. Sullivan's assertion that for four years the committee had been trying to have its plan passed.

"Even if the losses of the surety companies have been heavier this year," said Mr. Hamilton, "they have not amounted to one-fourth of the premiums paid to those concerns by this association's members, and never were the surety companies so prompt in their payments as after this committee took action."

Mr. Hamilton said all sorts of influence had been brought to bear on the committee to make it change its mind.

"Somebody even felt our pulse as to whether there was any graft in it," he added.

Col. J. P. Powers of Louisville, Ky., talked for nearly an hour against the plan. He was followed by a Kansas banker who favored it. One of his remarks was:

"The question is whether the surety companies shall run this Bankers' Association, or shall we save ourselves $150,000 a year."

Then there were cries of "Question," and a viaing vote was called.

The committee's report was disapproved by a big majority. A two-thirds vote was needed for its adoption. The surety company people were jubilant. Then the meeting voted unanimously to discharge the committee, with thanks "smoothing things over," as one of the members expressed it. Among those who "smoothed it over" was Mr. Supplee, who said that he did not mean to say anything against Controller Ridgely.

"Well," said Chairman Hamilton, after the discharge was ordered, "on behalf of the committee, now deceased, I wish to thank the gentlemen for their handsome floral tributes."

The report of the Committee on Currency Legislation, submitted by James M. Donald, said that it had been unable to have a currency bill passed because the Congressional leaders had favored "as little legislation as possible" when the bankers appealed to them at the last session.

A. B. Hepburn's Speech.

A. Barton Hepburn's address on "The Money Situation" was in part as follows:

"By means of protective tariff laws the general level of prices is raised, and hence by a change in governmental policy is likely to be remanded to a lower level. Some degree of artificiality in prices, dependent upon protection, seems likely to remain, however. To place an embargo on another nation's merchandise is an extreme procedure, and fraught with possible danger to peaceful relations. Our ability to compete with other nations in the sale abroad of our manufactured goods depends upon our ability to manufacture as cheaply and transport to the place of consumption at as little cost. The fact that our goods are delivered almost exclusively in foreign bottoms is perhaps no competitive disadvantage. I am not aware that our goods are in any respect discriminated against. Our merchant marine will not grow and develop so long as our people can employ their capital more advantageously in ventures upon land, and protection and subsidy will not avail to change this condition.

"It is claimed by the advocates of protection that our present tariff laws enhance the price of labor as well as commodity. It necessarily follows that the cost of manufactured articles, which we would like to sell abroad, is thereby advanced to an unnatural level. I am not discussing the merits or demerits of protection, but we all know the temporary effect upon business produced by the prospective or actual revision of the tariff, and I simply note the fact that it makes for permanency of conditions, and hence for uniform prosperity, to have trade, as nearly as may be, left to natural laws, unvexed by legislation.

"The extreme fluctuation in the money rate, frequently ranging as high as 20 per cent., as it did in 1901-04, indicates the existence, legislative or otherwise, of unnatural and unwholesome conditions. The strong demand for money at full rates that have generally prevailed for the past three or four years, followed by an accumulation of unloanable funds at the present, is a natural result and sequence of the industrial debauch through which we have passed, but from which we have not yet recovered.

"I seek to emphasize the fact, with which we are all familiar, that the public prospers most with average conditions and stable influences, and with the natural laws of trade in force unvexed by artificial influences."

After saying that "our currency is good beyond question, but rigid as the laws of the Medes and Persians," Mr. Hepburn condemned the Sub-Treasury system as "an arbitrary and artificial interference with currency conditions," and continued:

"The natural course of business is marred and modified by the Government's strange adherence to this absurd provision of law."

The weakness of the country's money system, he said, was best observed in times of financial panic, adding that he favored emergency currency issues.

"I am aware," he said, "that some people object that an emergency circulation would have a bad effect upon the public mind. They seem to think that the public would only know of the emergency through such an issue. Any financial or industrial disturbance that may occur will be known to the business and reading public step by step as it occurs, and an emergency circulation would be received by the public as a remedy and a relief, and anyone who thinks otherwise pays a poor compliment to the intelligence of the American people."

The bankers will assemble again this morning. They had a reception at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, and there were several meetings of delegations. Much canvassing was in progress among the Washington State contingent. It was said, for the purpose of having Tacoma selected as the next place of meeting.

HOPE OF PEACE FADES IN BUILDING STRUGGLE
Unions and Employers as Far Apart as Ever.

WOULD CORRAL HOUSESMITHS

Alliance Seeking Their Support, but Without Sucess—Carpenters to Get Outside Help.

All hope of desire for a compromise between the Building Trades Employes Association and the Building Trades Alliance appeared to be ended yesterday.

The marble cutters, who have been on strike throughout the city, were anxious to return to work last week, when they sent an ultimatum to the journeymen stone cutters that if they did not settle with their employers before Tuesday, or declare a general strike by that day, the marble workers would go to work on their own account. Yesterday, the day set for the resumption, the marble workers changed their minds. Neither alternative given to the stone cutters was accepted by the latter, and the marble cutters decided to remain out on strike anyway.

The Building Trades Alliance reported five new strikes last evening. Three of these were on the contracts of T. Farley. The other two strikes were at the Hotel Lorraine, Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, and at a contract of Walter Reid & Co., One Hundred and Ninth Street and Broadway.

In anticipation of a long fight with the Employers' Association the delegates from the District Council of the Brotherhood of Carpenters to the National Convention of the Brotherhood, which meets in Milwaukee beginning next Monday, are expected to remain in the city. It was learned yesterday that the National body is in favor of passing a resolution giving financial assistance to the New York members during the strike. This resolution will be submitted at the convention, also a resolution indorsing the stand of the local unions in the present strikes and lock-out.

The Building Trades Alliance is greatly interested in the possible outcome of the conference of all the building trades unions to-night to try and get the unions outside the alliance to take action in the building trades troubles. Among the unions which will send representatives are the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union and the local unions of bricklayers.

Special efforts will be made to get the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union to join in the fight. The members of this union were the most stubborn fighters against the arbitration agreement last year, but now they say they are satisfied with it after a year's trial, and do not want to get into any further trouble. The housesmiths, however, as well as one or two unions of the bricklayers, have gone on record as refusing to work with non-union men or with members of the new unions.

A protest will be sent by the Building Trades Alliance to the American Federation of Labor against the International Plumbers' Union for replacing the locked-out plumbers in this city with new men.

On behalf of the Employers' Association it was stated last night that it would continue its policy of forming new unions under the arbitration agreement until the regular unions gave up the fight.

WOULD RESUME SCHOOL WORK,

Unions Ready, with Conditions—Employers Make Independent Promise.

In accordance with an appointment made on Tuesday a committee of the Building Trades Alliance, headed by President Nason, met Richard H. Adams, Chairman of the Building Committee of the Board of Education, and other members of the board yesterday and signed this agreement:

"The organizations of the various trades represented in the Building Trades Alliance stand ready to return to work on all school buildings if permitted by the Building Trades Employers' Association. This agreement applies to all school buildings under construction, but does not extend to private work."

The men who signed the agreement said last evening, however, that they would not consent to working with non-union men or with members of new unions formed by the employers. They said that all of the new men must be discharged from work on the schools.

Lewis Harding, the head of the Press Committee of the employers, said that the employers would not flicker with the alliance at all. He added:

"We have received from the Board of Education lists of schools nearing completion and the trades required. The majority of the contractors for these schools are not members of the association. Those which are contracted for by our members will be manned without any reference to the alliance. We have sent for the contractors and will instruct them to that effect, so will have no dickering with the alliance or recognize in any way any arrangements it may make."

PARKER IN NEW YORK, MEETS PARTY LEADERS

Democratic Nominee for Governor May Be Selected Here.

DAVIS FIRST TO GREET HIM

Hill's Visit to Jerome Sends McCarren to Parker with Protest—Judge at Hotel Astor.

Judge Alton B. Parker arrived in this city shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning after having made a stormy trip from Esopus in John B. McDonald's yacht Sapphire. The Judge and his Secretary, Mr. McCausland, went at once to the Hotel Astor, where a suite was assigned to them on the fifth floor.

From the time of his arrival there was hardly a moment until he retired that Mr. Parker was not in conference with one or the other of the Democratic leaders now in the city, with the exception of ex-Senator Hill. It was asserted that Mr. Hill said all he had to say to Judge Parker during his visit to Rosemount on Monday, and that he would probably not see the candidate during his stay here.

Judge Parker will remain in the city until to-morrow evening, when he will take the 6:30 train over the West Shore Railroad for his home. It is believed that by that time the slate for the State ticket will have been settled, so far as the nominee for the Governorship is concerned.

Judge Parker first saw Henry G. Davis, his running mate on the ticket, who called with William F. Sheehan. Next came Perry Belmont, then August Belmont, and in the order in which they are named, Senator Gorman with Thomas F. Ryan, John Sharp Williams, Senator McCarren, Herman Ridder, Daniel McConville, who is in charge of the Speakers' Bureau at Democratic National Headquarters; Cord Meyer, W. S. Rodie, George Foster Peabody, and Daniel S. Lamont.

One of the claims urged for the Hotel Astor as a stopping place for Judge Parker was that it was so constructed that his friends could reach his apartments without being seen, and that Mr. Parker could be assured of the utmost privacy. From the time of his arrival here Mr. Parker did not go out of his room, his luncheon and dinner being served up stairs, and Secretary McCausland said that no details concerning the many conferences being held would be given out.

DAVIS FIRST TO GREET HIM.

Mr. Davis and Mr. Sheehan were at the Hotel Astor before Judge Parker arrived there. They were much worried when told that the Judge had not yet put in an appearance, but while they were talking to the clerk the carriage containing Mr. Parker, his secretary, and John B. McDonald drove up, so that they were the first to greet him.

A conference of several hours' duration followed, after which Mr. Sheehan went back to Democratic headquarters and Mr. Davis returned to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Later in the afternoon Mr. Davis took the train for his home in West Virginia. It is not likely that he will be here again during the campaign.

The visit of Senator Gorman, his first to Judge Parker since the latter's nomination, and of Thomas F. Ryan was accounted especially significant. It brought out again the story that Senator Gorman may be the real helmsman in the campaign and that Chairman Taggart may remain in the West in charge of Democratic headquarters there. Even should this not come about, it is certain that Senator Gorman's advice will be frequently sought during the campaign, and he stated several days ago that he had promised to give any aid in his power.

The main topic discussed during the day at all the conferences, except that with Senator Gorman, concerned the Governorship. As soon as word was received that Senator Hill had called on District Attorney Jerome, Senator McCarren hurried from the Hoffman House to the Hotel Astor, and in a few minutes was closeted with Judge Parker.

M'CARREN SAYS HIS SAY.

Mr. McCarren did not mince matters in declaring his opposition to Mr. Jerome. He said that whatever might be Jerome's strength in the State on account of his gambling crusade would be more than offset by the opposition to him in this city, and by his well-known views on an open Sunday. Judge Parker did not commit himself as for or against Mr. Jerome, but it is said by a person very close to the Judge that the District Attorney's whirlwind methods of campaigning appeal to him.

Senator McCarren refused to make any statement concerning his visit to the candidate. "I can tell you this, however," he said. "Mr. Hill's visit to Jerome had nothing whatever to do with the Governorship. It related entirely to legal business."

"Is that why you were in such a hurry to see the Judge as soon as the facts about Hill's visit became known?" he was asked.

Mr. McCarren hurried away before his answer could be obtained.

Not long afterward Herman Ridder, who is in charge of the German Bureau at National Headquarters, called to urge his opposition to the District Attorney. He got a respectful hearing, but was unable to learn anything definite, despite his statement later that he knew Jerome would not be the nominee. He also told Judge Parker what the German Bureau expected to do in the campaign.

Mr. McCarren also urged on Judge Parker the claims of Controller Grout, but this was met with the counter statement that unless the breach between McCarren and Murphy was healed before election time Tammany Hall would not want a better chance than to get a dig at the open enemy of the leader of the organization, if he appeared as a candidate on the ticket.

There were those among the conferees who strongly urged the claims of Edward M. Shepard - Judge Parker, according to one of his closest friends, who saw him yesterday, is a warm admirer of Mr. Shepard, but he has strong reasons for believing that Mr Shepard would not make the strongest candidate for the Governorship at the present time.

Mr. McConville's visit to the Judge had to do with his speaking in the campaign, and Mr. Sheehan is also said to have talked to him on this subject. Mr. McConville is very anxious to put the candidate on his list of speakers, and announced several days ago that he would surely be heard on the stump in the campaign. It was said last night that the Judge would make one address here and probably one other, but where and when have not yet been definitely decided.

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance will be issued on Sept. 26, and will appear in the newspapers on that date, according to the present plan. The majority of the persons who called on the Judge yesterday discussed his letter with him. Mr. Parker having brought the draft of it with him from Esopus. It is said that while it will cover the issues very thoroughly it will be considerably shorter than that of President Roosevelt. Mr. Davis's letter will appear a week later.

District Attorney Jerome, accompanied by Robert Grier Monroe and Assistant District Attorney Krotel, went into the Hotel Astor last night, and at once the story went around that he was trying to see Judge Parker. Mr. Jerome went into the café with his friends, remained a short time, and then went out. He did not go to the Judge's apartments. It was said for Mr. Jerome that he has dropped into the Hotel Astor every evening since it was opened, and that there was absolutely no significance to be attached to his visit there last night.

It was announced last night that Judge Parker would receive a delegation of bankers attending the sessions of the American Bankers' Association at the Hotel Astor this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

WILD NIGHT ON THE RIVER.

In the party that left Esopus Wednesday night with Judge Parker were his secretary, Mr. McCausland, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, John B. McDonald, and Smith M. Weed. The party left the landing at Esopus at 6:10, and experienced one of the wildest nights the Hudson has known in years.

The yacht was pitched about like a feather on the oceanlike waves, and during the entire trip was enveloped in a thick mist that made running dangerous. A stop was made at Poughkeepsie for the purpose of allowing Mr. Weed to catch a train there, but when it was found that the train had gone, Mr. Weed was persuaded to come with the party to New York.

At Cornwall the weather conditions were so threatening that the yacht was brought to anchor, but none of the party got much sleep, their efforts being mostly in the line of trying to keep in their berths. It had been the original intention to make a landing at the New York Yacht Club's station at Eighty-sixth Street, but it was finally decided to stop off Thirty-fifth Street, and breakfast was served on board. A member of the crew came ashore in the first launch and telephoned for carriages. When these arrived Judge Parker, Mr. McCausland, and John B. McDonald put off in a launch and landed at May's pier.

The Judge was dressed in a dark frock suit, and wore a heavy overcoat and a silk hat. When an attempt was made to interview him he said:

"I have nothing to say except that we had a very rough trip down. The boat rolled considerably."

As the Judge was about to enter his carriage, "Steve" Darcy, a boatman, ran up to the candidate and, extending a horny palm, said:

"Judge, let me shake your hand."

"Certainly," said the Judge, and they shook hands.

Several other men ran up and greeted the party with a cheer. Judge Parker bowed and raised his hat.

Then the carriage was driven rapidly to the Hotel Astor.

FIFTEEN CLAIMED $1 BILL.

Man's Find on Broadway Not So Lucky After All.

A well-dressed man of middle age was crossing Broadway at Twenty-third Street last evening when he saw a new dollar bill on the pavement. He picked it up and started to move on, when a man accosted him:

"Excuse me, Sir," said he, "did you find a dollar bill?"

"Yes. Do you own it?"

"Yes. I just dropped it, and I thank you very much for picking it up, Sir."

"But I don't know that it is yours," said the finder, and then he added, quickly: "Can you tell me the number of it?"

Just then a young man stepped up and said he lost the bill. He started to describe the manner in which he lost it, when a third man stepped up and put in a claim. In five minutes fifteen men were claiming ownership to the bill. A crowd of a hundred had gathered, and the cars were blocked while the wrangle lasted. Finally the finder exclaimed:

"I am losing valuable time here, and you can take your old money," and so saying, he crunched the bill in his hand and tossed it in the air. There was a scramble, and a newsboy known as "Happy" got it.

TELEGRAM STOPS A WEDDING.

"Don't Marry Pearson—Has Wife in Kansas," It Read.

RAHWAY, N. J., Sept. 15.—The expected marriage of Miss Reba McChesney, daughter of Mrs. Charles McChesney, did not take place last night. Some time since T. S. Pearson, a young man employed by a Newark piano firm, sold an instrument to the McChesneys, when he met Miss Reba, who is about twenty years of age. They became engaged and the marriage was set for last night.

Miss McChesney received a letter from the manager of the piano firm yesterday morning asking her to call at his office. Being busy with the preparations for the ceremony she paid no attention to the note. The manager waited all day, and then as the guests were gathering in the evening there came a telegram from him to Miss McChesney. It read:

"Don't marry Pearson. Has a wife in Kansas."

The young woman collapsed and the guests were requested to leave. Pearson did not put in an appearance. Several men friends of the family waited around for him several hours.

HEIR TO THE THRONE OF ITALY IS BORN

Queen Helena Gives Birth to a Son at the Racconigi Palace.

OFFENSE TO VATICAN AVOIDED

Child Is to be Known as the Prince of Piedmont Instead of the Prince of Rome.

RACCONIGI, Italy, Sept. 15.—Queen Helena was safely delivered of a son at 11 o'clock to-night at the royal palace here.

Both mother and child are doing well.

The infant has received the name of Humbert and the title of Prince of Piedmont.

The choice of the title Prince of Piedmont for the heir to the Italian throne may be regarded as an indication that the Italian Crown is less disposed than it was at one time unnecessarily to offend the Roman Church.

Two years ago, when the birth of an heir to the throne was hoped for, it was definitely stated that the child would be known as Prince of Rome. To the great disappointment of the country a daughter was born to the King of Italy then, and in the intervening time he has evidently changed his mind as to the title for the Crown Prince.

King Humbert, before he succeeded his father, was known as Prince of Piedmont, but the present King, Victor Emmanuel, was formerly known as Prince of Naples. The title was not a popular one, while it is expected that the name Prince Piedmont will generally be regarded as the most suitable that could be found. The House of Savoy acquired the Principality of Piedmont in 1418, while it was not in the past closely connected with either Rome or Naples.

Queen Helena, the mother of the new heir to the throne of Italy, is the third daughter of Nicholas, Prince of Montenegro, and was married to the then Prince of Naples on Oct. 24, 1896. The first child of the King and Queen, a girl named Yolanda, was born on June 1, 1901. A second daughter, Mafalda, was born on Nov. 19, 1902.

The birth of a son and heir to the King of Italy is likely greatly to increase the popularity of Queen Helena with the Italians.

Racconigi is in Piedmont, and it is said that Queen Helena went there in order, should a son be born, that the title Prince of Piedmont might be still more suitable.

TRAIN KILLS RUNAWAY BOY.

Body Thrown Into Hudson River—His Comrade Narrowly Escapes.

Alexander Leach, a sixteen-year-old boy, who lived in Brooklyn, "near the bridge," was struck by a Buffalo express on the New York Central Railroad tracks near Croton, N. Y., last evening and instantly killed. His body was thrown into the Hudson River and was not recovered. Armond Gauthier, a fourteen-year-old French-Canadian lad, who was with Leach, was brought to this city on the train and turned over to the police of the Grand Central Station. Later he was sent to the rooms of the Children's Society.

The Gauthier boy was suffering somewhat from shock, for he had a very narrow escape from being struck by the train which killed his companion. The boy was saved only by jumping quickly to one side.

The lad told the police that he had been a schoolmate of Leach's. About seven weeks ago he had run away from his home, 95 St. Hubert Street, Montreal. He had received letters from Leach, and so he came to this city to find him. They met here and for about six weeks, Gauthier said, they had been about the city. They had some money and when they decided to go to Montreal the boys agreed only to pay for rides when it was absolutely necessary.

They were walking north yesterday evening on the railroad tracks which skirt the river near Croton. Both were talking when they noticed a train approaching on the northbound track. They stepped to the other track directly in the path of the train from Buffalo.

According to the police the boy declared that all he knew about his companion was that he lived "near the bridge" in Brooklyn.

BIG STEEL STRIKE IN OHIO.

Twenty Thousand Steel Corporation Employes Ordered Out.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 15.—A strike order will be issued from the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, Sheet, and Tin Plate Workers in the morning for those employed by the United States Steel Corporation in the Mahoning Valley, Ohio. About 20,000 will be ordered to quit work Saturday night.

The order was issued after a conference had been held between L. W. Jenks, general manager of the steel hoop department of the Carnegie Steel Company at Youngstown and Girard, Ohio. Mr. Jenks had said repeatedly that he would not recognize the Amalgamated Association as a body nor would he again confer with a committee or officials from that body.

To-day he sent word to the Amalgamated Association headquarters that he desired to hold a conference. Manager Jenks was willing to sign the scale and agreed to employ none but union men in the mills, but he refused to give back each striker his position. He wanted the right to retain such new men as he had employed. President Shaffer demanded that every man who went on strike to his order should be reinstated.

President Shaffer of the association said that while he was loath to do it, he would continue to call out men at the various plants of the steel corporation until the union is recognized. The Carnegie Company had received hurry up orders for steel hoops, which accounts for the change of front by Manager Jenks.

CANNON SOUNDS THE ALARM.

Finds Democrats Are Making Inroads in Western States.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—From no less an authority than Speaker Cannon comes confirmation of the reports that the Democrats have been very active in various parts of Illinois, Indiana, and Nebraska in industrial centres.

Speaker Cannon has been traveling through this region and has talked to many men who are in a way to be informed. His report is opposed to the general Republican notion that the Democrats are asleep.

He has read the riot act to both State and National managers.

He arrived in the city last night and had a long talk with Chairman West of the State Committee. He saw the National managers at the Auditorium to-day and then had another long conference with the State managers. Marshal C. P. Hitch was called in afterward.

Marshal Hitch admitted that the Republican managers were worried over the aggressive work of the Democrats, and that Mr. Cannon had reported to that effect.

Speaker Cannon believes that the National campaign is involved by the work being done in Indiana. According to his report, an appeal to the discontented is the order sent out from New York, and every man who is out of work or who is discontented in any way is the object of the new propaganda.

Speaker Cannon, at South Bend, Ind., began a campaign which he will wage from this time until election day, in the close Congressional districts of the country.

FIRE THREATENED HALIFAX.

Troops with Torpedo Apparatus Checked Flames—Loss, $500,000.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 15.—A fire swept the business portion of the water front here to-day and destroyed $500,000 worth of property. Its progress was checked by the dynamitting of a dozen buildings by sailors from the North Atlantic fleet and soldiers from the citadel garrison.

The fire was at its height between 3 and 4 o'clock this afternoon, and a fierce southerly gale was driving the flames toward the heart of the city. Suddenly, at 4 o'clock, the wind veered to the west and swept the flames along the wharves and warehouses.

There the fire raged, on lower Water Street, practically beyond control, until 7 o'clock to-night, when 200 men with torpedo apparatus landed from the Ariadne and Indefatigable and began to blow up the buildings. Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas personally directed the sailors, and 200 marines patrolled the streets, protecting imperial property. Some of the buildings dynamited were four stories high, and for an hour the city shook with the terrific explosions. The flames subsided when they reached the cleared space.

The activity of the soldiers and sailors was stimulated by the fact that the fire soon would have reached the Government Ordnance yard, where thousands of tons of powerful explosives were stored.

During the fire a tree fell, killing Miss Flora Ring and injuring two others. The flames destroyed six wharves, two coal piers, two hotels, a dozen big warehouses, and many shops. It undoubtedly would have been much more disastrous but for the shift of wind.

MILITIA GUARD MOB LEADERS.

Two Troops Picketed Around Alabama Jail—Jury May Indict Mayor.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 15.—The Madison County Jail is guarded to-night by Companies G and K, Third Infantry, because threats have been made that those indicted by the Grand Jury in connection with the lynching of Horace Maples and placed in the jail would be released by their friends.

Ben Hill, one of the alleged lynchers, was captured and lodged in jail to-day, and the officers are looking for nine others who have been indicted. Judge Speake of the Circuit Court heard rumors of impending trouble and wired Gov. Cunningham for the militia. The troops reached here on a special train late this afternoon, and pickets guard all approaches to the jail.

Capt. Brown has orders to put the city under martial law, if necessary. He has camp equipment, and is prepared for a long stay.

Solicitor Peters denies the rumor that Sheriff Rogers and Mayor Smith have been indicted, although the jury asked for instructions as to how to act in their cases. Great excitement was caused to-day after the report of the jury had been read, when Juror Charles P. Hane made the following statement to the Court:

"If the Grand Jury in their wisdom and discretion see fit to impeach the High Sheriff of Madison County, and his Honor the Mayor of Huntsville for failure to discharge their duty in executing the law, we desire to do it legally. Therefore we ask your Honor for a full and complete instruction in all formalities and specifications so that we may avoid errors, irregularities, or technicalities."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 15.—Among the resolutions passed to-day by the Turpentine Operators' Convention was one calling on the Governor of Florida to enforce the law by the arrest of the Altmans for killing Jackson Duncan and Jim Riley on the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad Sunday night, and the shooting of W. M. Duncan at Baxter on the following day.

HAMILTON, Ga., Sept. 15.—Elijah Gore, a negro preacher, who is charged with leadership of a "Before Day" club among the negroes of this section, which is said to have planned the murder of prominent white men, has been arrested and has been ordered to leave the vicinity.

CAMILLA, Ga., Sept. 15.—Judge W. N. Spence convened a special term of the Superior Court here to-day to try Whitley Williford, the negro accused of murder, for whose protection the militia has been called out. This morning Col. Wooten with eighteen men of the Albany Guards, arrived in town, and at 11 o'clock the Thomasville Guards, 120 strong, arrived, bringing Williford from the Thomasville jail.

The soldiers were ordered in the hearing of all present to load their rifles and halt all who might endeavor without authority to enter the courtroom. The trial of Williford lasted all day. In the evening a verdict of guilty was returned by the jury, and Williford was sentenced to be hanged Oct. 6.

SECOND RUSSIAN RAIDER OFF THE PACIFIC COAST

Auxiliary Vessel Korea Sighted Off Vancouver Island.

SHE IS STEAMING SOUTHWARD

Is Expected to Put In at Esquimault or Victoria—The Lena Is to be Dismantled.

VICTORIA B. C., Sept. 15.—Members of the crew of His Majesty's ship Grafton, just arrived from Comox, report the Russian armed auxiliary vessel Korea in the Pacific off the northern coast of Vancouver Island, steaming slowly southward. They expect that the Korea will come to Esquimault or Victoria.

She is described as a larger vessel than the Lena, and is commanded by an officer of high rank in the Russian Navy.

The news has caused much excitement at Esquimault, where preparations to deal with her case, should she enter, are now being made.

There has been much mystery in the movements of the Grafton recently. The ship left Victoria some days ago for her annual heavy gun practice at Comox, but put hurriedly back to Esquimault on Tuesday under forced draught and in record time.

After reaching Esquimault the big cruiser maintained her steam pressure at unusual strength. It was supposed that her arrival was connected with the Lena affair, but it is far more likely that it was due to the presence of another Russian converted cruiser off the Pacific Coast.

THE LENA TO BE DISARMED.

Will Remain at San Francisco Till End of War—Crew May Stay, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The Lena incident has now been practically settled without causing any feeling of resentment on the part of either Japan or Russia against this Government.

Acting Secretary of State Adee to-day gave out a statement to the effect that the President had issued an order directing that the Lena be taken in custody by the American naval authorities at San Francisco and disarmed.

The Lena is to be taken to the Mare Island Navy Yard, and there disarmed by the removal of her small guns, the breech blocks of her large guns, her small arms, her ammunition, and her ordnance stores. Capt. Berlinsky is to give a written guarantee that the Lena shall not leave San Francisco until peace is concluded.

The officers and crew are to be paroled not to leave San Francisco until some other understanding as to their disposal is reached between the United States Government and both belligerents.

After disarmament the vessel may be removed to a private dock for such reasonable repairs as will make her seaworthy and preserve her in good condition during her detention. She may be repaired at the navy yard if the Russian commander should so elect. If she goes to a private dock the Commandant of the navy yard at Mare Island is to have custody of the ship, and the repairs are to be overseen by an engineer officer to be detailed by the Commandant. When repaired the vessel is to be taken back to the Mare Island Navy Yard, and be there held in custody until the end of the war.

This action has been taken on the written request of the commander of the Lena, addressed to Rear Admiral Goodrich, setting forth that as the vessel is incapable of putting to sea without needful repairs she must disarm, and asking that repairs be permitted after disarmament.

The Secretary of the Navy has telegraphed the President's order to San Francisco and has given instructions to Admiral Goodrich and to Capt. McCalla, the Commandant of the Mare Island Navy Yard, to carry out its provisions.

The disposition of the Lena's crew is the one matter to be arranged. It is not improbable that Japan would make a strong objection to allowing the crew to be sent back to Russia before the war is over. Russia naturally does not like the idea of keeping the men at San Francisco, under heavy expense. However, this seems now to be the most likely settlement of the matter.

Theodore Hansen, First Secretary of the Russian Embassy, who arrived here to-day, had a long conference with Mr. Adee, and expressed the desire of his Government that the Lena be disarmed.

Minister Takahira also called upon Mr. Adee to-day. He told him that the Japanese Government had such perfect confidence in the disposition of the United States Government to do the right thing in relation to the Lena that he felt it was unnecessary for him even to make a suggestion regarding the case.

SAW TRAIN CRUSH HUSBAND.

Celzke Disregarded Wife's Advice Not to Cross Track and Was Killed.

Martin Celzke, thirty-nine years old, who lived in Twentieth Street, near Sixth Avenue, College Point, L. I., was struck by a train at the Sieden Avenue station in that place last night and instantly killed.

Celzke went to the station with his wife, who was to see him off. The gates were about to be lowered, and Mrs. Celzke urged her husband not to attempt to cross the track. Not heeding her advice, he stepped on the track and the next moment the train struck him.

BOY'S 7,000-MILE WALK.

Deaf-Mute Makes Certified Tramp from Peru to St. Louis in Two Years.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—Louis G. Madrigal, a nineteen-year-old boy, who started from Lima, Peru, Sept. 2, 1902, has arrived here after a walk of 7,000 miles, believed to be the longest journey ever made on foot.

Madrigal is a deaf mute. He carries as a witness to his remarkable exploit a set of fourteen books, which contain the certificates of the Mayors, Postmasters, railroad agents, and officials in more than 500 cities and towns through which he passed on the trip.

Czar Confers the Order of St. Stanislaus of the First Class on Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—Rear Admiral George Wallace Melville, retired, who resides here, has received from the Czar the order of St. Stanislaus of the first class. As yet he has not accepted the honor, and it may be necessary for an act of Congress to be passed before he can become the owner of the decoration.

Admiral Melville was Chief of the Bureau of Navigation at Washington for seventeen years, and the decoration has been conferred on him for his courtesy to the attachés of the Russian Embassy, especially those whose business pertained to naval affairs.

The decoration was forwarded by Count Cassini with a letter informing Admiral Melville of the Czar's desire to show his recognition of the services of the Admiral to the Russian attachés.

MRS. STOKES TO THE RESCUE.

Hot Coffee and Dry Clothes to Beached Freighter's Crew.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 15.—The gale caught the freighter Eagle off Captain's Island early this morning and the water came aboard so fast that the pumps could not keep up with it. Capt. Hart beached his boat on Collender's Point, near the Summer residence of Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Sr.

Mrs. Stokes saw the men coming ashore in the small boats, and she had her servants make hot coffee for them. Then she gave the men dry clothes and furnished them with transportation to Norwalk. The freighter was bound from New York to South Norwalk.

WOMAN DEFIES WORKMEN.

Mrs. Ziskin of Newark Jumps Into Hole Dug for Lighting Pole.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 15.—A gang of men in the employ of the Public Service Corporation was frustrated in an attempt to erect an electric light pole in front of the house at 211 Court Street to-day by Mrs. Charles Zizkin, who occupies the house, and Mrs. C. F. Knowthe, the owner of the property. The men had dug a hole four feet deep, when Mrs. Ziskin shoved them away, and, jumping into the excavation, defied them.

Word was sent to Mrs. Knowthe, who assisted her tenant. Finding that it was useless to try and remove the women, the foreman ordered the men to abandon the work. Two previous attempts to erect the pole were frustrated in the same way by Mrs. Knowthe.

W. H. HARROUN SURRENDERS.

Warrant Charges Forgeries Aggregating Nearly $1,000,000.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—W. H. Harroun, the grain elevator manager, surrendered himself to Sheriff Spencer to-day. He had learned that a warrant had been issued for him, charging forgery of bills of lading and warehouse receipts aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

Harroun learned of the warrant upon his return from Chicago, where he had gone to arrange for money with which to compromise with his creditors.

SAW A SHADOW, SHOT AT IT.

Rochester Man Fatally Wounded His Young Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Seeing a shadow pass in front of his bedroom window at 3 o'clock this morning Joseph Basintis pulled his revolver from underneath his pillow and fired twice. Then he discovered he had mortally wounded his nineteen-year-old wife whom he had married less than a year ago.

Mrs. Basintis died at the Homeopathic Hospital at 7 o'clock this morning and the husband, nearly crazed with grief, is locked up, the police expressing the belief that he willfully murdered his wife. Mrs. Basintis in a statement made to Coroner Kellip just before she died exonerated her husband and begged that he be released, but neighbors told the police that there had been many quarrels between the couple.

LOST $22,500 ON RACES.

Only Horse That Won for Lightstone at Saratoga Disqualified.

Creditors of Charles L. Lightstone, woolen merchant, of 115 Greene Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Aug. 25, are trying to ascertain what has become of his money. He has been under examination for two days before Alexander Gilchrist, as Special Commissioner, by attorneys representing several of the creditors.

Mr. Lightstone's explanation was that he had lost large sums at the race track and in other ways, the amount on the race track being $22,500. Early this season, the examination disclosed, he went into partnership with a bookmaker, each investing $12,500, but the money was lost before the season was half over. He gave a note to the bookmaker for $12,500, which was paid at maturity in August. On Aug. 20 he went to Saratoga with $10,000 cash, hoping to recuperate his losses, but luck was against him, and he lost all this money and borrowed $1,100 to get home, which money he subsequently paid back. Of all the bets he made only one horse won, and that one was disqualified.

RUNS OVER CHILD, ESCAPES.

East New York Crowd Tries to Mob Driver After Accident.

Crying out for vengeance, a mob of several hundred persons in East New York early last evening endeavored to wreak its fury upon a driver of a truck who had lashed up his team and driven off after running over and perhaps fatally injuring three-year-old Philip Aronwitz of 84 Belmont Avenue.

The accident was directly due to the driver's negligence. The child, with several others, was playing in front of his home and toddled into the street. Belmont Avenue was crowded, and cries of horror went up as the team came clattering up the street at a rapid rate. The child was knocked down and was kicked in the head. One of the wheels of the truck passed over him. At the Bradford Street Hospital it was said, last night, that the child would probably die.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 15.—All the old sores of the Platt-Odell feud were opened up in the Republican State Convention which met here to-day. Few conventions in the history of the party in the State have been marked by such vindictiveness as was displayed in to-day's convention by the followers of Senator Platt against the leadership of Gov. Odell.

It was made plain to every person in the convention hall that the nomination of a candidate for Governor and for the other State officers was not the chief concern of those assembled here to perform that duty. The vital question with all of them apparently was whether the will of Odell or Platt should be done. Higgins and Woodruff, the rivals for the nomination for Governor, were pawns in the game. The real contest was whether Odell or Platt was to be supreme in Republican councils.

The victory was with Odell, but such was the cutting down his leadership received at the hands of Platt orators that he well might have exclaimed, "One more such victory and I am undone."

Mr. Woodruff withdrew from the contest for Governor before the roll was called on the nomination for that office. It was he who moved that the secretaries cast the vote of the convention for Mr. Higgins. All the other nominations were made in the same manner.

Odell and Platt Meet.

It was with considerable interest that the delegates and those holding convention seats wended their way down Saratoga's chief thoroughfare to the convention hall between 10:30 and 11 o'clock this morning. Undoubtedly their expectations of an exciting time would have fallen had they known of a meeting between Gov. Odell and Senator Platt which had taken place in the rooms of the Senator a short time before.

At that meeting it had been agreed that the friends of Mr. Woodruff would contest themselves with a protest against the alleged manner in which his nomination was to be prevented, and that after such protest had been offered Mr. Woodruff himself would rise and move to make the nomination of Mr. Higgins unanimous.

There were only a few of the leaders who knew of that important decision. The belief of practically all of the delegates was that they were to witness a fight to the finish. In that they were disappointed, but as things turned out they could not fairly complain that the performance they did witness lacked anything in the way of excitement.

The spokesmen for Mr. Woodruff in the convention were W. A. Prendergast of Brooklyn and Assemblyman James T. Rogers of Broome, the majority leader in the Assembly.

Prendergast's Fierce Protest.

Mr. Prendergast is an orator who knows how to protest. Nothing quite so vigorous and biting as the protest which he delivered against the methods used by Gov. Odell to bring about the nomination of Mr. Higgins has been heard in a Republican convention in years. In fact, it was the opinion of the Kings County delegation, who were booming Mr. Woodruff, that Mr. Prendergast protested too much.

However that may be, it is certain that his reputation as an orator who can say cutting things in fine language was made by his effort of to-day. It is the general expectation here to-night that the speech of Mr. Prendergast will be issued as a campaign document by the Democratic State Committee without much delay. He went for Gov. Odell in a manner which made the convention fairly gasp for breath.

The speech of Assemblyman Rogers might be fairly characterized as a concoction of vitriol and molasses. The vitriol, however, was of the real quality. Undoubtedly it will leave scars which will be a long time healing. Inferentially he accused Gov. Odell of trying politically to assassinate Senator Platt.

Through all of the bitter assault on him Gov. Odell sat in his place in the Orange County delegation like a graven image. His arms were folded most of the time, and the only awkward indication of the emotions which must have raged within him were the occasional deep frowns which overspread his almost ashy countenance.

Never in his life had there been borne in on him with greater force the verity of Lord Byron's words:

He who climbs ambition's height
Will find the peaks all fringed with snow.
He who conquers or subdues mankind
Must look down on the hate of those below.

The first general applause in the convention was for Temporary Chairman J. Sloat Fassett. Mr. Fassett made a big hit with his speech of yesterday, and when he walked down the left centre aisle of the convention hall about ten minutes before 11 o'clock, the hour set for the opening of the convention, he received an ovation. There was cheering for National Committeeman Ward and ex-Gov. Frank S. Black when they came in, and when Senator Platt tottered down to his place at the head of the Tioga delegation leaning on the arm of William A. Smyth of Owego, the present local boss of Tioga, the entire convention arose and cheered enthusiastically.

Woodruff Enthusiasm Limited.

When Timothy L. Woodruff entered he was received with wild acclaim by the Kings County delegates, but the enthusiasm for him extended to only a few of the other delegates. Noticing that there were some delegates and spectators in the hall smoking Mr. Fassett on calling the convention to order said:

"It is the custom in Republican conventions that when the ladies come in the cigars must go out."

While Mr. Fassett was rapping for order Gov. Odell had come in, and had almost reached his seat in the Orange County delegation before he was noticed. Then some Few started cheering, and the convention's attention having been attracted to the Warwick of the situation he was greeted with general enthusiasm, the band playing "Hail to the Chief."

When the band had ceased some enthusiast suggested three cheers for the Governor-Chairman, and they were given with a will. Then there was a call for three cheers for Platt. They also were heartily given. Inspired by the response which had been given to the suggestion of those who called for three cheers for Odell and Platt other enthusiasts called for three cheers for Woodruff and Higgins, which led Chairman Fassett to remark:

"Why not give three cheers for everybody?"

But no one thought of Roosevelt, and the wave of enthusiasm passed over without any demonstration for the Republican Presidential candidate.

Chairman Fassett read a telegram from the Republicans in Connecticut extending their best wishes to their brethren in New York, and concluding, "Forward, march."

Senator Brackett submitted the report of the Committee on Credentials seating the Quigg and Parsons delegations from New York, and Col. Michael J. Dady, as Chairman of the Committee on Permanent Organization, reported in favor of the selection of Senator George R. Malby of Lawrence as permanent Chairman of the convention. Both reports were adopted.

As he ascended the platform Senator Malby received an almost enthusiastic greeting, the whole audience rising and cheering as the band played Sousa's "Stars and Stripes."

Malby's Claim for Republicans.

In addressing the convention Senator Malby said of the Republican record:

"The vast sums of money which have been collected by our State officials from thousands of persons, companies, and corporations have been collected and expended with absolute honesty. During the past ten years there has been collected and paid out from tens of thousands of sources and purposes, more than $200,000,000, and every dime has been exacted from those who legally owed it and every cent has been paid to those legally entitled thereto, without so much as the loss of a farthing from any source to the people of the State.

"This presents a record of official integrity unequaled in the management of public affairs of any State in this nation or of any nation in the world, and is almost wholly unknown in the management of our personal affairs."

As Senator Malby concluded his address, one of the side doors of the convention hall was swung open and "The Unconditional Club of Albany," which has the reputation of being the finest marching club in the State, came in led by District Attorney George Addington of Albany and a brass band. They went around the hall and up into the gallery. Large portraits of Roosevelt and Fairbanks carried by some of the marchers provoked applause for the National candidates.

After the report of the Committee on Resolutions, read by John A. Sleicher of New York, had been adopted, nominations for Governor were declared in order, and Chairman Malby, and Assemblyman Arthur C. Wade of Chautauqua made the nominating speech for Senator Higgins. When Mr. Wade referred to the many victories which the party had won under the leadership of Senator Platt and designated him as "that great and grand man to whom we pay the homage of our admiration" there was enthusiastic cheering. Mr. Wade paid high tribute to the business ability of Senator Higgins and to his capacity for administering the affairs of the State.

"Mr. Higgins," he said, "does not come as the candidate of any faction of the party. His name could not be so presented, because there are no factions."

Raines Leads Higgins Cheering.

At the conclusion of Mr. Wade's speech there was cheering for Higgins, and it was noticeable that it was led by Senator John Raines of Ontario, the majority leader of the Senate, who heretofore has always been classed as a Platt man and whose selection as President pro tem. of the Senate by order of Senator Platt led to the revolt of Senators Brackett, Elsberg, and Brown.

William A. Prendergast of Kings County was recognized by Chairman Malby, and took the platform to place Mr. Woodruff in nomination.

In introducing Mr. Prendergast to the convention Chairman Malby called him "Windagas."

This mistake of the Chairman called forth laughter, but did not in the least disconcert the Brooklyn orator. With a wave of his hand he exclaimed:

"Well, what's in a name?"

His cleverness in turning an awkward situation to his own advantage at once commended him to his audience. Another recommendation was his voice. It was big and easily reached in all parts of the hall. Before he had been speaking five minutes the crowd realized that they were listening to a master in what has been termed "the gentle art of knocking." The thrusts which the speaker made at Gov. Odell caused the faces of the Platt men to beam with pleasure, and as for the Kings County men, they were thrown into a delirium of delight.

Prendergast's Pointed Remarks.

"On behalf of the representatives of Kings County, the second largest delegation in this convention," said Mr. Prendergast, "I have the honor of submitting to this great gathering the name of a candidate for the high office of Governor.

"The duty imposed upon me does not only consist in the presentation of his name, but as an element of his candidacy and as an expression of the deep-seated sentiment of the delegates from the County of Kings to voice in their name an earnest and at the same time vigorous protest against the course pursued in effecting a controlling influence in this convention, a course to which we honestly believe a majority of the delegates of the Empire State Convention are at heart opposed, and which their sober judgment regards as subversive to good party management.

"The party and our candidate were invited a few weeks ago to enter the delegations of an 'open convention,' a most engaging, nay, enticing, suggestion. Public curiosity was aroused as to what this 'open convention' really comprehended, and some were so lacking in their appreciation of this great manifestation of political altruism as to murmur softly the touching melody of the spider and the fly.

"We have looked somewhat in vain for the 'open' feature of this convention, and the only one discernible is the trap door, through which certain candidates have been contumeliously hurried.

His Questions to Odell Men.

"Why has the edict of official disapproval been issued against Timothy L. Woodruff? Are we to believe that it is because of his splendid record as a public man and his abilities and resources as a politician there are those who fear that such a character and such abilities, if associated with the great powers of the Governorship might overshadow them in public attention or party control, and that he would be Governor in fact as well as in name?

"It is possible he is being punished for his friends. It is possible that he enjoys the friendship and support of the senior Senator from this State. His acceptability may be questioned, but the support of the aged and venerable Senator from New York is under any and all circumstances a decoration of honor.

"Free speech without free action, free speech without the exercise of everything that contributes to liberty-practicing and exalted manhood, is a veritable hypocrisy. What we plead for in this convention today is a demonstration and survival of that spirit of free speech and free action which is one of the tenets of our party creed.

"No one action could or would redound more abundantly to the credit of our party in this campaign and settle beyond speculation the results in this State than the choice of a candidate for Governor by the delegates to this convention representing their untrammeled judgment."

Some Effects of the Speech.

When Mr. Prendergast said that the only open feature of the convention was "the trap door through which certain candidates have been contumeliously hurried," the Platt and Woodruff men evinced wild delight. As for Gov. Odell he glowered at the speaker in a manner which boded no good to the young man's political future as long as Gov. Odell is the master of the Republican organization. Mr. Prendergast's "spider and fly" illustrations also made a tremendous hit with those who are disgruntled over Gov. Odell taking the leadership of the party.

Mr. Woodruff remained in his seat with arms folded and impassive of countenance. He developed later, however, that he was watching with trained eye what effect the assault upon Gov. Odell was having on the delegates.

When Mr. Prendergast returned to his seat Col. Dady shook him warmly by the hand, but Mr. Woodruff merely murmured a word of congratulation. The cheering for Woodruff lasted for several minutes.

While the din was still going on Assemblyman James T. Rogers of Broome was recognized to second Mr. Woodruff's nomination. All through Mr. Rogers's speech there were outbursts of cheering for Woodruff. When he asked, "What are we here for to-day?" some quick-witted delegate immediately responded, "Woodruff."

The speech of Mr. Rogers was mainly a plea for the recognition of the wisdom of following the leadership of Senator Platt rather than that of Gov. Odell. He referred to the fact that it was Senator Platt who had insisted upon the candidacy of Roosevelt for Governor in 1898 regardless of his friendship for Gov. Black, and asserted that in almost every instance the political judgment of Senator Platt had been justified. It would be a mistake not to follow it now, he said.

He likened the aged Senator to Barbara Frietchie, and quoted the lines:

Shoot, if you must, this old gray head,
But spare your country's flag.

This stirred deep emotions in the audience, and one of the Albany delegates was overheard to say to his neighbor: "That's murderous." It was the general feeling that Mr. Rogers had cut so deep in that reference that the wound which he made would not be healed in the present campaign.

The chief features of the seconding speech which W. W. Niles of New York County made for Mr. Higgins was that in referring to Mr. Higgins he called him "Mr. Wiggins."

"Say, he don't even know the name of the candidate he's to vote for," shouted one of the Woodruff men.

After F. R. Hazard of the Onondaga County delegation had made a seconding speech for Mr. Higgins, Chairman Malby ordered the calling of the roll.

Woodruff Announces Withdrawal.

Secretary Fox stood up with the roll call in his hand, but before he had called the first county Mr. Woodruff arose in his place. His appeal to the Chairman for recognition focused the attention of the entire convention on him, and there was a tremendous outburst of cheering from his admirers on the floor and in the gallery.

The suggestion that he take the platform was shouted from all parts of the hall. As he started for the platform the enthusiasm gained renewed force. When order had been obtained Mr. Woodruff addressed the convention as follows:

"It is so obvious to the practiced eye and the trained ear of a man in active politics, who has sat in many State Conventions, that the result of this convention has been determined, that I am anxious to save the time of the delegates which would be made necessary by the calling of the roll of the individual delegates. And I am still more anxious, my fellow-delegates, to save a great many of you from the embarrassment of choosing between two good friends who are not only good friends of all of you, but equally good friends of each other.

"Above every consideration and condition that has entered into what to some of us seems to be an unfortunate situation I am a Republican. You can keep me from a position of command, but you cannot drive me from the ranks of the Republican Party.

"I have had the pleasure of thirty years' personal acquaintance with Frank Higgins, and during the whole period of my acquaintance with him I have never known him to do an unkind thing or harbor an unkind thought. He is as well equipped as any man in the State for the office of Governor, through his long services as a Republican. He is, as the gentleman from New York said, a man of rare business ability, and there is no reason in the world why this convention, if it sees fit to do it, should not name him as its standard bearer.

"I just want to say one word before I make that motion, and that is to express my appreciation to those who have been with me, or would have liked to have been with me as the candidate of this convention, and particularly I want to commit the Kings County delegates before their fellow-delegates of this convention, returning without a candidate on the ticket, naturally disappointed, and even sore—I want to commit that delegation to as earnest an effort, if not a greater effort, for Frank Higgins than they would have made for me."

In accordance with the motion of Mr. Woodruff the Secretary cast the vote of the convention for Mr. Higgins, and he was declared the nominee. The announcement of his nomination was greeted with cheers which lasted several minutes.

While the cheering was going on there was a general movement toward the doors and then to the trains, so that by the time the other nominations were made and adjournment taken there scarcely was a corporal's guard left in the hall, while by 6 o'clock at night not more than 10 per cent. of the convention crowd was left in the village.

Gruber Nominates Bruce.

When the Governorship had been disposed of Chairman Malby recognized Col. Abe Gruber of New York, who placed M. Linn Bruce before the convention as the candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Gruber made a humorous speech, starting in with a reference to his break with Senator Platt in the same convention hall six years before.

"The only reason why I am on this stage before you to-day," said Col. Gruber, "is because the convention of 1898 did not repeal the law of resurrection. I have come to the belief that the man who takes his lickings with Christian fortitude or with Jewish cheerfulness may yet find a seat among the mighty.

"My candidate for Lieutenant Governor was born in the country, but he has lived in New York for fourteen years and he doesn't blow out the gas. We have lived in the same Assembly district for ten years, and both of us used to go hand in hand to 49 Broadway to take our inspiration from Senator Platt. After the convention of 1898, when Senator Platt and I differed, Bruce and I still went together to 49 Broadway, but he went up stairs while I waited on the other side of the street. Bruce has opposed me in many primary fights, but on these occasions he always made the speeches while I got the votes. As a result neither of us is sore, and I want to say that he always has won the respect of friends and enemies alike."

Senator Raines moved that the Secretary of the convention be instructed to cast one ballot for the nomination of Bruce for Lieutenant Governor, which was carried, and at 1:55 o'clock, fifteen minutes after the placing in nomination of a candidate for the place was ordered, Bruce was declared to be the nominee. Then, in rapid-fire order, came the other nominations, only the naming of John F. O'Brien of Clinton for Secretary of State occupying more than a couple of minutes.

Depew Answers Cockran.

Senator Depew, who placed Mr. O'Brien in nomination, took occasion to reply to Congressman W. Bourke Cockran's speech in Tammany Hall the night before. The Senator said that Cockran, after going through President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance as with a fine tooth comb, could only find two things to object to, one being his attitude on the service pension, and the other on the Panama Canal treaty. He said that Mr. Cockran admitted in this that the Democratic Party had no case against President Roosevelt.

O'Brien's nomination was out of the way at 2:15 o'clock. Otto Kelsey of Livingston was renominated for Controller at 2:17, and then came the nomination of John Wallenmeier of Erie for State Treasurer in the record time of half a minute, Chairman Malby declaring him the nominee at 2:17½ o'clock. Congressman James W. Wadsworth placed Mr. Kelsey in nomination, and Mr. Timmerman of Buffalo named Mr. Wallenmeier.

It took three and one-half minutes to nominate Julius M. Mayer of New York for Attorney General, Assemblyman Josiah T. Newcomb making the presentation. Two minutes were required for William P. Rudd of Albany to nominate Henry L. Van Alstine of Columbia for another term as State Engineer and Surveyor, and but a single minute each to nominate Chief Judge Edgar M. Cullen of Brooklyn for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals and Judge William E. Werner of Rochester for Associate Judge of the same court. Senator Raines presented the resolution for Judge Cullen's nomination, and Mayor James G. Cutler of Rochester presented the resolution for Judge Werner's nomination. At 2:25 o'clock all nominations had been made, and it took just five minutes longer to complete the work of the convention.

ODELL APPEALED TO PLATT.

Woodruff's Withdrawal Prearranged at Private Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The action of Timothy L. Woodruff in withdrawing his name just before a roll call was to be taken on the nomination for Governor in the Republican State Convention to-day was not a sudden impulse on Mr. Woodruff's part. What Mr. Woodruff did had all been prearranged at conferences held between Gov. Odell and Senator Platt and between Platt and Mr. Woodruff before the convention had assembled. As late as 9 o'clock this morning Mr. Woodruff had said:

"This is not my fight. It is Senator Platt's. It became the Senator's fight with his falling out with Gov. Odell yesterday. I am a creature of circumstances over which I have no control. I must stop in the fight unless Senator Platt desires me to to get out. I owe that to the man who has been my steadfast friend ever since my candidacy has first been mentioned. I knew from the first that I would never be Odell's candidate, but I thought that I could make him see that the sentiment of the State was for me. He has chosen to diregard that sentiment.

"Delegates who will vote for Higgins have come to me in the past two or three days and told me that I would have had their support had it not been for the fact that the screws had been put on them by Gov. Odell."

It was shortly after Mr. Woodruff had made that declaration of his intentions that Gov. Odell was seen to come out of his own cottage and cross over to that of Senator Platt. He looked like a man who had been worrying and who was suffering from loss of sleep. Despite the absolute knowledge which he had that he was able to control the situation in the convention, his air was that of deep dejection. The Governor was in the rooms of the Senator but a few minutes. Later in the day it was learned what had taken place between them.

The Senator was standing near the mantelpiece as the Governor entered his parlor and they greeted each other cordially.

"Senator," said the Governor, "isn't there any way in which this situation can be saved? I know you don't wish to hurt the ticket, but I fear that will be the result unless something is done."

The Governor spoke sadly, even affectionately. His tone was that of a man seeking advice from a friend rather than that of an acknowledged leader making a request of a dethroned boss. Probably it was the pleading in his voice which made an appeal to the Senator which he was unable to resist. At any rate, the Senator hoisted a flag of truce.

"Perhaps there is. Come and see me later," he replied.

"Have your secretary send for me when you are ready to see me," said the Governor.

When the Governor came out of the Senator's home it was evident that something had occurred to cheer him up. His countenance had brightened, and he walked with a more springy step. No sooner had the Governor left his apartments than Senator Platt for Mr. Woodruff. They were together for some time. When Mr. Woodruff had taken his departure the Senator sent his secretary, Mr Howe, to bring over the Governor.

"Mr. Woodruff's name will be presented to the convention," said the Senator. "But after his protest has been made he will withdraw his name and move to make the nomination of Mr. Higgins unanimous."

This announcement took a load and condition that has entered into what to some of us seems to be an unfortunate situation I am a Republican. You can keep me from a position of command, but you cannot drive me from the ranks of the Republican Party.

"I have had the pleasure of thirty years' personal acquaintance with Frank Higgins, and during the whole period of my acquaintance with him I have never known him to do an unkind thing or harbor an unkind thought. In accordance with the motion of Mr. Woodruff the Secretary cast the vote of the convention for Mr. Higgins, and he was declared the nominee. The announcement of his nomination was greeted with cheers which lasted several minutes.

Bruce has opposed me in many primary fights, but on these occasions he always made the speeches while I got the votes. As a result neither of us is sore, and I want to say that he always has won the respect of friends and enemies alike."

Senator Raines moved that the Secretary of the convention be instructed to cast one ballot for the nomination of Bruce for Lieutenant Governor, which was carried, and at 1:55 o'clock, fifteen minutes after the placing in nomination of a candidate for the place was ordered, Bruce was declared to be the nominee. Then, in rapid-fire order, came the other nominations, only the naming of John F. O'Brien of Clinton for Secretary of State occupying more than a couple of minutes.

Depew Answers Cockran.

Senator Depew, who placed Mr. O'Brien in nomination, took occasion to reply to Congressman W. Bourke Cockran's speech in Tammany Hall the night before. The Senator said that Cockran, after going through President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance as with a fine tooth comb, could only find two things to object to, one being his attitude on the service pension, and the other on the Panama Canal treaty. He said that Mr. Cockran admitted in this that the Democratic Party had no case against President Roosevelt.

O'Brien's nomination was out of the way at 2:15 o'clock. Otto Kelsey of Livingston was renominated for Controller at 2:17, and then came the nomination of John Wallenmeier of Erie for State Treasurer in the record time of half a minute, Chairman Malby declaring him the nominee at 2:17½ o'clock. Congressman James W. Wadsworth placed Mr. Kelsey in nomination, and Mr. Timmerman of Buffalo named Mr. Wallenmeier.

It took three and one-half minutes to nominate Julius M. Mayer of New York for Attorney General, Assemblyman Josiah T. Newcomb making the presentation.

Wages Highest on Record.

The Republican Party's safe guidance is evidenced by the fact that during the administrations of McKinley and Roosevelt wages reached the highest point on record and prosperity superseded adversity which resulted from Democratic politics just reaffirmed at St. Louis.

We commend the firm resolution, abiding common sense, and strict integrity, unmoved by assaults from enemies or pleas from friends, with which Gov. Odell has conducted the affairs of this State and safeguarded, with zealous care, its vast and complicated interests.

We believe in the policy of raising revenues for State maintenance by indirect taxation. The effective measures of the Republican Party in this direction constitute the greatest step taken in the history of our Commonwealth for the relief of taxpayers. If any taxes heretofore levied, especially such as affect the savings of the people, appear to be unjust or unnecessary we favor such revision of the tax laws as will equitably correct such condition.

The people of the State have decreed that the canals shall be improved, and we reaffirm the position heretofore taken by the party in regard to good roads, for the construction of which the State has already paid or appropriated over $3,250,000.

More Money for Schools.

We believe in increasing the effectiveness of the school system, greater appropriations for common schools, and the extension of free tuition in high schools, and we favor the still further building up of the State's educational facilities wherever practicable.

We claim credit for the legislation which unified the State educational departments and completely removed State educational activities from the field of politics.

We believe in maintaining the laws for safeguarding the interests of labor as well as of capital, and in extending such laws whenever additional safeguards may be necessary.

We believe in the further purchase and preservation of forest lands in the Adirondack and Catskill Parks, by the State, and in adequate appropriations therefor.

We congratulate the people of this Commonwealth on the satisfactory condition of the State treasury.

The Legislature to be chosen this Fall will have the selection of a United States Senator. Those who believe in sound money, a protective tariff, and the Administration of President Roosevelt, will realize the need of electing a Republican majority in both branches of our Legislature. National as well as State policies are involved in the outcome of our State election, and we commend to every citizen the faithful performance of his patriotic duty.

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEES.

Records of the Candidates Selected for the State Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Frank Wayland Higgins, the Republican nominee for Governor, was born at Rushford, Allegany County, N. Y., Aug. 18, 1856.

He could never be induced to consent to be a candidate for any public office until 1893, when he was unanimously nominated for State Senator of the Fiftieth District, and was elected by a plurality of 8,046 votes over his opponent, who had the support of the Democrats, Populists, and Socialists. Senator Higgins was renominated for three successive terms without opposition, and re-elected by increased pluralities at the elections of 1896, 1898, and 1900.

He has served on various committees and was Chairman of the Finance Committee for a longer period than any other man. He was a stern enforcer of economy in the administration of the State Government.

Senator Higgins was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1888, and on a number of occasions served his city, county, and district in a representative capacity. As the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor in 1902 he received 663,689 votes and Charles N. Bulger, Democrat, 633,555.

M. Linn Bruce, the nominee for Lieutenant Governor, is a New York lawyer residing in the Twenty-first Assembly District. He was born in Delaware County, but has lived in New York for fourteen years. During this time he has served as an Assistant Commissioner of Jurors, and during the Mayoralty campaign last year was the President of the Republican County Committee. A few months ago he was a candidate for an appointment as United States District Judge with the backing of Senator Platt, but failed to get the place. On various occasions he unsuccessfully opposed Col. Abraham Gruber for the Republican leadership of the Twenty-first Assembly District.

Secretary of State John F. O'Brien, who was renominated, has not held any public office besides the one he now fills, except as a member of the Assembly representing Clinton County in the lower branch of the State Legislature.

Otto Kelsey, candidate for Controller, was appointed Deputy Controller of State in place of Nathan L. Miller by Gov. Odell in November of last year, the office to end on Dec. 31, 1904. He was born in Rochester on Nov. 11, 1852. He first held office as Supervisor of Geneseo, his present home. In 1893 he was elected to the Assembly from Livingston County and remained a member until 1902. He was defeated as a candidate for a County Judgeship prior to his appointment as First Deputy Controller to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Theodore P. Gilman of New York. During the sessions of 1900, 1901, and 1902 Mr. Kelsey was Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Cities.

John Wallenmeier of Erie County, who was named for State Treasurer, comes from Tonawanda, where he is the Postmaster. He was a political follower of William C. Warren, and a leading member of Gov. Odell's "Tapeworm Club." Mr. Wallenmeier was an ardent McKinleyite in 1896, when Senator Platt had the State Convention declare for Levi P. Morton for President. Mr. Wallenmeier refused to be bound by these orders and caused a split in Erie County for McKinley. When McKinley became President he remembered Wallenmeier and gave him the Postmastership of Tonawanda.

Edgar M. Cullen of Brooklyn, nominated for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, is a Justice of the Supreme Court for the Second District of New York. He was born in Brooklyn on Dec. 4, 1843, and was graduated from Columbia University in 1860. He served with the army in the civil war. He was elected to the Supreme Court in 1880 and re-elected in 1894.

William E. Werner, nominee for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals on the Republican ticket, was born in Buffalo in 1855. He has been Clerk of the Municipal Court in Rochester and a Special County Judge and County Judge. He was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court in 1895, and since 1900 has been a Judge of the Court of Appeals. His home is in Rochester, N. Y.

Julius M. Mayer, nominee for Attorney General, was born in New York City on Sept. 5, 1865. He studied law at the Columbia Law School, and was admitted to the bar in 1886. In 1895 he was appointed counsel to the Excise Board under the administration of Mayor Strong, and later in the same administration was appointed counsel to the Building Department. In January, 1902, he was appointed by Mayor Low a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, to succeed Mr. Jerome. He was reappointed in July, 1903, for a term of ten years, but resigned the following December to resume the practice of his profession, and is now senior member of the firm of Mayer & Gilbert. Judge Mayer's service on the bench of the Children's Court in New York, over which he frequently presided, attracted wide attention. For several years he has been the Chairman of the Republican County Committee of New York.

BOOM KEOGH FOR GOVERNOR.

Friends of the Westchester Justice Urge His Name on Leaders.

The name of Justice Martin J. Keogh of Westchester has come prominently forward in the past few days as a candidate for the Governorship on the Democratic ticket. It is believed by the Justice's friends that he will make a strong candidate, and his popularity in the State is urged as one of the strongest reasons why he should head the ticket.

While Justice Keogh has taken no active measures in the matter, his friends will urge his claims to the leaders and before the convention next week. There was some talk last night that he was the "dark horse" of which so much has been heard in the past few days.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

Roosevelt and Odell Eulogized—Advice to "Let Well Enough Alone."

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The platform adopted by the convention is as follows:

The Republicans of the Empire State, the home of Theodore Roosevelt, in convention assembled, fifty years after the birth of the party, congratulate the country on the splendid results of the recent elections in Oregon, Vermont, and Maine, and the inspiration they have given to the cause of Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

We repeat and confirm the pledge made to President Roosevelt by our State convention two years ago of unfaltering confidence and unwavering support. We again record our appreciation of his honesty, his wisdom, his courage, and patriotism, and of the satisfactory results of his administration, which has been one of performance unsurpassed in American history.

He has emphasized the fact that the Republican Party has made the gold standard irrevocable as long as it has control, in spite of vicious assaults by the opposing party in two successive Presidential campaigns, and its refusal to change its attitude on this question, at its recent National convention. He has fortified the policy of protection to our industries and all engaged therein. He has strengthened and enforced the laws for the proper regulation of trusts and great corporations.

Contradiction Challenged.

He has settled forever, in our favor, the Panama Canal question; opened the way for a system of National irrigation; improved our relations with the Philippines; secured justice to Cuba; extended the rural free delivery; sought peace by strengthening our resources for defense, and made our flag respected abroad as well as honored at home. In his recent admirable letter of acceptance, setting forth these facts, he has challenged contradiction—a challenge which cannot be met.

We indorse the platform of the Republican National Convention in Chicago in June last, in all its declarations, particularly those in favor of the maintenance of the gold standard and protection to American workmen and the industries by which they thrive.

We appeal for support to the common sense of those who do not believe in change for the sake of making a change and who are willing to "let well enough alone," to those who believe in the kind of protection the Republican Party has always stood for and not in the kind with which the Democratic Party, with its free trade allies, is trying to delude industrial workers.

The people appreciate that the party which formulated the protective tariff can better be entrusted with its revision, when revision becomes necessary, than a party that has never revised the tariff without endangering the welfare both of labor and capital.

The Republican Party's safe guidance is evidenced by the fact that during the administrations of McKinley and Roosevelt wages reached the highest point on record and prosperity superseded adversity which resulted from Democratic politics just reaffirmed at St. Louis.

ROOSEVELT PENSION ORDER DENOUNCED

Parker Constitution Club Holds It Unlawful.

BID FOR VETERAN VOTES

His Act Declared to be in Effect An Appropriation of the Nation's Money for His Campaign Fund.

The Parker Constitution Club of New York City, which has devoted several weeks to an investigation of alleged unlawful and unauthorized acts on the part of President Roosevelt, issued its first report yesterday, pertaining to the charges that the Executive pension order was unconstitutional. It does not criticise the wisdom or propriety of the United States pension laws, but assumes the right and duty of Congress to enact whatever system of pensions it deems proper. It considers the inquiry as to the propriety of the President's conduct in the pension matter when measured by the constitutional standards.

The report follows:

The order in question was issued on March 15, 1904, about three months before his nomination. The pertinent part is as follows:

Ordered.—(1.) In the adjudication of pension claims under said act of June 27, 1890, as amended: it shall be taken and considered as an evidential fact, if the contrary does not appear and if all other legal requirements are properly met, that, when a claimant has passed the age of sixty-two years, he is disabled one-half in ability to perform manual labor and is entitled to be rated at $6 per month; after sixty-five years, at $8 per month; after sixty-eight years, at $10 per month, and after seventy years, at $12 per month.

That an executive act of the President is unconstitutional where authority for it cannot be found stated in the United States Constitution is not to be disputed. On that head we need only refer the reader to our preliminary general report. The authority asserted for issuing the order in question is the clause in Article II., Section 3, which provides that the President "shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

No Power to Nullify.

Of this clause the Supreme Court of the United States, which is the authority to construe the Constitution, said in the case of Kendal vs. United States (reported in 12 Peters, 524,) that: "To contend that the obligation imposed on the President to see the laws faithfully executed implies a power to forbid their execution is a novel construction of the Constitution and entirely inadmissible." This is but a judicial statement of what is common sense. If, under the guise of carrying out a statute of Congress, President Roosevelt nullifies one of its provisions, he is guilty on the charge.

The order in question is practically an announcement that the department will give a pension certificate to every applicant sixty-two years old. Such was the evident intention of the Executive, as it is beyond intelligent supposition that anybody sixty-two years old who applied for a pension would trouble the department with affirmative proof that he was not disabled. Hence the question of the constitutionality of the President's act depends upon whether the statute of Congress granted pensions because a man was sixty-two. If not, the order becomes a faithless departure from the law instead of a faithful execution of it.

The following extract from the statutes in point will be clear to every one. We append to our report the full text of the statutes, to show the accuracy and fairness of our extracts, as in a matter of this importance nothing is to be taken for granted.

On Jan. 29, 1887, Congress had enacted as follows, regarding pensions for those in the Mexican war:

Section 1. That the Secretary of the Interior be and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension rolls the names of the surviving officers and enlisted men * * * who, being duly enlisted, actually served sixty days * * * in Mexico * * * in the war with that nation or were actually engaged in a battle in said war, * * * provided that every such officer, enlisted man * * * who is or may become sixty-two years of age or who is or may become subject to any disability or dependency equivalent to some cause prescribed or recognized by the pension laws of the United States as a sufficient reason for the allowance of a pension, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act.

Section 3. That before the name of any person shall be placed on the pension roll under this act proof shall be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe of the right of the applicant to a pension.

By this act Congress, in express terms, pensioned every survivor of the Mexican war either sixty-two years old or disabled. It was passed just thirty-nine years after that war was concluded. Every soldier who was at least twenty-three years old when the war ended was thus expressly within its terms, and was intended so to be. Within five years after the act had taken effect every soldier of the war was within its terms, whether disabled or not, because he must have "become sixty-two years of age."

Civil War Pension Act.

Three years after this statute Congress passed a statute relating to the civil war, which is the act mentioned in President Roosevelt's order. It provided:

That all persons who served ninety days or more in the military or naval service of the United States during the late war of the rebellion and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, and who are now or who may hereafter be suffering from any mental or physical disability or disabilities of a permanent character, not the result of their own vicious habits, which so incapacitates them from the performance of manual labor as to render them unable to earn a support, shall upon making due proof of the fact, according to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may provide, be placed upon the list of invalid pensioners of the United States, and be entitled to receive a pension not exceeding $12 per month, and not less than $6 per month, proportioned to the degree of inability to earn a support.

Observe the difference between the two statutes. Regarding the Mexican war, Congress prescribed that any one who was sixty-two years old or disabled should receive a pension. In regard to the civil war, Congress prescribed that any one who was so permanently disabled as to render him unable to earn support by the performance of manual labor should receive a pension, but no pension was granted for age.

Fourteen years after the civil war statute was passed, the President's pension order was issued from the office of the Secretary of the Interior. The period that had then elapsed after the civil war was about the same as the period elapsed after the Mexican war, when Congress gave a pension for age to survivors of that war. The time had arrived for Congress to do the same thing, if such was the will of Congress, for survivors of the civil war. No such statute was enacted. Nevertheless, the President by an executive order, deliberately and arbitrarily substituted the terms of the Mexican war act for the terms of the civil war act, when the two were diametrically different upon the statute book of the United States. His order nullified the requirement of incapacity expressly placed by Congress in the civil war statute, except so far as it relates to men under sixty-two. Without further discussion it becomes manifest that this was an intentional departure from the law, and that the charge should be sustained.

Much has appeared in the public prints about the order of the Pension Bureau issued under Mr. Cleveland's Administration. This order prescribed seventy-five years of age. We need not discuss the question whether that order was justifiable; certainly it was unimportant. The difference between that order and the later one, for which it serves as an excuse, is that the former was in accordance with common knowledge, while the latter was both against common knowledge and against the construction which Congress had put upon its own acts. At sixty-two a man may be, and usually is, able to perform manual labor; at seventy-five he is not. And Congress had recognized the former fact when in the Mexican war statute it gave a pension to men either sixty-two or disabled. The first order may be justified as a legitimate rule of evidence for the convenience of the department, and within the scope of the statute. The second was the creation of a new class of pensioners, whom Congress had not pensioned.

The usurpation of legislative power by President Roosevelt is humorously illustrated in the words of Gen. Black at the recent encampment of the Grand Army, when he thanked the President for what he had done and urged his hearers to use their influence that a law might be passed to the same effect.

Extent of Usurpation.

To consider next the extent of this Executive usurpation. Almost every veteran of the civil war is to-day at least sixty-two years old. The very last will become so within the next four or five years. The actual effect of the order has been to appropriate at least $72 per annum of the Nation's money to every human being who was connected with a regiment for three months in the civil war. The total amount it will never be possible to measure in exact dollars and cents. Figure up the number of men now living who were connected with the army or navy for ninety days in the civil war and who are not disabled, give each of them $72 a year as a minimum, or $144 a year as a maximum, and we have the sum tottal. Estimates have been made at $12,000,000 per annum. The Pension Commissioner has insisted that $5,400,000 per annum will be a more approximate figure.

It seems that there are about 182,000 survivors of the war not on the pension rolls prior to this Executive order. If all these were to be placed on the rolls, the result would be about $15,000,000 per annum. If the chosen Representatives of the United States in Congress assumbled had desired to appropriate $15,000,0000 per annum, or any other sum, to such a class of pensioners—men exactly as well able to earn their living as anybody else sixty-two years of age—that was their right. It was not the President's.

In this aspect of the case President Roosevelt deliberately disregarded Article I., Section 9, of the Constitution, providing: "No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law." When Congress appropriates money for the payment of pensions, it provides for pensioners who have been placed on the rolls "under the provisions of any and all acts of Congress." The President is prohibited from authorizing a dollar to be paid out of such appropriation except to a pensioner created by law.

If Congress authorizes the building of one battleship and five cruisers and then appropriates a lump sum for construction purposes, no one would pretend that the President could use the money for the construction of five battleships and one cruiser. So, if Congress appropriates a lump sum for the payment of pensions, and if the existing statute authorizes the payment of pensions to those who can establish that they are "suffering from any mental or physical disability or disabilities of a permanent character," "which so incapacitates them from the performance of manual labor as to render them unable to earn a support," the President is forbidden by the Constitution to expend the money thus appropriated for the payment of pensions to one who is not "suffering from any mental or physical disability," or who is not incapacitated "from the performance of manual labor," or is not "unable to earn a support."

Congress did not authorize the appropriation of pensions because soldiers of the civil war were aged sixty-two, and the honoring of pension certificates obtained on that score by President Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury is an illegal license by which that official permits the money of the Nation to be abstracted.

It is a fair inference that the action of President Roosevelt, three months before his nomination, was a bid for the pension vote. If Judge Parker should to-day announce that his Pension Commissioner, when appointed, would give a certificate to anybody who was sixty years old, and that his Secretary of the Treasury would honor the certificate, the reception of such a pronunciamento by the people of this country may well be imagined. Why, then, should they receive differently the order of March last?

Indeed, the President's act is far more serious, because he has, without warrant of law and seizing the opportunity of office, in effect appropriated the Nation's money for his own campaign fund.

We conclude that the order was unconstitutional, lawless, and most reprehensible.

Reports to be issued later on will deal with other specific instances wherein the club believes that the President has acted unlawfully. It considers itself in duty bound to bring such cases clearly to the attention of the people of the country, and particularly the members of the bar.

Several committees have been appointed to look after the work of the club, one of the more important being a Committee of Supervision consisting of William B. Hornblower, Wheeler H. Peckham, John G. Milburn, John G. Carlisle, and Adrian H. Joline.

PARKER INDEPENDENT CLUBS.

Chain of Organizations in Many States Has Been Started.

A movement to establish a chain of Parker Independent Clubs has been started. These clubs are designed to give expression to independent sentiment favorable to Judge Parker, and will receive as members Independents, Parker Republicans, and Democrats who are recognized as representing independent sentiment and tendencies. The preliminary work has been in progress for about two weeks, and the belief is expressed that the evidence indicates a strong independent sentiment favorable to the election of Judge Parker.

In New York City a preliminary enrollment is now in progress. The office of the Parker Independent Clubs is at 59 Pine Street, to which address communications may be sent. The Executive Committee, to which from time to time others will be added, is as follows:

OLNEY NOT A CANDIDATE.

Positively Refuses to Run for Governor of Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—At a meeting of the Democratic State Committee here this afternoon to arrange for the Fall campaign, both William L. Douglas of Brockton and Charles S. Hamlin of Boston were favored for the nomination for Governor. No vote was taken on the matter.

The consideration of the question of the next Gubernatorial nominee was made necessary because Col. William A. Gaston, who twice has been the party's candidate, unequivocally announced his determination not to run this year. A feature of the meeting was the announcement that Richard Olney, whose nomination for Governor had been urged in political circles, had absolutely declined to become the nominee under any circumstances.

COURT DECLINES TO HEAR CASE

La Follette's Brother-in-Law Leaves Bench at Hearing of Wisconsin Fight.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 15.—Justice Siebecker of the Supreme Court to-day announced that as the Republican faction fight now before the Supreme Court had developed features that involved the personal and political fortunes of one of his relatives, (La Follette being his brother-in-law), he had decided it was not proper for him to participate in the case. He left the bench immediately after he made this announcement.

Argument then proceeded along the lines laid down yesterday, counsel for the La Follette faction maintaining that the State had created a proper tribunal to decide political questions, and that the courts had nothing to do with the matter.

Taggart in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 15.—Thomas Taggart, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, arrived in Indianapolis this afternoon from New York. Mr. Taggart refused to make any statement regarding the establishing of Western headquarters. "I intend to make a survey of the situation in Indiana before making any statement," said Mr. Taggart.

HILL GOES DOWN TOWN TO CALL UPON JEROME

Both Silent Later About the Governorship.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY MAY RUN

A Whirlwind Campaign the Probable Result of Such a Nomination—Jerome's Views on Issues Sought.

When questioned on Wednesday in regard to his attitude toward the prospective nomination of himself for Governor District Attorney Jerome replied: "I will not look up any one. If they want me they've got to come to me."

Shortly before noon yesterday ex-Senator David B. Hill, who reasonably might be expected to have a word or two to say regarding the Gubernatorial nomination, walked into the Criminal Courts Building and sent his card to the District Attorney. The Democratic State leader and Mr. Jerome remained in conference for more than an hour and a half. When it was over neither would say a word by way of throwing light on the purport of their talk.

When ex-Senator Hill walked out of the building he left behind him an air of suppressed excitement. Following closely upon the arrival of Judge Parker in the city and on the very eve of the conference of Democratic leaders in this city for the purpose of discussing a candidate for Governor, the visit of ex-Senator Hill was considered as of extraordinary significance, and it was rumored right away that Mr. Hill had called to offer Mr. Jerome the nomination.

A friend of Senator Hill explained last night that while this presumption, perhaps, was somewhat premature, inasmuch as all the leaders had not yet been heard from, he would not be surprised if they should make Mr. Jerome their choice for Democracy's banner bearer in the coming State campaign.

From all appearances, the Democratic leader came to the Criminal Courts Building an unheralded and altogether unexpected visitor. It was a few minutes before 12 o'clock when he made his appearance, accompanied by his private secretary, Alfred E. Bryan. Entering an elevator, he was taken to the third floor. Mr. Hill was recognized by several persons in the building, and the news of his visit spread like wildfire, with the result that the anteroom of Mr. Jerome's office soon was crowded with persons who gathered there to await the outcome of the call.

As Mr. Jerome came hurrying up the corridor and saw Senator Hill, he held out his hand and said warmly:

"Why, good morning, Governor; I am very glad to see you. How are you this morning?" Mr. Hill shook the District Attorney's hand cordially. The two linked arms and walked toward the inner sanctum of Mr. Jerome, and the next moment the door of the office was closed.

It was an hour and a half later when the door opened again and ex-Senator Hill appeared, accompanied by Mr. Jerome, who bowed him out. Mr. Hill was asked whether he was the bearer of a message to the District Attorney offering him the nomination for Governor.

"I cannot talk about the conference," said the ex-Senator, "but isn't this a fine day?"

"Did you discuss politics with Mr. Jerome, or was your call in reference to private business?"

"It is a fine day."

"Do you think Mr. Jerome would make a good candidate for Governor?"

"It is a fine day."

Mr. Hill repeated his assertion regarding the weather in response to other questions along the same lines. When pressed for a direct reply he said:

"Gentlemen, I can not and and will not talk regarding what transpired between Mr. Jerome and me." Asked whether there would be any further conference during the day, the Democratic leader said:

"This is a very nice place, but I would not advise you to wait for me."

Mr. Hill then left the building.

A few minutes later Mr. Jerome came out, his face all wreathed in smiles. When the reporters clustered about him preparatory to asking questions, Mr. Jerome favored them with the following selection:

I don't care for Wurzburger beer;
I would rather have gasoline.

Pressed for some information as to what was discussed between him and Senator Hill, Mr. Jerome jokingly replied:

"Can't two statesmen get together and discuss affairs of vast public interest without emissaries of the press butting in and wanting to know what it is all about? I consider this an intrusion into our private matters."

Mr. Jerome then averred that the fine weather Senator Hill had just been telling the newspaper men about had given him an immense appetite, and that the most pressing business before him was to satisfy the cravings of the inner man.

Mr. Jerome said he could not discuss in any shape, form, or manner what had occurred between himself and ex-Senator Hill.

"Do you expect to see Judge Parker during his present stay in the city?" Mr. Jerome was asked.

"I have not been invited to see Judge Parker, and I do not expect to see him. I have no appointment with anybody on God's footstool, to tell the truth."

Mr. Jerome remained in the same happy frame of mind throughout the afternoon, a portion of which was spent in conferences with his private secretary, Mr. Hodder, and Chief Clerk Henneberry, who was the manager of Mr. Jerome's campaign when he ran for District Attorney.

While, as far as any utterance from Mr. Jerome and his friends is concerned, the attitude of the District Attorney toward the nomination is a matter of conjecture, it was learned from a source close to those who have the active management of the campaign that Mr. Jerome would accept the nomination if it were tendered to him. The visit of Senator Hill, it was said, was largely for the purpose of learning Mr. Jerome's views on the various issues in the National and State campaign and toward State issues to be defined in the platform to be adopted at Saratoga next week.

HALL WITHDRAWS CANDIDACY.

Does Not Want the Democratic Nomination for Controller.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 15.—It is stated here that Mayor George Hall of Ogdensburg, who all along has been a candidate for the nomination for Controller on the Democratic State ticket, has withdrawn from the race, and has also resigned from the State Committee.

It is stated that Mr. Hall, to whom the Controllership nomination had been practically offered, decided instead to be a candidate for Secretary of State, because his health would not stand the work and worry of the Controllership. When told that it was too late, and that he must take the nomination for Controller or nothing, he decided to withdraw from politics entirely.

Westchester Democratic Delegates.

The Democrats of Westchester County have sent the following delegates to the convention at Saratoga: First District, E. W. Fisk and R. G. Merritt; Second District, F. Sheimer, J. G. Agar, and T. O'Neill; Third District, F. Larkin, M. Clune, and T. Green.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS NAME BLACK FOR GOVERNOR

Enthusiastic Convention Nominates Hudson County Man.

DEMAND EQUAL TAXATION

Platform's Feature a Strong Plank for Assessment of Railroad Corporations —Rivalry for Committee Jobs.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 15.—Democrats of New Jersey in State Convention to-day nominated Charles C. Black of Hudson County, a member of the State Board of Taxation, for Governor; declared unequivocally for equal taxation, and pledged the party to right the wrongs of unjust assessments and tax levies upon real estate.

The conference, with 1,070 delegates in addition to the thousands of spectators, was notable for its enthusiasm. The mention of Judge Parker's name by Mr. John R. Hardin, the Chairman, was met by an outburst of applause lasting ten minutes, and the crowd shouted itself tired over the Presidential nominee. New Jersey Democrats, especially those in the upper section of the State, who came in contact with New Yorkers think that this is the winning year. A notable instance of the spirit of the campaign is shown by the fact that the Essex delegation came down from Newark 1,000 strong, while Hudson County contributed as many more spectators.

Nearly every prominent Democrat in the State was present either as delegate or onlooker. Ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., controlled the convention in every particular, although he bowed to Robert Davis of Hudson, and acquiesced in the nomination of Mr. Black, who is not an acceptable candidate to him. The Smith influence brought William J. Thompson and the Camden delegation into line for Black as against Thompson's neighbor, Senator Thomas Ferrell.

The candidacy of the Gloucester County Senator was the only sign of friction, and his friends managed to poll 31 votes in Atlantic, 16 in Cape May, and 21 in Gloucester for him. Senator Ferrell was placed in nomination by George W. Harbert in a good speech, but his name with withdrawn after the compliment of a vote was given. This was also the case with the names of Senators Gebhard of Hunterdon and Mayor Frank Katzenbach of Trenton. Mr. Black's nomination was then practically unanimous.

The feature of the platform was the demand for equal taxation. In this connection the platform said:

We demand equal taxation of all property not used for religious, charitable, or educational purposes. The franchises of railroad and canal companies are granted by the State, and it is fair that taxes upon these privileges should be paid into the common treasury of the State. The real estate of these corporations presents no feature that justifies a separate classification as to the amount of tax to be imposed. The railroads of New Jersey are not infant industries. They are of great value to the State, but they are also of great value to their owners. To tax the vacant city lot and the unproductive farm and exempt the property of railroad and canal companies is not only unfair, but is in direct violation of the spirit of our State Constitution, which demands that property shall be taxed by uniform rules.

The Republican Party has broken every pledge of equal taxation that it has made to the people. It never gets beyond the appointment of a commission to inquire. We assert that the day of inquiry is past. The State is in possession of the facts. What inquiry is needed to demonstrate that the buildings and road beds and tracks in Atlantic and Burlington, in Essex and Hudson, and in every other county in the State should pay the same local tax that is imposed upon other real estate in these counties? Every factory, every farm, every home in New Jersey is taxed at full local rates. Why, then, should exemption of railroad property continue?

A feature of the gathering was the great anxiety to become members of the State Committee. The convention adopted a resolution making the term of State Committeemen four years hereafter. The new committee, of which William B. Gourley will most probably be elected Chairman, is: Atlantic, William A. Faunce; Bergen, Luther A. Campbell; Burlington, E. F. Wills; Camden, William H. Davis; Cape May, Matthew Jefferson; Cumberland, Samuel Iredell; Essex, James R. Nugent; Gloucester, E. E. Grosscup; Hudson, William C. Heppenheimer; Hunterdon, James N. Piddock; Mercer, Michael Hurley; Middlesex, Oliver Kelly; Monmouth, David S. Crater; Morris, W. W. Cutler; Ocean, C. L. Rogers; Passaic, Louis T. Braun; Salem, Robert Cynne; Somerset, D. S. Childs; Sussex, Louis J. Iliff; Union, Peter Egenolf; Warren, Johnston Cornish.

HIGGINS PLEASES ROOSEVELT.

President Has Confidence in Nominee—Did Not Interfere with Choice.

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 15.—President Roosevelt expressed himself this evening as pleased that Mr. Higgins had been named for Governor. Mr. Higgins was Chairman of the Finance Committee of the State Senate while Mr. Roosevelt was Governor. Their relations were very close, Mr. Roosevelt relying upon him in many ways, and throughout their association the President grew to have a steadily increasing respect for Mr. Higgins's character and ability.

It was stated here to-day that persistent ante-convention efforts were made to draw President Roosevelt into the contest over the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, but that he has maintained that it would be improper for him to offer suggestions, and therefore refrained from participating in any way.

The President, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, took a horseback ride this morning. Returning, the President, with Secretary Loeb, disposed of a mass of public business. He had no engagements to-day to receive visitors.

SHOES for Everybody

With Savings On All

No one ever found a mean shoe in a Wanamaker Sale, no matter how little the price. We never bought shoes that were made up cheaply to be sold in a sale.

While it is true that the best offerings of this Sale are shoes made up for us during the Summer, they are from one of our regular factories, and have been made up to the full standard of shoes made to be sold at much higher prices. There has been no cheapening in either the quality of the leather or workmanship. The exceedingly low prices have been secured by reason of using the dull times in factory and allowing an exceptionally close margin of profit for ourselves.

This produces shoes that are spic-span, new, in the present season's styles, in full range of sizes, that sell at a third below their real value.

There are other groups in the Sale where the sizes are broken, and the prices are still more radically reduced.

There is something in such a great collection as this sure to suit every one who is needing shoes:

Women's Patent Coltskin Shoes at $2.20

Lace style; square cut vamps with dull tops; oak leather soles welted and stitched. Sold for less than maker's cost.

Kidskin Lace and Button Shoes, with kid and patent leather tips; lasts are pretty, and heels the graceful Cuban style.

Box Calfskin Lace; stout business or school shoes; full round toe, square military heels.

These shoes are all made to the rigid WANAMAKER specifications, and are practically as good as shoes that sell regularly at a dollar more.

Men's Patent Leather Shoes at $1.90

Just here, a new shoe—single oak soles, welted and flexible; soft patent leather with dull tops; all sizes, but only broad widths. A neat dress shoe. Plenty of the box calf and kidskin shoes are here also.

Then in full supply

Women's Shoes at $1.90 a Pair

Kidskin, button; plain common-sense toes.

Kidskin, button and lace; kid tips, military heels.

Patent leather, button and lace; medium and light weight, slim last, Cuban heels.

Kidskin dress shoes; patent leather tips; neat military heels.

All made with oak-tanned soles, full vamps and silk stitching.

Women's Shoes at $2.60 a Pair

Patent leather, lace; kidskin, button and lace, in ten styles. Hardly any shoe-need that you cannot fill from this lot. And they are fairly worth a third more than $2.60.

Boys' Shoes at $2 a Pair

Box calf and kidskin, made of selected skins; with vamps that run under the tips, and with oak leather welted soles that wear well; sizes 13 to 5½.

Boys' Shoes at $1.30 and $1.50 a Pair

Boys' Shoes at $1.20 a Pair

For the little chaps: made exactly like the regular boys' shoes, only with spring heels; box calf and kid; sizes 9 to 13½.

Girls' Shoes at $1.60 a Pair

Firm kidskin, made with oak-tanned soles, welted and stitched; sizes 11 to 2. Smaller sizes, $1.30.

Girls' Shoes at $1.20

Button and lace styles; stout kidskin, not fine, but of good quality; oak leather soles, sewed by machine; sizes 11 to 2. Smaller sizes at $1.

And this special group:

PEACE TERMS JAPAN IS WILLING TO GRANT

International Syndicate to Run Manchurian Railway.

INDEMNITY OF $500,000,000

Russia to Hand Over All Her Ships in Chinese Waters—Japanese Advance from Yen-Tai.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 16.—The Daily Telegraph's Tien-Tsin correspondent telegraphs that he hears from a trustworthy source that the Japanese Foreign Minister has issued a circular announcing that it is Japan's intention to turn Port Arthur, when it is captured, and the whole of the Liao-Tung Peninsula over to the Chinese, who, the correspondent understands, will declare Port Arthur an open port.

"On the same authority," The Daily Telegraph's correspondent says, "I am told that Japan will be prepared to entertain peace proposals after she has taken Mukden and Sakhalin on the following basis:

"First, that an international syndicate take over the Manchurian Railway and run it as a strictly commercial enterprise; second, that Russia pay £100,000,000 indemnity, and, third, that Russia is to hand over all of her ships in Chinese water to Japan.

"Japan would be prepared to lease Sakhalin to an American company for £5,000,000."

ST. PETERSBURG, Friday, Sept. 16.—Gen. Kuropatkin telegraphed yesterday that strong detachments of Japanese infantry had advanced three miles north of Yen-Tai station.

Viceroy Alexieff has forwarded to the Czar a dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, (commander of the military forces at Port Arthur.)

The dispatch, which is dated Sept. 14, says the Japanese are actively constructing fortifications on Samhon Mountain and at other points, and that they continue to bombard the forts and harbor. On Sept. 2 they threw 250 shells into the town. During the bombardment the Japanese squadron remained the whole time in view of the fortress.

The Japanese, the dispatch adds, have issued a proclamation to the Russian troops demanding their surrender. Gen. Stoessel sees in this proclamation an indication of the enemy's consciousness of failure.

On Sept. 3, the General says, the enemy received reinforcements on the west front of the fortress.

MUKDEN, Sept. 15.—The panicky conditions prevailing immediately after the battle of Liao-Yang have entirely disappeared from the Russian army now concentrated here. Business has been resumed and the city is quiet. The Russo-Chinese Bank has reopened.

The failure of the Japanese to follow up the advantage gained at Liao-Yang has caused surprise here. An independent authority who accompanied the rear guard from the positions south of Liao-Yanag to Mukden says that this failure is accounted for by the fact that the Japanese lost 40,000 killed and wounded in one day's fighting, and that, besides, they were too tired to continue the advance.

The Japanese are reported to be intrenching around Liao-Yang, and to have repaired the bridge over the Tai-Tse River.

Twelve thousand soldiers wounded at Liao-Yang have been treated at the Red Cross Hospital here.

CRITICISM SURPRISES JAPAN.

Wonders Why Greater Victory at Liao-Yang Was Expected.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—Leading Japanese journals are much surprised by the change in sentiment which, it is reported, has been produced in England by the news of the Liao-Yang battle. They observe that Japan is fighting, not to win the applause of the nations, but to secure her own existence and the peace of the East. Therefore she is not greatly concerned over the character of the estimates of foreign peoples, but she is deeply interested in the sentiment of England, her ally, to whom she owes so much.

Consequently, it is said, it becomes the duty of Japan to consider why the prospects of the war are no longer regarded by the British with the same confidence as previously.

The prime purpose of Japan in the recent battle was, it is observed, to drive the Russians out of Liao-Yang, which is the richest town in Manchuria, the chief emporium for local supplies and foodstuffs, and the principal strategical base. Therefore Russia steadily concentrated forces there in increasing numbers, constructed strong fortifications, and showed an unmistakable intention of converting Liao-Yang into a permanent base. Gen. Kuropatkin announced that he hoped to make a successful stand there and promised the Czar that he would fight a decisive battle from that position.

Not only were the Russians expelled after many days of hard fighting with a loss of at least 25,000 men, but they were also compelled to burn and abandon ammunition and provisions in such quantities that to make good the loss will demand several months' work on the Siberian Railway.

Thus, it is declared, the strategical, material, and moral consequences of the battle are most serious. It is true that the victory would have been more signal had the Russians been enveloped and annihilated, but such a result could not reasonably be expected when the forces were nearly equal and the Russians had the enormous advantage of a position deliberately chosen and fortified by many months of labor.

All this, it is remarked, is unquestionably appreciated by thoughtful Englishmen. Nevertheless London dispatches suggest that, although Gen. Kuropatkin was driven out of a valuable position and signally defeated, yet British faith in Japanese strategy has been shaken and the final issue of the war is considered more doubtful.

It is surmised by the press here that it is not English opinion that has changed, but the tone of the war correspondents, who are thought to be dissatisfied because they have not obtained larger facilities. It is admitted that Japanese officialdom has not shown the highest tact in the treatment of correspondents, some of whom, nevertheless, have retained undiminished respect for the justice and impartiality of the authorities, perceiving that individual aims must be subordinated to national interests.

Others, however, are gradually becoming inimical, and have telegraphed statements and appreciations which cannot possibly have been based on actual observation, but must necessarily have been founded on hearsay, colored by prejudice.

The Japanese journals express their firm belief that the English Nation will not allow these accidents to warp its judgment and undermine its confidence.

ALEXIEFF REPORTS VICTORIES.

Crews of Japanese Fishing Schooners Annihilated Near Kamchatka.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 15.—The Emperor has received the following from Viceroy Alexieff, dated Sept. 14:

"A dispatch from Yakutsk, (Eastern Siberia,) dated Aug. 13, said the Kommander Islands (off the coast of Kamchatka) had been besieged by Japanese and British schooners and steamers up to July 28. Two of these schooners and the steamers were armed with guns. In driving them off ten Japanese were killed and many wounded. We sustained no loss.

"Near Kamchatka, five Japanese fishing schooners have been burned. Their crews were annihilated.

"The Japanese announced the annexation of the territory and proclaimed it a Japanese protectorate. They were subsequently captured by 120 Russian reserves.

"Kamchatka remains true to her old traditions. The inhabitants have taken up arms and are ready to shed their blood for their faith, their Czar, and their Fatherland."

The Kommander Islands are the islands for the protection of which against depredatory expeditions arrangements were made by Russia with Great Britain and the United States.

It is not supposed that the affair reported by the Viceroy will lead to a diplomatic incident.

MINE SINKS A BRITISH SHIP.

Sailing Vessel Destroyed Off Port Arthur—Only One Person Saved.

NAGASAKI, Sept. 15.—A British sailing vessel, supposed to have been the bark Lucia, struck a mine recently off Port Arthur. Only one person of those on board of her was rescued.

It is considered probable that the vessel was trying to run the blockade.

The recent movements of the British bark Lucia are not given in the available shipping registers.

The Lucia (formerly the Maria Fidelia) was built at Sunderland, England, in 1868, and was owned by N. E. A. Moller of Shanghai. She was of 640 tons net register.

ACCIDENT TO RAINBOW.

Cornelius Vanderbilt's 70-Footer Sprung Boom on Crossing Line.

An accident to Cornelius Vanderbilt's sloop Rainbow at the start stopped the match race of the seventy-footers yesterday. As the Rainbow was crossing the line the main sheet slipped from the bit and let the sail off with a run. The boom struck the backstay and was sprung, so the Rainbow was put out of the race. The Virginia, the only other starter, at once came up in the wind and returned to her moorings.

When R. A. C. Smith's steam yacht Privateer, with the Regatta Committee of the New York Yacht Club aboard, entered Hempstead Harbor, about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a gale from the northwest was sweeping across Long Island Sound. The Virginia, under topsail and jib, from City Island, preceded her into the harbor. The Rainbow was anchored near the west shore, and the Yankee tugged at her moorings behind the breakwater on the east shore, but neither showed any signs of making sail. The Sound was frosted with whitecaps and the coasting schooners were scudding along under scant canvas. The Virginia ran alongside of the Rainbow, and both began to make sail. The former put two reefs in her mainsail, but the latter spread the whole cloth. They came for the line without topsails, and with staysails up in stops, while the Yankee lay quietly at anchor.

The starting signal was given at 2:10, and the Rainbow went over the line 50 seconds later. Just then the accident happened. The Virginia crossed 51 seconds after the Rainbow and speedily ranged up alongside of her. As soon as the Virginia's owner, W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., learned the nature of the accident to his competitor he chivalrously abandoned the race.

The Rainbow was towed back to City Island by Cornelius Vanderbilt's steam yacht Mirage. She will ship the Mineola's boom and the match races will be sailed next week.

ALBERTO WON AT READVILLE.

New York Trotter Defeated the Favorite in Unfinished 2:14 Race.

READVILLE, Mass., Sept. 15.—Considering the immense downpour of rain in the morning, the Readville track was in good shape for the races this afternoon. Sonata was a big favorite for the unfinished 2:14 trotting event from Tuesday, but the New York gelding, Alberto, proved a surprise by taking both to-day's heats and the race. Grace Bond won the colt race handily, only losing the second heat by a break at the distance flag, when it looked as though she was going easily in the lead. She was the favorite.

The 2:14 pacing class was closely contested, the judges having much difficulty in separating the leading horses at the wire in two of the heats. Barnetta B., the winner, was the second choice. Euxenite had little trouble in taking first money in the 2:18 trotting event, much to the delight of the form players. The 2:12 trotting race was left unfinished on account of darkness. Invader was favorite. Both of the heats decided were productive of thrilling finishes between three of the foremost horses. Summary:

WEST INDIAN CYCLONE WORKS WIDE HAVOC

City Suffers Severely in Early Morning Downpour.

SHIPPING DAMAGED WORST

Schooners Collide in Lower Bay, and Shore Strewn with Wrecks—New Jersey Feels Effects.

What Local Forecaster Emery calls a West Indian cyclone, which had joined forces way down the coast somewhere with a full-grown lake storm headed eastward, arrived in town early yesterday morning and stayed for a couple of hours or so, smashing in plate glass windows, demolishing trees, and playing all sorts of havoc with telephone, telegraph, and electric light wires. In the harbor shipping of all kinds suffered severely, and daybreak found the near-by coasts strewn with small craft.

At the Flatiron Building, at Broadway and Twenty-third Street, the big show windows of the cigar store on the ground floor of that building were smashed and cigars, tobacco, and smokers' novelties valued at $4,000 were blown into the street.

Harlem suffered quite as much as other parts of the city. Almost all the windows of Public School No. 5, at One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street and Edgecombe Avenue, were broken in on the west side of the building, the rain pouring in and flooding the floors.

Brooklyn suffered severely by the storm, streets and cellars being flooded, buildings damaged, fences, trees, and poles blown down and traffic seriously interfered with in all parts of the Borough. Several houses were unroofed by the gale.

The fashionable, Heights neighborhood was roused from its slumber shortly after 4 o'clock by a terrific crash, caused by the partial unroofing of the house of Dr. James O'Connell at 159 Remsen Street, two doors from the house of Hugh McLaughlin. The wind had ripped up the tin on the roof, and after turning it over until it had formed a huge roll had hurled the mass over into the street. Three houses in Degraw Street, near Van Brunt, were also partially unroofed by the wind.

The lower harbor presented the appearance of a ships' graveyard yesterday morning. Early light revealed small craft of every description on the beaches, while just outside of Sandy Hook the masts of the schooner Hattie V. Kelsey, standing out of the water, showed where she had sunk, after having been in collision with the three-masted schooner Hattie H. Benedict.

The small freight steamer Eagle, which plies between New York and South Norwalk, Conn., was beaten ashore at Long Neck Point, near Norwalk, where she pounded so hard that her seams opened and she filled with water. At Oyster Bay a big lumber-laden schooner bound for New York was wrecked about a mile north of Centre Island. When day dawned the crew of four men were seen from shore clinging to the wreck. Rear Commodore W. J. Matheson of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club put out in his launch and rescued them.

The 65-foot sloop yacht Spindrift, belonging to Durham Wheeler, Rear Commodore of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, was driven onto the meadows at Oyster Bay, but not badly damaged. The owner, his wife, and daughter were rescued after a hard night on the yacht.

The yachts anchored in the cove just in front of the Atlantic Yacht Club at Coney Island Point suffered severely and four of them went ashore. The 50-foot sloop Orion, belonging to T. F. Buck, broke her hawser during the storm and drove ashore directly in front of the clubhouse. She struck the breakwater and tore away her bowsprit. Her owner, his wife, and two children were aboard, and when the vessel struck the crew grabbed Mrs. Buck and the children and managed to get them ashore, though almost drowned.

In New Jersey the storm's damage was widespread. Trees were uprooted, windows smashed in scores of houses, and telephone and telegraph wires badly messed up. The service of the Public Service Corporation was crippled in several places, and it was not until well into the day yesterday that its lines were fully in operation again.

All the electric lights in Morristown were extinguished during the storm. A bridge of the Rockaway Valley Railroad was carried away near Mendham, and traffic on the road was stopped in consequence. Thousands of dollars worth of fruit was torn from the trees at Vineland, and the streets were rendered almost impassable by fallen branches. One branch crashed through a window of the Rev. A. Manship's house, and fell on the bed in which he was sleeping, but did not injure him.

The heaviest losers in Paterson will probably be the Bergen Construction Company, which is erecting the new West Street bridge. The company had the wooden false work erected for two spans, and was ready for the steel work. One arch was swept away, and the other will have to be reconstructed. The river rose rapidly to the danger point, but it fell almost as rapidly after daylight.

During the storm at Washington, N. J., the Lackawanna Railroad embankment in front of the Needham factory was badly washed and part of the high bank slid down into the street. The Shabbecong Creek overflowed its banks and the houses east of the railroad were surrounded by water several feet deep. The railroad bank near Broadway was washed out, blocking traffic on the Morris and Essex branch, from Washington to Easton, for several hours.

In the Oranges many of the finest trees were wrecked and thousands of birds were killed in Llewellyn and Hutton Parks. The mountain roads were rendered impassable until nearly midday by fallen trees and gullied roads.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 15.—Edward Leahy, a man of sixty years, was found this morning under a large tree near Market Street, almost dead from exposure. He walked from Matawan to Perth Amboy yesterday afternoon and was drenched when he reached here. He had no money, and, tired and hungry, he sat down to rest. Fatigue overcame him, and he awoke during the night with the rain falling in torrents. When discovered Leahy was unable to move. It is thought that he will recover.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The wind blew at the rate of seventy miles an hour over Westchester County during Wednesday night's storm, and did great damage to country estates of New Yorkers. On the places of John D. and William Rockefeller, in the town of Mount Pleasant, the wind uprooted many valuable trees which had been recently set out while imported shrubbery and plants were ruined. Many yachts at anchorage in Echo Bay, at New Rochelle, were damaged. A large sloop was blown on the shore of Echo Island, while a yawl and a sloop were washed on Iselin's Beach, near Hudson Park. Sound steamers and schooners had to seek shelter in Hog Island, between City Island and Hart's Island, to escape being driven on the rocky shore.

COAST STREWN WITH WRECKS.

Eight Drowned from Tug in the Delaware—Wind 100 Miles an Hour.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 15.—In the terrific storm of rain and wind early this morning the tug Israel W. Durham was swamped in the Delaware River opposite this city, and eight men were drowned. They were the Captain, four of the crew, and four employes of the American Dredging Company. A fireman and one dredging employe were saved.

The sloop John Leonard and the schooners Joseph Mulford, Millie Frank, and Henry P. Havens, and the pilot boat Edmunds are ashore near the breakwater.

According to the official record, the wind at the breakwater at 2:50 o'clock this morning blew at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

The schooner E. C. Allen, from Philadelphia for Gardiner, Me., was blown ashore, and one of her crew, Eric Clare, was killed. The Captain and the remaining five members of the crew were saved by a wrecking vessel.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—Newport was hit by a heavy wind and rain storm early to-day. The wind at one time reached the velocity of eighty miles an hour. Wires were broken down, only a single telephone line remaining. Fifteen small boats were driven ashore or damaged. The flagship Minneapolis and the Columbia and Prairie of the North Atlantic training squadron caught the full force of the gale and were obliged to let go all anchors. The vessels were not damaged.

C. K. G. Billings's Equity Makes New Record for Brunot's Island Track.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Sept. 15.—C. K. G. Billings's trotter Equity made a track record at Brunot's Island to-day in the 2:10 trot against Queen Wilkes, owned by E. E. Smathers. Equity won in two straight heats, the second being in 2:08¼. This was one quarter of a second better than the record made by E. E. Smathers's Sadie Mac last Tuesday. Six thousand people witnessed the racing to-day between horses driven by amateurs. Mr. Billings left for Chicago last night. W. P. Murray of Cleveland drove his horses.

Inaha, owned by Mr. Smathers, was first, and Murray Howe, owned by Mr. Billings, was second in the 2:14 pace. In the free-for-all pace Mr. Smathers's horse, John M., was first, and Prince Direct second. Imogene, from Mr. Billings's stable, was first in the 2:12 trot. The weather was cold, and a strong wind blew up the track all the afternoon. Summaries:

First News of Fall Fashions

It is the month of all others when dress is uppermost in "Her" mind. It is the month she has been waiting for, and the pages of her favorite magazine prove that the waiting has not been in vain. There is no use in trying to describe the fascinations of the month's fashion features. You must see the magazine itself. The colored plates are better than ever before, as we promised they would be, but here also the magazine is its own best advertisement.

A new series of interest to all music lovers begins in this number: "The Loves of Great Composers," by Gustav Kobbe. The opening article is entitled "Beethoven and His Immortal Beloved," with many illustrations, including a hitherto unpublished portrait of his "Constance."

The now-famous series on Personal Beauty by Dr. Grace Peckham Murray, deals this month with certain physical exercises for bodily symmetry and grace of carriage. These are practical articles and thousands of women all over the world are being benefited by them.

Richard Le Gallienne contributes a beautiful poem-story that ranks with the very best of the writings of this modern master of English style. It is superbly illustrated.

Christine Terhune Herrick writes an article on "Field Hockey for Girls," which is both interesting to the general reader and technically helpful to those who would enjoy this rare outdoor sport.

Lina Beard's illustrated directions for a Hallowe'en party will attract all families with children in them. It presents several novel features.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

DEMOCRATIC NEW YORK.

It is quite impossible at the present moment to say whether Mr. HIGGINS, nominated by the Republicans at Saratoga yesterday, is a strong candidate for Governor. We must wait until we see the name of the Democrat nominated to oppose him. Personally, by himself, Lieut. Gov. HIGGINS would be called a good ordinary, middling, off-year Republican candidate. In the judgment of a reputable community he ought to stand above BLACK, and of course far above ODELL, and in the political conditions which carried those two gentlemen into office, he would be elected without effort and without any particular honor or credit.

The manner in which his nomination was brought about will hurt him much; it ought to make his defeat certain. Mr. HIGGINS is not a man of sufficient amplitude to bear without visibly bending under it the frightful burden of BENJAMIN B. ODELL'S responsibility for his candidacy.

Mr. ODELL'S behavior at Saratoga offers a theme for speculation which, perhaps, would not be very profitable. If he were burning with disappointment and were full of spite, rancor, and unappeasable hates toward the chief men of his own party; if he thought the defeat of the Republicans in New York probable, and wished to make it certain; if he felt that his own career was at an end and wished to do as much harm as possible to his enemies, his procedures at Saratoga would be understandable. They might be explained on the theory that he cherished the foolish delusion that a Roosevelt wave is to sweep over the country, carrying New York certainly into the Republican column, electing HIGGINS and establishing him as the triumphant boss of the State machine of which the Governor he has nominated would be only a part. Nor is it worth while to speculate upon the nature of the quarrel between him and Senator PLATT. It may have been real, it may have been merely a simulated row gotten up for some of those inscrutable purposes which seem important to the unaccountable minds of practical politicians. Whatever the truth may be, PLATT comes out of the affair in a condition to be pitied, but we imagine the number of persons in this State who will pity him is small indeed. We fear this was Mr. WOODRUFF'S last chance at the Governorship, and it was not much of a chance at that.

The Republican Convention did the right and straightforward thing in nominating Judge CULLEN and Judge WERNER. The Democratic Convention would gain credit for itself and would undoubtedly strengthen its party by putting these names upon its own ticket. The hollowness and hypocrisy of the Republican attitude toward the canal improvement is revealed in the platform, which almost with ostentation and plainly with studied purpose refuses to approve the plan for the preservation and betterment of the canals, a plan approved and decreed by a popular majority of 300,000 votes. The platform merely says: "The people of the State have decreed that the canals shall be improved." That is all. Since the improvement of the canals has been the question before the people every Republican Governor has well understood that the counties from which his majorities came were obstinately, narrowly, and bitterly opposed to any expenditure for the keeping up of the State's great system of waterways. Mr. HIGGINS himself has a canal record without color, without courage, negative, balanced, cautious, crafty, and satisfactory to nobody. He comes from a county that is hostile to the canals. Mindful of his political welfare at home, Mr. HIGGINS has felt that the less said about the canals the better for him. As a member of the Canal Board, however, he has seemed to take an interest in the barge canal improvement, a fact which we are very glad to mention, though we fear it will not strengthen him in Cattaraugus.

He would be a very blind Democrat indeed who did not see that fortune has literally flung a great opportunity at his party. It would be madness, it would be a political crime for the Democrats to lose this State election. The people fairly ache to install a Democratic Governor at Albany, for this reason among others, that they want to mark their want of confidence in the present Republican administration. They have long been in that temper, and they will certainly give themselves the joy of putting an end to Odellism if the Democrats nominate a candidate worthy of their trust. Many names have been under discussion by the Democracy. There has been frequent mention of Col. LAMONT, of Mr. EDWARD M. SHEPARD, of DE LANCEY NICOLL, of District Attorney JEROME, of Mr. GOODYEAR of Buffalo, of Judge KEOGH, and of Mr. STANCHFIELD. Other names have been heard, but these are enough. Wise Democrats know that the party need seek no further. We have repeatedly said that in our judgment Mr. SHEPARD should be the nominee of the Democrats this year. We think he would be the strongest candidate. We feel absolutely sure that he would serve the people ably and acceptably as Governor. Why should the Democracy grovel when it may soar? Why not take measures this year to lift the party to that high plane it occupied in the days of TILDEN?

A PARTY WITH A PAST.

The tone of President ROOSEVELT'S letter pervades the platform adopted by the Republicans at Saratoga yesterday, just as it pervades all high Republican utterances this year. In them is all virtue, error, falsehood, and guile inhabit the other fellow.

This is a characteristic sentence from the Saratoga platform:

> He [the President] has emphasized the fact that the Republican Party has made the gold standard irrevocable as long as it has control, in spite of vicious assaults by the opposing party in two successive Presidential campaigns, and its refusal to change its attitude on this question at its recent National Convention.

We must remind the authors of this document that the gold standard has never been abandoned or abolished. It was in full force and effect during the years when the Republican Party was given over body and soul to the silver delusion, just as it was in full force and effect during our civil war and after, when gold was said to be at a premium, meaning thereby that our paper currency was depreciated. The act of March, 1900, established nothing; it merely made statute law conform to natural law.

But what possible guarantee can Mr. ROOSEVELT give or can the authors of this platform give that the Republican Party will not go over to silver again if severe and protracted "hard times" should visit us? Mr. ROOSEVELT was a bimetallist, that is, a silver man. Speaker CANNON was a ranting, roaring silverite. The Republican silver law of 1890 brought on the panic of 1893. It was the uprising of a horde of Populists in the strong Republican States of the West that gave Mr. BRYAN his start and reinforced him mightily in his first campaign. Those Populist Republicans have gone back to their party. They might follow some new Bryan if one arose in times of stress and panic.

It is neither to the Republican Party, many of whose present chiefs were silver men, nor to the Democratic Party, which has only just recovered from the silver madness, that the business interests of the country look to maintain the gold standard law upon the statute books. It is upon the influence and the voice and vote of all men of common sense, Democrats as well as Republicans, that the country must depend to keep itself out of the bottomless financial quagmires into which Republicans like Mr. MCKINLEY, Speaker CANNON, and President ROOSEVELT, and Democrats like Mr. BRYAN and his ardent supporters would have tumbled it neck and heels could they have had their way.

IRON TRADE REVIVAL.

Discussing the present condition of the general markets for iron and steel, The Iron Age says:

> The all-absorbing question, whether the recent open reduction in the prices of finished materials has stimulated serious buying, cannot be answered definitely as yet. With due reserve, the statement may be made that thus far the indications are not particularly favorable. There has certainly not been any rush of buying.

This probably states the facts of the case exactly, but it is the view of the moment. Obviously, it requires something more than the establishment of a parity between actual and nominal quotations to start a revival in the iron trades. But whatever the external influences operative to produce such revival, they could not have become effective as long as prices were maintained on an artificial basis and buyers were waiting for just such a cut as the result of the increasing competition of the independent concerns with those merged in the Steel Corporation and other great consolidations.

The way is now clear for a recovery of activity in iron and steel as soon as the great consuming interests recognize that the time has come to warrant purchases in proportion to the volume of their deferred requirements. That this is not far off, if not imminent, the position of the market shows. The current consumption of pig iron is markedly increasing. The foundry requirements are larger and an increased production of Bessemer pig is required. There is a good business in steel products, the volume of which is indicated by the fact that at the present time 80 per cent. of the iron-producing capacity of the Steel Corporation is utilized. This branch of its production is understood to be very closely adjusted to its current requirements for raw material. It is also significant that the lines comprised in the Harriman interest have lately placed orders for 100,000 tons of rails at the pool price. It was intended that this entire order should go to the Steel Corporation, but as the state of its order books did not permit it to promise as prompt deliveries as were needed, it was divided, and part of the order goes to the Colorado mills. These are far from disquieting conditions. As to prices, they are still a long way from "scraping bottom" for concerns well situated and equipped for a normal economy of production. There is still a margin for special discounts on export orders.

A SMALL PARK FOR THE BRONX.

The plan of the Scenic and Historic Society to have a small park established in the Bronx near the East River will meet with the approval of all who deplore the lack of forethought which has left great districts in Manhattan devoid of breathing spaces. Twelve years ago there was still land enough unincumbered north and west of Central Park to attract the serious attention of those who were pondering a great international fair, that same fair in fact which Chicago snatched from New York. The swiftness with which streets are laid out and houses thickly built appeals to the most improvident and warns us to prepare against the inevitable. The whole of the beautiful indented shore of the East River will be swallowed up by solid squares of masonry if provision is not made at once to keep certain spaces open for the public.

Small parks are boons to the people who live near them, especially to the poorer citizens who have to economize carfare. They reduce infant mortality during the Summer and offer relief to thousands who sleep in narrow rooms. To a large part of our population a distant park is no park at all, for parents cannot leave their work long enough to take their children to them, nor can they afford servants to conduct and watch over them. It is a great barbarity to allow any large tract of land to be built over without a park. And for the present the effort should be to establish many small parks with as much of elevation of view and of water front as possible according to the spot.

In the little peninsula of Hunt's Point, as in the meadows and woods which lie about the old burying ground of the Hunt family, there is an ideal location for a park, small by comparison with Central and Van Cortlandt, but large enough to form one of a series of parks along the East River. The place has literary and historical suggestions. Hither JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE and FITZ-GREENE HALLECK used to come by the land way of Harlem or by boat through Hell Gate to visit their friends, the HUNTS of Hunt's Point. Here DRAKE penned some of his sweetest youthful poems and here he begged to be laid when the disease that cut him off at twenty-five showed that it was not to be cured. DRAKE was born in New York, and in New York he died. It is fitting that the city should have a memorial of him, and what could be more suitable to a poet who loved nature than a park full of flowers and trees?

The author of "The Culprit Fay" and "The American Flag" and the musing lines on the Bronx River has waited long for public recognition of his fame, which is built on slender foundations so far as output is concerned, but evidently on more enduring foundations than many of longer career and wider popularity in their day. It is a happy inspiration of the Scenic and Historic Society to advocate a park in that spot to surround his modest monument and to be called after his name. It is to be hoped that the Municipal Government will see the rare opportunity that is offered at Hunt's Point to secure a small park with a water front and view and at the same time honor the young poet and wit who as Croaker Senior amused and mystified the little town in the columns of The Evening Post some four-score years ago. We have a Bryant and an Audubon Park, also an Irving Place; we have a monument to FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, but for the boy who wrote a little epic of fairyland unique in the English tongue, one that never fails to delight the young of heart and all admirers of beautiful simple verse, there is no tablet, no statue, no sign of public recognition, though children still learn by heart what he wrote. That indeed is a recognition, and one given to very few save the very great.

CARING FOR MONUMENTS.

Premature may be the rejoicing of esteemed contemporaries because the guardianship over Liberty Enlightening the World has been assumed by the National Government, for, while it may mean that the approaches to the big statue will be improved and possibly the elevator which ought to lift one to the head of the colossal maiden will be installed, yet in other respects the new management may be deficient.

One may observe the architecture of the Government, and, if judicious, grieve. One may be affected sadly when doing so innocent a thing as affixing a stamp, because of the ugliness of the article. One may gaze with dismay at our coins, perceiving a goddess with sour grimace, a double chin, and the back and top of her head conspicuous by their absence. And having thus close to hand the proofs of artistic imbecility at Washington, are we to suppose that the Liberty will escape, now that she has fallen into the hands of the Philistines? Will she not be scraped and sandpapered out of that fine patina of varying shades of green which the kindly fogs and rains, the willing winds, slowly, year by year, bearing sulphurous fumes from Bayonne on their bosom, have drawn over her majestic face and form? Some army officer trained to watch that sword belts shine and buckles are burnished will fall upon the Maid of Sulphury Mists and exalt his horn because he has ruined the beauty of weathered bronze with putzpomade.

Every now and then there is an irruption of letters to the press on the subject of cleaning the bronze statues in Central Park; but if the writers realized into what hands the cleansing of these bronzes are likely to fall they would not stir in the matter. Only experts should touch bronzes, and experts are not cheap. To turn monuments over to common laborers is to have them defaced in a peculiarly exasperating way. It is to avoid this mauling of the delicate surface of their work by inexperienced hands that sculptors here and abroad often resort to gilding their statues. The National Government as well as Municipal Governments should have in their employ certain persons who know how bronze and marble should be treated so that the fine qualities produced by weathering shall not be lost. Cleaning is necessary from time to time, but it must be done with infinite discretion.

ATMOSPHERIC FOOLISHNESS.

Summer ended on Wednesday night with wholly unnecessary emphasis. A day of August temperature was followed by the wildest kind of a night, characterized by a paroxysmal outpouring of rain, a lightning bombardment comparable to that which Port Arthur has experienced since its investment, and wind which performed a skirt dance up and down the Atlantic Coast with perilous velocity.

This abrupt transition from Summer to Autumn may have been a beneficent provision of nature to facilitate the calling in of the belated straw hat, but that result, however desirable, might have been accomplished in other and less costly ways. Besides, nature need not concern herself so seriously about a matter which social conventions take care of with sufficient promptness and insistence to meet the exigent requirements of humanity. Everything considered, the storm was a display of what Mark Twain happily characterized in his account of the climate of California as "atmospheric foolishness."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Fierce fault is found by The Independent with that part of Judge PARKER'S recent speech to the Democratic editors in which, after asserting that "the ripe and final decision of the people is always for the right," he declared that it was the proper task and highest duty of the press to "discern and lead the unhurried and well-considered judgment of the people," and promised that so long as it performs this task and fulfills this duty "will its power grow mightily and so long will it hold its place in the front rank of the unfaltering and vigorous march of National progress." This, in the opinion of The Independent, is to make the press a political weather bureau. "Look ahead," he says; "see how the wind will blow in the end, for it is sure to blow right, and trim your sails accordingly, and thus lead public opinion, and you will be 'great papers.'" With all due respect to The Independent, its paraphrase of Judge PARKER'S advice is hardly a fair one, since, even if his words did seem to justify some such interpretation, it was perfectly obvious that he spoke them with quite another meaning. His intention, doubtless, was to credit the press with ability, when it chose to exercise it, of seeing the right and wrong of things more quickly than the people as a mass, and as surely his advice was not for the press to reach certain conclusions because the people would reach them later, but because the conclusions were right, ultimate popular assent being merely incidental. As for the underlying assumption that the people always are right in the end, The Independent has warrant, perhaps, in protesting against it. The assumption is true in so far that in the very nature of things wrong is impermanent, and every bad policy must after a while demonstrate its badness to all by the evil consequences it produces for all, but "in the end" may and often does refer to a period extremely remote, and for all present and practical purposes the abstract superiority of popular over individual decisions is and always will be debatable. If "well-considered" means "long-considered," the Judge would hardly contend that it results in accuracy in every instance, and between "well" and "long" it is difficult to draw a satisfactory line.

—Much interest in building and other circles will be excited by the news that the big building of the Prudential Insurance Company in Newark was somewhat seriously injured by a lightning stroke during the storm of Wednesday evening. So far as we recall, this is the very first time that lightning has been able to inflict upon an edifice of the modern "steel construction" type more damage than is involved in the shattering of a wooden flagstaff, and it has been the general conviction, supported by an experience now extending over a considerable number of years, that in such edifices there was to be found a very close approximation to absolute safety from atmospheric electricity. The bolt which struck the tower of the Prudential Building, however, for some reason or other did not find a direct and easy pathway to the ground, and it showed all its characteristic irritation at obstacles and delay. Nobody happened to be hurt, but a good many big stones were displaced, and not a few of them were sent crashing to the street below. The inevitable investigation will doubtless disclose the reason for this unusual behavior. It is customary to call lightning "erratic." Of course it is no such thing, but is, instead, as strictly obedient to fixed laws of motion as is a pebble dropped from the hand to the ground. In this instance the behavior was unusual or unprecedented simply because the conditions were unusual or unprecedented, and the lightning, instead of spreading harmlessly over a great and continuous steel framework extending to moist earth, was obliged to make a path for itself through bad conductors. Beyond any question at all, it took, as always, the line of least electrical resistance, and since that least resistance was great, it made its progress disastrously manifest. Innumerable buildings of steel construction have been struck by lightning without causing anything worse than a shock to the nerves of their occupants from the sound of the thunder, and yet no especial precautions were taken in making these structures to render them immune from electrical shocks. So it has been assumed that all such buildings were entirely safe from their very nature. That is apparently not the case, but fortunately it is certain that they can very easily be made safe. The probability is that the framework of the Newark tower was not so connected with the framework of the building proper as to facilitate the passage of the electrical current from one to the other. That can be readily remedied.

—A Coroner's inquest held in London the other day curiously illustrated both the survival of ancient beliefs and the new way in which most people have come to regard them. It seems that while a tailor and his wife were engaged in a fierce war of words the man made against the woman a charge which she vehemently denied, and while he was repeating his accusation he suddenly fell unconscious and died a few hours later. In giving her testimony at the inquest the widow admitted that she was strongly of the opinion that her husband's "stroke" was a "punishment of God" for his unjust charge against her, her way of putting it being "I am awfully afraid so." The Coroner and the jurymen manifested a somewhat amusing desire to know exactly what the accusation in question was, but the widow firmly refused to tell, even when she was subjected to the threat of losing her fee as a witness, and all the inquisitive officials could learn from other sources was that the trouble somehow concerned a bedridden brother of the tailor, for whom the wife had performed occasional household services of a nature apparently the very reverse of reprehensible. The doctors finally testified that the death was simply one of apoplexy, brought on by the excitement of the quarrel, and the jury brought in a verdict to that effect, but the widow went away clinging strongly to her own theory of a special interposition and a Divine vengeance, and a good many of the spectators seemed to hold the same opinion. When one remembers how few years have passed since that opinion would have been held self-evident by almost everybody, the progress of—something or other—is made impressively manifest.

—There will be, we suspect, some disquietude in the public mind over the establishment on the elevated roads of a service of special cars for the business of one of the express companies. Of course, everybody will welcome an improvement in the facilities for the transfer of packages from one part of the city to another, and that consequence of the innovation is eminently desirable, but it has long been the claim of the elevated railway people that the discomforts and delays of their passenger traffic were due entirely to the fact that the demand for passenger transportation was in excess of the possibilities of the line for giving the quick and comfortable service its officials would be so glad to provide. Several New Yorkers have had their doubts in the past about the exact truth of this claim, and it is at least probable that several more of them will develop such doubts now that it has been found practicable to run express cars—cars, that is, for express matter—over these same overburdened tracks. There are, however, a few hours in the day, or rather in the night, when passengers are comparatively few—and trains the same. Presumably it is at these hours that the new express business will be done. We can hope so, and must.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

Sixty Per Cent. of Verbiage—Fallacy of Protection.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial comments on President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance noted above are highly commendable for their spirit of fairness toward its putative author. By the line of laborious defensive argument and questions propounded the hand of another, skilled in legal tactics, is plainly to be seen, as when in the act of confusing a witness by cross-questioning not in the least pertinent to the case. In the next place that extraordinary document assumes that, contrary to the history of the world, the indispensable man has been produced in the twentieth century indicating that the time of miracles has once more dawned in the United States of America! The extraordinary document does not contain less than 60 per cent. of verbiage calculated to confuse its patient readers. Only the indispensable gentleman can be trusted with the Presidency of the United States, and if that prodigy is not heeded the Government must crumble!

O, modesty, where is thy blush? If that dire prediction be true we may as well face the music now before the indispensable man is called by nature to his eternal home. When the safety of a nation hinges on the retention of one person in power that nation is to be pitied. The conduct of any business enterprise which requires to be so strenuously defended by its managers deserves to be investigated by the stockholders who, in the present case, are the American people. Let's see the books and records now so jealously guarded by our officials as concealment points to fear of disclosures. A searching examination will not harm any honest man, and after eight years of continuous power it is time that the stockholders should see the books and learn whether their business has been properly conducted.

The American people are noted for being patient and long-suffering, but when once convinced of wrong practices they act swiftly. Our oppressive unjust tariff benefits the few at the expense of the many, and serves to accumulate money in the Treasury only to be squandered in reckless wild schemes, less what sticks to the hands of the manipulators, all of which, plainly stated, is robbery of the people. "Protection to American industry" is a catch phrase, an illusion and a snare which has fooled many people because they do not take time to study the bugbear. "Protection to American labor" is only a variation of the same catching expression, which is palpably misleading and deceptive.

"Protection" is another name for high tariff which means robbery of good-natured people without their knowledge. "Protection" stimulates overproduction by manufacturers largely in excess of home demand, and the surplus is disposed of in foreign countries at any price that can be obtained, often not more than one-fifth of the price which the American consumer is forced to pay. The reason for thus sending surplus products out of this country is to maintain high prices in the home markets, and in that way rob the good-natured American people who have not time or do not take the trouble to investigate the actual working of "protection to American labor."

Likes the Girls Without Their Hats.

From The Washington Post.

"The prettiest sight imaginable, and one I have never seen outside the United States, is the promenade of your beautiful girls and young women on the streets of evenings, when they appear without any sort of head covering," said Samuel Golbey of London. "To my mind this is one of the neatest, most picturesque, and fascinating customs that ever the fair sex adopted, and it seems to have reached the acme of its development right here in your capital. In their spotless white garments and without hats or bonnets, the quintessence of feminine charm is revealed. Though I have been all over the civilized world, I never saw the practice till I came to America."

A Great Piece of Reporting.

From The Toronto Globe.

Not since Archibald Forbes sent his exclusive account of the battle of Plevna has a newspaper achieved such a triumph as was scored by The London Times yesterday in giving that terribly graphic account of the battle of Liao-Yang. The Globe feels that it may be congratulated along with its contemporaries, THE NEW YORK TIMES and The Montreal Gazette, on sharing the advantage of such a piece of enterprise.

JUDGE KEOGH FOR GOVERNOR.

Neither Boss Nor Money Power Has Hold on Him.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The nomination by the Republicans of Higgins, with the Odell brand stamped fully on him, gives the Democrats an exceptional opportunity. Will they seize it? Will they nominate a man not bound by any organization, not tied up to any boss? Martin J. Keogh of Westchester is such a man. Not only the Governorship, the Presidency itself hangs on the result.

Judge Keogh's nomination would appeal to every independent as well as every Democrat in the State. Wearing no man's tag, he has always been an ardent believer in Democratic principles.

He has head and heart. An eloquent speaker, a personality full of sympathy and charm, he would make a campaign full of heat, and if elected he would give an administration of the highest grade.

His nomination would appeal to the people. To those whose ways of life are hard he always holds out a helping hand.

Neither boss nor money power has hold on him. DEMOCRAT.

Port Chester, Sept. 15, 1904.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the time for holding the Democratic Convention draws near the splendid personality and intellectual strength of Supreme Court Justice Martin J. Keogh of Westchester County is apparently attracting the attention of his party associates throughout the State. To those who have long known Judge Keogh this is the happiest of auguries for Democratic success this year. It may sound as an exaggeration to speak of a man whose name is not in the mouth of every citizen of the State, as the names of politicians are apt to be, as the strongest, ablest, and most commanding personality within the Democratic Party. But I think those who have known Judge Keogh longest and whose acquaintance with public men generally throughout the State is also large, will agree that this language, when applied to Judge Keogh, is not an exaggeration.

His talents are of the first order. His career at the bar was so extraordinarily successful that it is difficult for lawyers to recall any other which, for legitimate legal achievements, can be compared with it. His record as a Supreme Court Justice during the last nine years is an equally good one. His political availability cannot be assailed in any respect. His Democracy is native and inborn with him. His absolute freedom from factional entanglements, due to the fact that he has never been a seeker after a place nor a frequenter of political gatherings, distinguishes him from every other candidate whose name has been mentioned in connection with the Governorship. He is a brilliant, magnetic, upright man, capable, in the estimation of those who remember his career at the bar, of conducting a campaign of unequaled vigor and strength, and, if elected Governor, of placing the next administration at Albany upon the highest plane.

This, beyond peradventure, is the man who should be nominated this year. He would electrify the State by the campaign he would make if he accepted the nomination. DEMOCRATIC VOTER.

New York Sept. 14, 1904.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Democrats of all sorts have rejoiced lately to see that the name of Supreme Court Justice Martin J. Keogh of Westchester County is being talked of prominently as the Democratic candidate for Governor.

Judge Keogh, in the opinion of the writer, would be an ideal candidate for the party this year. He is the type of Democrat for whom all Democrats and independents are anxious to vote. Unfettered and unhampered by political ties, and uncontrolled by any boss, Judge Keogh would not be the tool of any man or set of men.

Possessing a brilliant mind and an extraordinary administrative ability, Judge Keogh would bring to the office of Governor a capacity and an ability that have been conspicuously lacking in that office for the past four years, and, in the opinion of the writer, he would enlist the enthusiastic support of all Democrats and of all citizens (of whatever party) who desire to see a change in the methods that have prevailed at Albany for the past two administrations.

INDEPENDENT DEMOCRAT.

'TWIXT DEVIL AND DEEP SEA.

Mugwump's Idea of Democratic Policy in the Face of Issues.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Notwithstanding a perfectly impartial contempt for both the great political parties, I have always been ready to award the palm for folly to the Democrats. For nearly fifty years, though I have several times voted with them, I have frequently expressed the opinion that they would never miss a chance to make fools of themselves. Even under Cleveland's wisdom his party was constantly acting out its old habit.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all its fatuities has been its conduct since the Parker telegram. If it had seized that opportunity and come out with a policy appealing to the multitudes stirred by that brave and unselfish utterance, it would have stood an excellent chance to sweep the country.

The telegram, of course, raised no issue, but it appeared to show a man to lead in an issue, and nothing but an issue was lacking. The only one on which virtually all Democrats and most independents are agreed is the tariff. The intelligence of the country, when not hobbled by traditions of the bloody shirt, financial greed, or by party fealty, is as much opposed to it as Mr. Roosevelt was before the party bonds closed around him.

The party that annexes the independent votes wins. The Republicans have lately got them twice, because they found even the tariff less obnoxious than free silver. This time there is nothing whatever to prevent the Democrats getting them if they will show a reason. But this they have so far refrained from doing. A call for war on the tariff would bring them like the call of a trumpet. But no such signal has been issued; the party is silent and seems afraid. The excuse that the Senate cannot be carried is no excuse for avoiding what can be carried; and it leaves many of us independents without anything to vote for.

Many of us think that expansion is inevitable and that the Constitution, while it protects and supplies much of the nourishment for our National life, as the bark protects and supplies the tree, must grow as the bark grows, or the tree cannot grow. But while we differ on those things, we are virtually all agreed on the tariff. In the absence of any danger that appears to us greater, we will not vote for the tariff; and the virtual ignoring of it by the Democratic managers discourages all faith that in voting with them we will be voting against it. To vote the Democratic ticket for any other visible reason is a thing at which most independents would smile; our old contempt for their stupidity is not only aroused by this fresh exhibition of it, but doubled by their cowardice; and so, between the devil and the deep sea, many of us are likely not to vote at all.

THE WHITE WOMAN'S PROBLEM.

Negro in the South from Her Point of View.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One phase of our troubles, that which is now our chief concern, compared with which all else is as nothing, is the insecurity of our women in their own homes, on the farm, or along the highways. The question is no longer the negro problem, but the white woman's problem. She does not enjoy the rights and privileges her sisters of the North enjoy. They can go into the forests, along highways, unmolested and without fear. Our women are denied these. They must have a bodyguard. The farmer's wife is unsafe. Care and suspense and fear rest upon her brow, even though her husband is at work in near-by field.

These conditions have created an intense sensitiveness upon the part of white people, and they are not slow to anger when one of their women is seized by some crouching negro.

Within the past two years negro outrages have so increased that it is alarming. The security of the farmer's wife in the South must soon become a National question. This imprisonment of our women—this necessity for a bodyguard at all times—has produced a feeling of resentment in the breast of the white people. The negro in the last two years, and especially this year of 1904, seems to have gone wild, and is out hunting trouble.

The Southern people long for security at home, on the farm, along the highways, in short the right of Southern white women not to remain in prison. As long as conditions exist that imprison our women, and the political coddling of the negro goes on, outbreaks and lynching will increase.

The living issue to-day, the talk in every crowd in the cotton States is "The security of the farmer's wife at home or on the highways." JAMES CALLAWAY.

FEWER TROOPS IN PHILIPPINES.

Gens. Chaffee and Wade Agree That Reduction Is Practicable.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—With a view to a reduction in the expense of maintaining a large military establishment in the Philippines, Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, Chief of Staff, recently cabled an inquiry to Major Gen. Wade, commanding the Philippines Division, asking if conditions in the islands would not justify the reduction of the present military force there from four regiments of cavalry and nine of infantry to three regiments of cavalry and seven of infantry.

Gen. Chaffee has received a reply from Gen. Wade expressing the opinion that the proposed reduction is not only practicable, but advisable. Therefore it is more than probable that arrangements will soon be made to bring home the troops in excess of the number regarded by Gens. Chaffee and Wade as essential.

FAMILY HAS 17 G. O. P. VOTES.

New Jersey Man Takes Record from Montana Citizen.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Sept. 15.—Disputing the statement published some time ago that a citizen of Montana had in his immediate family the largest number of Republican voters of any family in the country, Abner S. Coriell of New Market now says that the title belongs to him.

In figuring up Mr. Coriell found that a total of seventeen Republican ballots were cast each election by his family, which beats the Montana man's record by one.

Added to Mr. Coriell's steady Republican ballot, the voters are as follows: Smalley Coriell, residing at Bound Brook, and his two sons; Charles Coriell of Dunellen and two sons; the two sons of the late Samuel Coriell, who are now living in this city, and George and William Coriell of New Market. These votes from the families of Mr. Coriell's sons must be added to the ballots of Melvin Van Keuren, a brother-in-law, of Jersey City, and the father of two Republican sons; Charles Elliott and son of Scotch Plains, and E. A. White of Red Bank, another son-in-law.

AMERICANS TO GET THE MONEY.

Cuba Awards Contract to Pay Its War Veterans' Warrants.

The Cuban Government has awarded to the Royal Bank of Canada, through its various Cuban branches, the contract for the disbursement to the Cuban war veterans of the sum of $31,000,000, due in connection with the recent war of revolution which ended with the intervention of the United States and its war with Spain. This debt, upon the formation of the Republic, became one of the first obligations and was provided for by the issue of $35,000,000 first tortgage 5 per cent. bonds, which were floated in New York and in Europe last Winter.

A large proportion of the warrants held by the soldiers to represent their claims have changed hands since their issue, having been bought up speculatively at a discount, and it is estimated that $10,000,000 of the total is held by Americans or purchased with American money.

For some weeks past there have been large shipments of gold from New York and Paris to Cuba, the proceeds of the bond issue. These funds will be deposited with the Royal Bank of Canada, in Havana, to meet the Government checks, issued to bearer, in retirement of the soldiers' warrants. The bonds realized to the republic 90½, and are now quoted at 101½ on the New York Stock Exchange.

RETROSPECTION.

'Twas only a simple air she played,
But the world stood still as her fingers strayed
Along the keys, and the swelling notes
Took unto themselves a thousand throats,
Telling of deeds that I might have done,
Of glittering goals I might have won,
Sighing for prayers I had left unsaid,
Sobbing for hopes that were long since dead.

Her soul was white as the fingers that strayed
Along the keys, and the music she played
Was no more sweet than the life she led,
And I cursed myself for the prayers unsaid.

As the melody tenderly rose and fell,
Each rhythmic beat the fairy knell
Of a dream departed or unfulfilled,
The very throb of my heart was stilled.
Lightly her fingers touched each key,
And I heard again the sigh of a sea
As it sank to sleep on a Southern strand—
Another life, in another land.

CAN'T PICK FINE CIGAR NOW BY THE BOX LABEL

Government Calls In Big Stamps on Imported Smokes.

TRUST MAKES BIG PROTEST

Little Stamp Inside Box Tickles Independents—Old Stamp Was Used as "Ad."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—A fierce contest is being waged between the Tobacco Trust, known as the Havana Tobacco Company, and the independent tobacco manufacturers and dealers throughout the country. The subject of controversy is the stamp required on imported boxes of cigars.

For a number of years the manufacturers of cigars made in this country from tobacco imported from Cuba have objected to the wide customs stamp, printed in red, which is bound about the boxes of imported cigars, and is generally accepted by smokers as a certificate of merit, and as the guarantee by the United States Government that the cigars were imported. The matter came to a head when the Tobacco Trust had acquired a majority of the cigar factories in Cuba. Since that time the entire independent tobacco trade of the United States has been working to have the customs stamp abolished.

This effort failed, as the Treasury Department wishes the boxes of imported cigars marked to prevent refilling or "box stuffing," by which unscrupulous dealers palm off domestic for imported cigars. The Treasury Department officials, however, were of the opinion that it was unjust to the independent American manufacturers and to the cigar and tobacco trade in general that the United States customs stamp should be utilized substantially as an advertisement.

Consequently Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Armstrong, in charge of the Customs Service, after months of careful consideration of the subject, and being convinced that the whole American trade, with the exception of the Tobacco Trust, favored a change in the stamp, recently issued an order that a new stamp should be prepared. This stamp will be inconspicuous in character, and will be placed on the bottom of the box, fully complying with the law, but of such design as not to constitute an advertisement of foreign-made cigars.

No sooner had the news of this move been communicated to the trade than letters and telegrams from independent manufacturers and dealers in all parts of the country poured in on the Treasury Department congratulating Mr. Armstrong on the change.

There was but one note of opposition, and that was from the Tobacco Trust, which, it is understood, has appealed to the President to have the order countermanded. The trust is bringing all its influences to bear to prevent a change in the stamp, and, it is said, a hearing in/New York will be given to the representatives of the Havana Tobacco Company very shortly, probably to-morrow.

Should the conference with the trust officials result in the order being suspended or revoked a storm of protest will be raised. It is reported that resolutions from the National Cigar Leaf Tobacco Association, the New York Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade, the Havana Cigar Manufacturing Association of the United States, and other organizations having headquarters in New York have been sent to the President protesting against any revocation or suspension of the order.

GETS WAGGAMAN SECURITIES.

U. S. Marshal Takes Notes Valued, It Is Said, at $1,300,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The United States Marshal went to-day to the office of Thomas E. Waggaman and took possession of the list of securities known in the pending litigation as "List No. 1." This action was in obedience to the order of Justice Anderson of the Supreme Court, for the purpose of protecting creditors of Waggaman other than the Catholic University.

All the papers held by Mr. Waggaman relating to "List No. 1" were examined, and each note was checked, with the corresponding entries on the list. As this list is said to include over $1,300,000 worth of notes, the accounting necessarily required considerable time, and it was not until well in the afternoon that the task was completed.

By the terms of Justice Anderson's order, the Marshal will remain custodian of the notes and other securities of Mr. Waggaman until a further order from the court. He is directed also to collect and hold all amounts due from any of the properties owned by the plaintiff.

81,318 PART-TIME PUPILS.

Maxwell Makes Public School Registration Figures.

City Superintendent of Schools William H. Maxwell gave out yesterday the total figures for the school registration in all the boroughs. It is as follows:

	Registered Sept. 12.	Inc.	Part-Time Pupils.	Inc.	Dec.

Queens	33,141	2,931	5,343	180	..

Grand total	568,232	38,720	..	..	6,239

The increase in Richmond, according to Mr. Maxwell, is due to new school No. 17 not being in shape. This accounts for 901 part-time pupils, who will probably be relieved in a very short time.

NEW QUARTERS FOR COURT.

Justice Bolte Moves from Centre Market to Madison Street.

The Second District Municipal Court, over which Justice Herman Bolte presides, moved to its new quarters yesterday morning, in the P. Divver Association's clubhouse, 59 Madison Street. The court for over twenty years was situated above a saloon at the corner of Centre and Pearl Streets, and since 1890 it has been held in the Centre Market, which is now to be demolished to make way for other public buildings.

The Divver Club will meet in the future in the basement of the Courthouse, and will receive $3,000 a year from the city for rent for the use of the building, the lease extending for three years.

SELLS ESTATE SUIT SETTLED.

Willie Sells, Circus Owner, Gets Largest Share of $300,000.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 15.—The Sells estate case, which involves the possession of $300,000, has been settled out of court. Under the terms of the settlement Willie Sells, the circus owner, gets the larger portion.

Mrs. Ellen White of Dayton, Ohio, and Mrs. Emma Clark of Philadelphia will have $18,000 divided between them. Allen Sells, Jr., is allowed $60,000. Willie Sells proved that he was the adopted son of the late Mrs. Sells-Greenspan.

LUDLOW STREET JAIL CLEANED.

Federal Prisoners Accused of Crime Removed to Tombs—Only Civil Cases Left.

For the first time since its completion, almost forty years ago, the Ludlow Street Prison is serving the purpose for which it was solely constructed—the detention of prisoners held under civil proceedings. No longer will the Warden have to conduct two separate establishments under the same roof or force the man against whom no crime is charged to rub shoulders with prisoners accused of murder, counterfeiting, moonshining, or robbing the mails.

The United States prisoners—thirty in all—were removed yesterday to the Tombs, where a whole tier on the top floor of the north wing was ready for them. Twice the prison van made trips from Ludlow Street to the Tombs, and several prisoners made the trip on foot, in charge of Deputy Sheriffs. Included in the shift were nine men accused of counterfeiting, four postal clerks accused of robbing the mails, fourteen Italians charged with violating the naturalization laws, two alleged illicit distillers, and one woman, who is held as a material witness.

Sheriff M. J. Erlanger, who has contended ever since he assumed his office that the confinement of United States prisoners in a jail supposed to shelter only civil prisoners was wrong, was rejoiced when the work of emptying the institution of its undesirable occupants was completed.

Perhaps the most widely known prisoner ever lodged at the Ludlow Street building was "Boss" Tweed, who was locked up there in June, 1875, as defendant in civil suits aggregating more than $600,000. He was a prisoner in name only, being permitted to go where he chose, a deputy accompanying him on his rambles through the city. On one of his outings he escaped, but was subsequently recaptured. He died in the jail on April 12, 1878.

Other notable prisoners were James D. Fish and Ferdinand Ward, who were responsible for the financial ruin of Gen. Grant; Jacob Sharp of "boodle Aldermen" notoriety, and Whitaker Wright, the English exponent of the "get-rich-quick" game.

MAYOR VISITS "THE ISLAND."

Food There Better Than "Army Grub," He Declares.

Mayor McClellan headed a party of city officials who inspected the institutions at Blackwell's Island yesterday to see what was needed in the way of improvements. The start was made from the pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street in the city's new steam tug, the Thomas M. Mulry, which was the maiden trip. The party included Thomas M. Mulry of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Commissioner Francis J. Lantry of the Department of Correction, Second Deputy Commissioner of Charities William McNierny of Brooklyn, and Dr. Fitzgerald, Superintendent of the charitable institutions of Kings County, and 125 others.

When the inspection was over the Mayor said:

"I am ashamed to say that this is the first time that I have visited the island, but you may be very sure that it will not be my last. I am more than interested in all that I have seen, and I am coming over again when I can have more time and make a more detailed inspection."

"Do you think the work necessary would require the expenditure of $250,000 as requested from the Board of Estimate?" he was asked, but no reply would he vouchsafe.

After a visit to the big dining room where the workhouse inmates were eating, the Mayor said of the food:

"That's better than the grub we get in the army."

MAYOR UNDER A LEAK.

Placed in Twelfth Regiment Armory So as to Realize Defects.

The Board of Armory Commissioners yesterday afternoon opened bids for armory work, accepted the lowest, and then rejected all at the request of the lowest bidder on the ground that he had made a mistake and wanted to withdraw his bid. The bids were for repairs for Squadron A Armory, as one item, and for repairs to seven armories in the city as another item.

Mayor McClellan stated that the last time he was at the Twelfth Armory they placed him under a hole to show him how the roof leaked, and added that this seemed to be the condition of all the armories.

BROADWAY POSTS CHANGED.

Police Squad Will No Longer Have to Watch Side Streets.

Another change in the Police Department which Commissioner McAdoo has determined upon is the institution of straight posts on Broadway at night. From Fourteenth Street to Fifty-ninth Street the men will not be required, as at present, to leave the main street, and Mr. McAdoo believes that hereafter a policeman will be much easier to find when he is needed. These tours of duty will also be special, from 10 P. M. to 6 A. M., and will be five in number, the Circle itself being a sixth. The men will report to the precinct in which their posts are situated.

Mr. McAdoo also said that he was considering the question of the observation coaches, which are multiplying greatly of late, to see if some law could not be invoked regulating their width.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION'S WORK.

Extensive Plans Outlined at Meeting Here Yesterday.

Plans for an extensive campaign for civic betterment were outlined at a meeting of the American Civic Association held in this city yesterday. National headquarters will be established in Philadelphia, and active work will begin at once. Among the matters discussed were the Washington improvements, railroad terminal improvements, school gardens, suppression of offensive signboards, parks, children's playgrounds, public recreations, and public reservations.

Those present were J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Penn., President; Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia, Vice President; William R. Howland of New York, Treasurer; Frederick Law Olmsted of Boston; Frederick S. Lamb of New York, Frank Chapin Bray of Chicago, Mrs. F. N. Doubleday of New York, Mrs. A. E. McCrea of Chicago, W. A. Peterson of Chicago, Dick J. Crosby of the Agricultural Department at Washington, and George A. Parker of Hartford, Conn.

"DOLLY VARDEN" HITS TEAM.

That's the Central's River Front "Express"—Driver and Horses Hurt.

The "Dolly Varden," the New York Central's well-known North River front passenger "express," played havoc with a driver of a truck and his team of horses last night at the One Hundred and Thirty-third Street and Twelfth Avenue crossing.

Thomas Duffy of 59 Manhattan Street was driving toward the river and thought he had plenty of time to get across ahead of the train. But the "Dolly Varden" is speedy and hit his team and wagon full. Duffy was thrown into the air. The horses were carried on the pilot, with the heavy truck, scattering its load along the tracks, hanging over on the other side of the locomotive. The engineer put on his emergency brakes, but before the train was stopped the wagon had been smashed against a freight car with force enough to break part of the car. The wagon was demolished.

Duffy had his right kneecap broken and was badly bruised. The off horse was so hurt that it had to be destroyed, and the other was more or less battered up.

ALLIANCE THREATENS TO MAKE TIE-UP COMPLETE

Outside Unions Join in Ultimatum to Builders.

WEDNESDAY THE TIME LIMIT

If Employers Do Not Declare Off Lock-Out General Strike of All Trades Will Be Ordered.

The fight of the Building Trades Alliance against the Building Trades Employers' Association is to be extended to the unions not affiliated with the organization on Wednesday next unless the lock-out is declared off in the meantime.

This decision was reached at a meeting in Bloomingdale Turn Hall, Eighth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, last night, in which all the unions not in the alliance, as well as the alliance unions, were represented. The meeting was called to enlist the sympathy of the outside unions, and among the latter were the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union and the local unions of bricklayers, which so far have kept out of the fight. According to the leaders of the meeting, which was secret, 200 delegates, representing 75,000 workers, attended.

The question, it was learned afterward, simmered down to the point whether or not the unions outside the alliance were willing to work with non-union men. The alliance won out on this contention, and then the alliance speakers said that unless the other unions joined in the fight they would be working with non-union men. This carried the meeting.

After the meeting was over it was announced that a committee of one from each union represented had been appointed to draw up an ultimatum to the Employers' Association, giving the employers until Wednesday to declare the lock-out off, failing in which strikes would be ordered by every building trades union in the city.

No progress was made yesterday toward a resumption of work on the new school buildings. It was expected that something would be done by the Employers' Association, but it continues its refusal to have any dealings with the Building Trades Alliance, even to the extent of a truce on school work. Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee of the employers, reiterated that under no circumstances would the association enter into any kind of an agreement with the alliance. He was told that the pledge of the alliance unions that they would allow their members to go back to work if the Employers' Association would permit, meant that the locked-out men would return and the new ones be discharged.

"Not a new man now at work will be discharged," he said. "They are there to stay and we will use all diligence in manning the schools."

COP'S TEST FOR RABID DOG.

New Policeman Convinced Because Mongrel Chased Him.

Patrick Ryan, who has been one week on the police force, reported to Sergt. McDonald of the East Fifty-first Street Station his first case last night. The policeman said a little girl informed him that there was a rabid dog at Fifty-second Street and the East River and he killed it.

"How do you know the dog was mad?" asked the Sergeant.

"It was this way," he replied. "The dog was frothing at the mouth for one reason and then I got near to see whether he would chase me. He did. That mongrel chased me for half a block. By that time I was convinced that he was mad and then I hit him on the head with my night stick."

The Sergeant complimented Ryan on his novel method of ascertaining the condition of the dog, and Ryan's first case was entered on the blotter.

FIND BODY ON CENTRAL TRACK.

Police Believe Victim to Have Been Artist or Professional Man.

The decapitated body of an unidentified man about forty-five years old was found last night on the south-bound track of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad at One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street and the Hudson River by Policeman Nieman of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second Street Station. The police do not report the case as one of suicide, but say they believe it to be such. In the man's pocket was found a piece of rope about six feet long, with a noose in the end, and this fact strengthens this belief.

Although poorly clad, the man was of refined appearance, and was not a laboring man. His hands were delicate and white and seemed unused to work with implements of toil. The police say they believe the man to have been an artist or professional man of some kind. The body was removed later to the Harlem Morgue. It will be sent to-day to the Bellevue Morgue.

BAD LUCK IN SACKS FAMILY.

Two Children Already in Hospital, Another May Be Fatally Hurt.

While at the front window amusing her younger brothers and sisters yesterday afternoon, Flora Sacks, a six-year-old girl, lost her balance and fell from the first floor of 1,931 Second Avenue and fractured her skull. She was removed to the Harlem Hospital, where little hope is entertained for her recovery.

Bad luck seems to have taken up its permanent residence in the Sacks household. Three of the six children are now in various hospitals. A week ago Harry, the oldest boy, seven years old, was taken to the Harlem Hospital with both legs fractured. He was playing in the street, when a truck ran over him. A few days later Pearl, twin sister of Benjamin, both one year old, was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital with pneumonia. It was while Mrs. Sacks was out visiting her other children that Flora fell from the window.

JEWEL THIEF CAUGHT.

McKenzie, the "Stone-Throwing Burglar," Found in Marion, Ind.

MARION, Ind., Sept. 15.—William J. Deevy, a detective of the New York Police Department, came here to-day in search of William McKenzie, who is wanted on a charge of having robbed New York people of $2,000 worth of jewelry. McKenzie was seized with a hemorrhage on the street two weeks ago, and was taken to the Marion Hospital for treatment, and the detective found him there to-day.

McKenzie acknowledged that he was the fugitive, and told the detective that the jewelry had been sold in Albany, New York, Chicago, and St. Louis. The theft was committed on the night of July 4. McKenzie is only twenty-three years old, but has served three terms in New York and New Jersey prisons on charges of diamond robbery.

William McKenzie is known to the police as the "stone-throwing burglar," because he used to throw stones at windows to see if there were any one inside. He is wanted for the robbery of $2,000 worth of jewels from the home of Sylvester Ford, a relative of his, and with whom he lived, at 646 East One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street.

YOUNGEST BROKER ON 'CHANGE

H. I. Nicholas Succeeds to Seat His Father Left in Trust.

H. I. Nicholas entered the New York Stock Exchange yesterday as the Board member of the firm of H. I. Nicholas & Co., founded by his father, who bore the same name and was known up to the time of his death, three years ago, as a prominent trader. At the time of his death the son, the present H. I. Nicholas, was but eighteen years old and ineligible for membership on the Stock Exchange.

The father left the Exchange seat in trust for him, transferring it to a nephew, R. C. Nicholas, who has held it in trust till the son became of age, a few weeks ago, when he took steps to transfer it to him, the terms of the trust being fulfilled.

The present H. I. Nicholas is the youngest member of the board, being only a few weeks past the twenty-one-year eligible limit.

EXPRESS CARS ON ELEVATED.

Interborough Will Accommodate All Companies Wanting Elevated Service.

The first car on the elevated railroad to carry express freight matter made a trip yesterday from the baggage station at the foot of Trinity Place down to the Battery, where it was switched off to the Third Avenue tracks and sent up to the stations at Sixty-sixth Street and at One Hundred and Thirty-third Street. Its trip was made in less than an hour, allowing for the unloading of matter at the Sixty-sixth Street station. The exact time saved in handling matter in this manner is roughly estimated at almost two hours.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company has asked all the express companies in the city to take advantage of the service of the elevated road. As yet the United States Express Company is the only one that has taken up the request, but officials of the other companies who are watching the development of the plan say that if it proves successful they will also probably adopt it.

The one car which is now operated is scheduled to make a trip every two hours. It will probably not be run as often as that during rush hours. All of the express cars will be the property of the railroad company and will be used jointly by the companies employing the elevated road.

NO LIGHT ON SPAHR MYSTERY.

Companion of Editor Who Disappeared from Channel Steamer Arrives.

No light was thrown on the disappearance from a Channel steamer several weeks ago of C. B. Spahr, editor of Current Events and The Outlook, when E. W. Ordway, his traveling companion, arrived here yesterday on the steamship Aurania. Mr. Ordway said that when the steamer was about to enter the port of Dover, Mr. Spahr was missed. Mr. Spahr, according to Mr. Ordway, had suffered at times from depression and nervous spells. During the trip, however, he had been perfectly quiet, and just before his disappearance he was sitting with several other passengers, reading the papers and discussing the news.

ADOPTS WIRE CABLES FOR MANHATTAN BRIDGE

Art Commission Sustains Commissioner Best.

TURNS DOWN EYE-BAR PLAN

John De Witt Warner Protests Against Action—Bids to be Advertised For at Once.

The Municipal Art Commission settled yesterday the much-mooted question of whether eye-bar or wire cables should be used in the construction of the Manhattan Bridge by voting seven to one for the latter plan. President John De Witt Warner was the only member present who dissented.

The wire cable plan was first proposed during the Van Wyck administration, but Bridge Commissioner Lindenthal, under Mayor Low, opposed it, and got the Art Commission to indorse the eye-bar plan. Tammany Aldermen, however, were in the majority, and refused to vote for the Lindenthal proposition. When Commissioner Best came into power he went back to wire cables, and asked the Art Commission to indorse him. The Commission at first stood out against him, and asked that a committee of engineers be named to pass on the merits of the two plans.

Meanwhile the matter has been delayed while charges and counter-charges were made. It was said that only the Roebling Company could furnish the wire cable, while at least eleven could furnish the eye bars.

Before the Art Commission voted representatives of the Merchants' Association, who opposed wire cables and asked that a commission of engineers be appointed to pass on the plans, were heard.

Mayor McClellan, John Bigelow, and J. Carroll Beckwith were the only absent members.

In asking to be recorded in the negative Mr. Warner said that the structure was to cost upward of $10,000,000, and that the Art Commission in assuming to decide between the eye-bar and the wire cables was put to great responsibility, particularly when the question was one on which experts were divided. When the question was put to a vote it was found that the other seven present had voted in the affirmative.

Bridge Commissioner Best was greatly pleased at his victory.

"Now that I have the necessary approval I shall go ahead at once and advertise for bids," he said.

HEARING IN MRS. LEARY'S SUIT.

Lady Paget's Testimony About Mortgage Transaction Read.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 15.—Vice Chancellor Stevens listened to testimony to-day in the action brought by Mrs. Mary C. Leary, administratrix of the estate of her husband, James D. Leary, who was proprietor of the Hoffman House, to foreclose a mortgage for $7,500 given to her husband by Joseph Comings in 1889. The mortgage was found among her husband's papers after his death. It is claimed by the defense that the mortgage is void, it having been taken up when a mortgage to take its place had been given to Mrs. Paran Stevens, who loaned the money to take up the Leary mortgage.

During the hearing testimony given by Lady Mary Paget, wife of Sir Arthur Paget, a daughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens, was read. According to this testimony Lady Paget, shortly after the death of her mother four years ago, was approached by Leary, who told her that he had an intimate knowledge of her mother's business affairs and offered his services as adviser. When she later found in her mother's safety deposit box in the Knickerbocker Trust Company two mortgages—one for $7,500, made to Joseph Comings on property in Passaic and the other for $40,000 on city property to J. C. Clark, and a bundle of bonds of the Goode Cartridge Company—she was urged by Leary to substitute her name for that of her mother's in these mortgages and dispose of them without the knowledge of the Union Trust Company, which under Mrs. Stevens's will had been made trustee.

Further reading showed that the witness, while she had declined to change the signature, had permitted Leary to take the documents away with him. When Leary died about a year later the Comings mortgage was found among his securities with Mrs. Stevens's name erased from it. It is claimed that this is the mortgage that Mrs. Leary is now trying to foreclose.

LARCHMONT CLUB POW-WOW.

Farce by Lambs' Shepherd to be Given on Sunday.

Preparations are being made at Larchmont and Travers Island for the annual pow-wow of the "Huckleberry Indians" and the "Flub Dubs," which is to be held at Huckleberry Island next Sunday afternoon. The clubmen are keeping mum about their performance, which always winds up the yachting season on the Sound, and in order to keep inquiring pale faces off they will have a force of private detectives stationed at the island.

It is learned, however, that the clubmen are to produce a burlesque entitled "Captain Kidd, the Kidder," written by Clay M. Greene, shepherd of the Lambs Club. The piece ends with a dance performed by a bevy of soubrettes and mermaids. About two hundred clubmen will take part in the show, impersonating Indians and pirates. At the close of the performance everybody will join in the annual handshake and clambake.

RATHER SLEEP THAN EAT.

So Wolff's Wife Started to Take Acid, but Repented.

Because her husband would not get up and eat a nice supper she had prepared for him, the police say, Mrs. Lillian Wolff, thirty-two years old, of 158 West Twenty-eighth Street, went to the bathroom last evening and started to drink a solution of carbolic acid. When the acid touched her lips Mrs. Wolff repented and started to scream. Her husband slept on.

Neighbors heard her cries and summoned Patrolman Burns of the West Thirtieth Street Station. An ambulance surgeon found that Mrs. Wolff had not swallowed any of the poison, but had burned her lips and breast. She was removed to the New York Hospital, a prisoner, charged with attempted suicide.

Patrolman Burns says Mrs. Wolff told him that she called her husband to supper several times, but that he refused to get up, saying he was very tired. She was disappointed, because she had spent an hour and a half preparing a nice meal for him.

The combat lasted three hours, and resulted in the defeat and dispersal of the Government forces. The extent of the losses is unknown.

The Sajonia returned to Villetta without having sustained a single casualty.

TEXAS PROSECUTES RAILWAY.

Wants Charter of the Fort Worth and Rio Grande Forfeited.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 15.—The Texas Railroad Commission to-day took the preliminary step toward instituting proceedings in court to forfeit the charter of the Fort Worth and Rio Grande Railway Company and to obtain heavy penalties for alleged violations of the laws of this State.

This railroad is a 'Frisco property. It is alleged by the Railroad Commission that the defendant company issued in April, 1903, its mortgage bonds to the amount of $994,000 and its capital stock to the amount of $944,600 without authority of the commission and in violation of the stock and bond law, and also that the general offices of the company are kept in St. Louis, Mo., instead of in Texas as required by law.

The case is set for hearing on Oct. 18.

BLAZE IN A CLOSED HOUSE.

Police Investigating Odd Fire in East Seventieth Street.

Fire of mysterious origin started in the home of Henry Meinhard, 18 East Seventieth Street, yesterday afternoon. The Meinhard family are spending the Summer at Edgemere, L. I., and their house has been closed up. About 4 o'clock one of the servants in a house next door discovered flames coming from a rear window on the first floor.

When the firemen arrived they found the windows and doors boarded up. They hammered on the door and after a brief interval were convinced that there was no one on the premises. Then there was another delay while they broke down the heavy front doors. How fire could start in a closed house is a mystery which the police of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station were trying last night to figure out. The damage was about $2,000.

AMERICAN'S BATTING HARD

Greater New Yorks Lost First Contest to Champions, but the Second Was a Tie.

The New York National League team finished its season's series of games with the Bostons yesterday, and the local men scored their twentieth victory over the New England team. Of the twenty-two games played between the teams the Bostons only won two. Brooklyn played another double-header with Philadelphia at Washington Park, the honors being equally divided.

In the American League the Greater New Yorks and Bostons stoutly contested every inch of ground in two games, with the result that the Bostons took the first one by a run, thus placing them in the lead again, while the second game was stopped by darkness at the end of the ninth inning, after each team had scored a run. The Philadelphia team won two games from Washington, while Detroit shut out Cleveland in six innings. Summary follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York, with Wiltse Pitcher, Defeats Boston by Score of 3 to 2.

McNichols's wildness and timely batting of the New Yorks gave McGraw's men the last game of the season with the Bostons yesterday at the Polo Grounds. Although the teams kept close to each other throughout, the score being 3 to 2, there was nothing unusual displayed by the fielders, with the exception of a magnificent catch of a foul fly by Browne off O'Hara's bat in the fourth inning. The ball dropped close to the open seats and half way up to the covered grand stand. Yet by fast running Browne got up to the ball and by putting out one hand caught it.

Wiltse pitched his twelfth consecutive game and won it cleverly. He received splendid support, the only error of the team being credited to Gilbert. This occurred in the ninth inning, when Geier hit up a ball midway between first and second bases, but the usually reliable second baseman seemed to be all at sea in trying to reach the ball, and he finally put up his left hand and dropped it. "Hank" O'Day, who was hit on the head by a bat about six weeks ago and had an operation performed at a hospital in this city, made his reappearance as an umpire.

Bresnahan started off for the New Yorks by being hit with a pitched ball, but in stealing second was decided out by O'Day. Browne struck out, but McGann was sent to first on four bad balls. Mertes's single to left field enabled McGann to reach third, and then Mertes drew a throw to first from McNichols, Tenney sent the ball to Delehanty, and in the meantime McGann crossed the plate unobstructed. Mertes, however, was finally run down at second. In the sixth inning Dahlen reached first on called balls, and went to third on Dunn's two-bagger to left field. Gilbert was hit by pitcher, which filled the bases. On Bowerman's hit to Moran, Dahlen was easily thrown out at the plate. Dunn, who got to third on the play, scored on Wiltse's out at centre field. Another run was made in the seventh inning by Browne, who made an exceedingly pretty bunt, was sacrificed to second, and sent home on Mertes's hit to left.

Needham, the first man up for Boston in the seventh inning, hit the ball to almost the ropes in centre field and made the circuit of the bases. In the eighth inning singles by Tenney, Abbatichio, and Moran gave the Bostons their second run. The score:

BROOKLYN WON AND LOST.

The Brooklyn and Philadelphia teams played another double-header at Washington Park yesterday, the result being an equal division of the honors. The first game, with Mitchell and Suthoff as the opposing pitchers, the Philadelphians won by a score of 5 to 2. Hanlon's men secured almost two hits to the visitors' one, but Suthoff kept them well scattered, and the run-getting was handicapped by the steady and accurate fielding of the Philadelphia team, in which Gleason was the most prominent exhibitor. The second game lasted only seven innings, but in that time the Brooklyns scored 14 runs to 7 and made thirteen hits to nine. The work of the Philadelphians in the field was directly opposite to that shown in the first game, Lush alone having four errors to his credit.

Hanlon tried his new pitcher, Durham, from the Southern Atlantic League, in the second game, and he did fairly well until the fourth inning, when the Philadelphians improved their batting averages to the extent of making four runs, after which the new-comer was succeeded by Scanlon. The scores:

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—To-day's contest between the Chicago and Cincinnati teams went twelve innings and was a pitchers' battle, except in the first and last innings. Briggs was hit for a triple and a double at the start, then settled down and allowed but three more scattered singles, besides striking out nine men. A single, a sacrifice, and Corcoran's wild throw gave the locals the tying run. A single, an out, a steal, and Kling's two-bagger in the twelfth brought in the winning run, with but one out. Score:

Boston Turns Tables on Greater New Yorks and Regains Lead.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Boston turned the tables to-day, and New York once more holds second place, Boston taking the first game by 3 to 2 and tieing the second, 1 to 1, darkness again stopping the contest without a decision. Boston outbatted New York, and on the whole played the best ball. New York started out in the first game with two runs, but Boston got on to Orth as the game progressed, and in the seventh Orth strained a tendon in his right arm and gave way to Griffith, who held the champions down. In the ninth inning New York made a desperate bid for the victory, but with three men on bases and two out Conroy ended the game by striking out.

Both games were bitterly contested, and the setback was taken to heart by the New York players. Griffith worked hard for victory. He was on the lines most of the time, and his clever pitching, after relieving Orth, was commended by all. Boston was not to be denied, however, and Parent, who caused the local downfall yesterday, was the chief cause of New York's defeat. Parent was responsible for all of Boston's runs, and he fielded in his old-time manner. The grounds were soaking wet, but one of the biggest crowds of the season was on hand. Dougherty hit the ball hard, but fielded poorly, being unable, it seemed, to either hold a ground ball or pick it up after stopping it.

Tannehill and Orth started the first game. Dougherty singled, then stole second, and scored on Keeler's single and Elberfeld's out. In the third inning Orth forced McGuire at second and scored on Dougherty's triple. Boston got two runs in the fifth inning when Criger singled and Tannehill walked. Selbach sacrificed both along, and Parent's single to left sent them home. Tannehill won his own game in the seventh when he tripled to right and scored on Parent's hit to Conroy, barely beating the ball.

In the second game Selbach's double gave him third on Dougherty's fumble, and Stahl's grounder to Powell sent him home. Ganzel singled in New York's sixth inning and scored on Conroy's three-bagger. Both teams received plenty of chances to score, but hits never came. Another double-header will be played to-morrow. The scores:

Personal property of foreign corporations doing business in New York is taxable when kept within New York.

By the laws of New York both lineal and collateral inheritance taxes are imposed, not only on the estates of residents, but also on the personal estate of non-residents found in New York. No such laws exist in New Jersey.

It is therefore evident that it is of great advantage both to individuals and corporations to have Safe Deposit accommodations and Bank Accounts in New Jersey.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

No particular movement of importance occurred in the outside market yesterday. Though a curtailment of activity was shown, prices as a whole held well, and closing transactions were made within a fraction of the day's high. Inquiry for bonds improved, and a fairly large number of issues were bought. In this department American Tobacco 6s were again the feature, with $125,000 selling, at a loss of ⅝ from the top for the day, owing to large offerings. Cuban 6s of 1896 sold at an advance of ¼ over the new 5s, which sold on the board at 101½. Electric Vehicle common was the most active stock traded in, and rose 1⅞. About 3,000 shares were bought, and after a sharp break of ⅞ from the day's high, to 16, the purchase of 1,000 shares brought the quotation to the top figure again at the close. Greene Con solidated was active and seemed in good demand, with sales as high as 15½. Notices have been sent out to stockholders of the annual meeting, which is to be held Oct. 12.

Stocks Uncertain; Call Money Easy, 1@2 Per Cent.

The List Alters Irregularly, Speculative Considerations Controlling Rather Than Crop Conditions.

The market opened yesterday, as it closed on Wednesday, with a strong tone in stocks and weak tone in produce; but it speedily became less logical. Corn continued weak through the day, and closed at a decline upon good weather, but without especially stimulating the corn carriers. Wheat was strong and closed higher, but upon news not threatening any deficiency in American yield. Frost in Winnipeg and Manitoba and a poor harvest in much-plagued Russia promise to Americans more dollars and no fewer bushels. A market which is responsive to crop conditions ought to have risen upon yesterday's facts and prophecies, such, for instance, as the Cincinnati Price Current's statement that two-thirds of the corn crop is beyond injury and that moderate frost would benefit the rest.

But yesterday's market was not responsive to the day's news in this respect. Encouraging as it was, it was not of a character to create a sudden demand for 175,000 shares of Pennsylvania, nor to add two points value to New York Central. Neither was another postponement of the meeting of the billet pool, and expression of indifference whether or not it met at all, or pretended to regulate prices demonstrating their indifference to all regulation, adapted to cause large buying of Steel at advancing prices. And if the facts justified activity and strength in these leading properties there could be no reason why other properties in similar classes should be soft. The facts were reconciled by most observers by the theory that some prices were made strong to distract attention from weakness elsewhere, under the process of profit taking. If the facts are as indicated, profit taking will do no more harm, but will rather prepare market conditions for further improvement, if what is now doubtful should be settled according to the present outlook.

Several facts of the day ought to be read together to be appreciated in their true significance. Up to yesterday more than twenty times as much cotton had been ginned this year as last. The inference is not regarding the total yield, for the difference is due to the earlier maturity of the crop this year, but regarding the supply of sterling, which fell twenty points upon the ample supply of cotton bills. Just as this demand upon our credit institutions demonstrates itself, and the money market rises quotably, the Bank of England makes a report as unusually strong as our own, concurrently with exceptionally small demands upon resources larger than for years. We are in no need of gold, and are unlikely to insist upon having it in payment for what our foreign customers are buying of us, as usual at this season, but with the two banking situations so strong, and in such close relations, there is less need than before of borrowing trouble about moving the cotton crop this year. It will not be necessary, as it sometimes has been, for us to lend our customers money to buy with, and if we unexpectedly need some accommodation ourselves, there is plenty to be had, and bankers as eager to lend and as cheered by some rise in the price of money as our own.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Early Strength Followed by Weakness —Stocks Act Queerly and Late Bulls Get Scared.

Although the wire service was badly interrupted because of the storm of the night before, preventing free communication with out-of-town points, yet the activity was great, enough even with that handicap to pile up transactions of 1,127,779 shares. But while the market thus kept up the precedent of the previous days it did not look so natural. Stocks acted as if they were intoxicated and their movement was decidedly erratic. The morning and afternoon developed strength in certain issues which gradually influenced the whole list, but just when everything was boiling, signs of a decline developed and the close was weak. It was rumored that Jones or Snow would come out to-day with a crop report which would show a yield of only 2,000,000,000 bushels of corn. The report was to have been out yesterday afternoon, but did not materialize. It was significant that Atchison, Union Pacific, Rock Island, and the other corn belt lines were leaders of the late decline.

***

STEEL BOUGHT TO COVER SELLING.

One of the most active issues was United States Steel, which advanced to 18¼ for the common, of which 92,470 shares changed hands, and to 68⅛ for the preferred, on sales of 147,612 shares. The close was below the top, but at a net advance for the day. There was a rumor in the early afternoon that the Trust would acquire the Lackawanna Steel Company and a few other rivals, but this was denied, and the best opinion was that the steel shares were being advanced to cover a profit-taking movement in the rest of the list.

THE TRUNK LINE ISSUES.

A similar reason was assigned for the strength in the trunk line issues. Of these Pennsylvania sold up to 132¾ and New York Central touched 128½, but the movement was so evidently due to manipulation that it inspired little confidence, especially when it was found that the other stocks had been sold heavily at the same time.

***

THE UPS AND DOWNS.

The movements in Atlantic Coast Line and Colorado Fuel and Iron were fair samples of the market. The former was bid up sharply, and at once time went up to 131½, closing at 128⅝, an advance of four points. Colorado Fuel, on the contrary, declined to 33½, closing at 34½, a loss of 4¼ points. There was nothing to explain the movement in Atlantic Coast Line. As regards Colorado it was said that the weakness was due to the closing out of a line of stock held by the estate of an old business associate of J. C. Osgood, former President of the company. The coming issue of new stock also exerted an influence.

***

QUICK TURNS EASY TO GET.

This is a fine market for quick turns. Any one that has a hankering after these delightful experiences can get his money's worth right now. One brilliant young trader who thought on Tuesday the market was going to smash sold several hundred shares of St. Paul for a decline. He got rid of the stock at the very lowest eighth, and had to cover with a loss. The same young gentleman yesterday bought Erie, following a well distributed tip, and he got his stock at 33½, the very highest point of the day. He did not sell though, but bought a few hundred more at 31¾, just to average up. It is to be hoped that he will not have to average down.

***

MONEY SLIGHTLY HIGHER.

Money on call reached the highest point in several months yesterday, when loans at 2 per cent. were recorded. Demands are coming in for crop moving purposes, $300,000 having been sent to New Orleans yesterday for that purpose.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

Coal shipments over Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburg and Erie for week ending Sept. 10 were 657,848 tons, making the total for the year to date 27,186,624 tons against 29,348,368 tons last year.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Eagle Fire Company of New York has been called for Sept. 30 to vote on a proposition to increase its capital from $500,000 to $400,000.

Nominal rates for sterling exchange were reduced half a cent yesterday to $4.85 for sixty days and $4.87½ for demand.

Twenty-five shares of Bank of Commerce sold on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 215½.

Pittsburg dispatches state that the Soho blast furnace of the Jones & Laughlins Steel Company has been ordered in blast at once. The third Bessemer steel converter of the South Side plant has been placed on full time after an idleness of six months. This makes the Bessemer department of the works in full operation.

According to Magnolia, Miss., dispatches the stockholders of the Magnolia cotton Mills have authorized the Directors to increase capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000 in order to double the company's present plant.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—United States Steel common to-day displaced Reading common as the active leader of this market, sales of the former aggregating 16,475 shares, against 13,310 shares for the latter. These, with Pennsylvania's sales of 1,503 shares, furnished nearly three-fourths of the day's business. If to this total be added the sales of other arbitrage stocks, it will be found that these issues contributed no less than 50,777 shares out of the day's total of 61,452 shares. Prices of the local stocks held fairly steady, notwithstanding New York's decline. United Gas Improvement was weaker, but in the remainder of the list the recessions were limited to small fractions, while Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing receipts, $50 paid, were up 6 points, and Philadelphia and Erie 1. Bonds were more active than for several months, large blocks of Reading-Jersey Central 4s, United Railways 4s, Philadelphia Company consolidated 5s, and Philadelphia Electric 4s changing hands. Prices, however, did not show any appreciable change. Total sales, 61,452 shares; $248,800 bonds.

NEW SORT OF RAILROAD SPIKE.

Appraiser Whitehead Sustains Protest in Favor of French Importation.

A protest was filed yesterday with the Board of United States General Appraisers against the classification as "screws more than two inches long" at 4 cents a pound of heavy iron screws, which are designed to take the place of ordinary spikes for railroad ties, and which it is claimed by the importers will permit the use of soft woods, such as pine and spruce, for ties, instead of oak, which is becoming scarce. The ordinary spike will not hold in a soft-wood tie.

The article, which is being imported from France for experimental purposes by Lembeck & Co., is an entirely new one, and has given the customs officials a good deal of trouble. It is in the form of a screw, about eight inches long and an inch thick, and instead of the ordinary slotted screw head it has a square head, designed for the application of a wrench. It weighs nearly three pounds.

Appraiser Whitehead finally decided to classify it as a screw, but the importers claim that it is dutiable as a spike at 1 cent a pound.

CHEERS FOR NEW SOUTH AT BANKERS' CONCLAVE

E. E. Prussing of Chicago Would Amend National Banking Act.

TO MEET TRUST COMPANIES

Mr. Wade Announces That the St. Louis Fair Will Be Able to Pay Not Only Debts, but Dividends.

It was left to the Southern members to arouse the enthusiasm of the American Bankers' Association, for until a North Carolina orator took the platform yesterday morning each speaker had been received with polite attention rather than outbursts of applause. When the Southerners, one after the other, told of the South's prosperity and wonderful growth since the war the cheering was deafening. After the set speeches President Edgelow announced the "call of Sections," in order to have representatives of every part of the country describe local conditions. Nobody responded to the call on the North at first, and the Chairman passed on to the South temporarily, introducing George S. Brown, President of the City National Bank of Raleigh, N. C.

"It is useless," said Mr. Brown, "for me to tell you the old story of desolation that followed the civil war, of the period that preceded the time when we came to realize this flag anew, to know it was ours, its stars our stars. The progress of the South in its mines, manufactures, agriculture, education, banks, and general business gives us the right to stand before you today, not as the prodigal son returned, but as the proud child with the right to assist in making his parent land the leader of the world."

The speaker gave instances of the new South's prosperity. He said that a trip from Washington to New Orleans on any train would show flourishing crops in every field that was a barren, untilled waste a few years ago. Cotton alone had brought hundreds of millions into the South within a year. Into his own State one small industry—the shipping of strawberries—had brought more than $1,000,000, and the berries sent out through the Port of Wilmington in the year would fill a train of freight cars eight miles long.

CHEERS FOR THE NEW SOUTH.

The end of Mr. Brown's speech was marked by long cheering, and scores of the delegates rushed up to the platform and shook hands with him.

R. F. Maddox, First Vice President of the Maddox-Rucker Banking Company of Atlanta, came next. Georgia, he said, with a population containing 90 per cent. of native-born Americans, was "as loyal to the flag as New York." In 100 out of 137 counties, he said, no liquor was allowed to be sold, and in the cities the licenses were very high.

"There is not one gambling house in Atlanta," he said, and the audience applauded.

J. Wirt Randall, President of the Farmers' National Bank of Annapolis, Md., said that the National banks must either get new currency legislation or contract incurable disease. He deplored the "gross impropriety" of trust companies engaging in a promoting business.

"That was what caused the wrecking of two Baltimore trust concerns," he added. "It taught Maryland a lesson that the trust companies and State banks should be required to keep the same reserves as the National banks. This association ought to pass a resolution to that effect." [Applause.]

Festus J. Wade, President of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, told of the Exposition, saying that he wanted to surprise the audience by making this announcement:

"It was a slander at any time to say that the fair was in danger of a receivership. The Ninety-three Directors, backed by the banks and trust companies of St. Louis, have guaranteed to pay back all the Government loan, and already more than $3,000,000 of it has been paid. The Exposition not only will pay all its debts, but it will pay dividends. That I know positively."

Joseph C. Hendrix, ex-President of the National Bank of Commerce of this city and formerly President of the association, took the platform for the North. He said the outlook of the North in respect to the South and West had changed in ten years. There had been a new influence from the prosperity of those sections, and it was reflected here.

A. V. Lane, Vice President of the National Exchange Bank of Dallas, Texas, an J. K. Wilson, President of the San Francisco National Bank, spoke for their States.

Following an opening prayer by Mgr. M. J. Lavelle of St. Patrick's Cathedral, A. J. Frame, President of the Waukesha National Bank of Waukesha, Wis., read a set paper on "Panic Panaceas," in the course of which he said:

"Our battle for the world's standard of value has been practically won. Now the paramount economic question before the American people is, How can we minimize conditions which produce panics, and also ameliorate their after paralyzing effects? Panics undoubtedly cannot be prevented. Notwithstanding this, I am a firm believer in bettering panic conditions, both as to their frequency and severity. But how? My answer is:

By studying history and profiting by the experiences of the past.

By passing conservative and sound banking laws, and then enforcing them.

By providing cash on sound lines to meet extraordinary demands and immediately retiring it as soon as the pressure for funds is over, to prevent inflation and also be ready for the next emergency.

"Why not empower the Government to issue but one kind of note, to wit, a legal-tender note payable on demand in gold coin, and substitute it for all other Government issues of legal-tender notes, as well as gold and silver certificates, thus simplifying and absolutely settling the quality question of all Government issues?

"To prevent locking up money in the Treasury, provide for depositing all surplus funds over current requirements in the banks.

"Raise the limit of reduction of National banknotes from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000 a month."

SILENCE AT BRYAN'S NAME.

Speaking of "The Western Banker," W. C. Robinson of Kansas said that the class was the product practically of the last decade, before which it had no been considered of much importance.

"The West," he said, "was considered for many years the birthplace of the wildest vagaries, prominent among which was Populism. Free silver—sixteen to one—if it had not its origin in the West, found there its strongest and most brilliant advocate, William Jennings Bryan, a born master of men."

The speaker paused. There was not a sound of applause or disapproval from the audience, which packed the Waldorf-Astoria's ballroom from end to end.

Mr. Robinson praised the work of James H. Eckels as Controller of the Currency, a man to whom the Western banking interests were indebted for much.

"He was a Moses," continued the speaker, "saved for that purpose. He was one of the great Grover Clevelands wise and prudent selections."

Some applause greeted Mr. Cleveland's name. It did not last, however. As before, the bankers evidently did not intend to insult any political flavor into their meeting.

"The Western banker," said Mr. Robinson, "has always been right on economic questions. He did his full part in the great battles of 1896 and 1900, when our money standard was at stake. He has always been a firm believer in the full value of the dollar, and that the dollar of any stamp should be worth one hundred cents. When the great free-silver champion was looking for a prominent banker for his service and co-operation, he passed the Western banker and found his man in this great city."

Eugene E. Prussing's paper on "Banks and Trust Companies" was read by his partner, Frank H. McCulloch of Chicago, and was in part as follows:

"Broadly speaking, State banks and trust companies are not regulated by law in their investments and loans, and there is practically no requirement as to their cash reserve, while the National banks are closely guarded by law in both respects, so that to-day, instead of being far and away the leaders in financial affairs, they are struggling for place, and are obliged to ally themselves with institutions of the trust company class to maintain a fair position with the leaders in the financial world.

"It is with great hesitancy that I suggest at least a partial remedy in the expansion of the National Banking act, so as to cover modern conditions.

"If it were so amended as to permit not only the acceptance of all kinds of deposits and banking business, including the administration of trusts, with corresponding power to make not only commercial, but also time and real estate loans, and long investments of savings deposits, all under proper regulations and in due proportions to the deposits received; with such further regulations as to cash reserves and reserve agencies as the different classes of deposits suggest and properly require, much would be accomplished in the right direction, by placing the National banks on an equal footing with the State banks and trust companies as to the power to do business, and giving the National banks the great advantage of proper legal restrictions and regulation. The amendments regulating investments and reserves would be comparatively simple matters, for we have many precedents in experience and in existing laws of various kinds."

BANKERS VISIT SUBWAY.

Four Five-Car Trains Carry National Park Bank Party.

Four fully equipped trains of five cars each, placed at the service of the National Park Bank by August Belmont, one of its Directors, yesterday afternoon carried about 2,300 correspondents and friends of this financial institution through the subway from Thirty-third to Ninety-sixth Street, back to the City Hall, and again to the point of starting. Many of the guests were accompanied by their wives and daughters.

The four sections of the excursion, the largest yet to test the workings of the subway system, were under the direct supervision of Superintendent A. L. Merritt, whose staff included Trainmaster O. Hayes and Motor Instructor G. M. Morrison. The guests of the Park Bank were received at the up-town station at Thirty-third Street by a committee of its officers. The first section, with 800 passengers, started shortly before 2 P. M., and the last at 2:15 P. M.

The average time from Thirty-third to Ninety-sixth Street was eight and one-half minutes, and that of the trip south to City Hall seventeen minutes. Owing to the number of workmen active at various points a pilot engine preceded the first section on the trip north. On the trains were General Manager E. P. Bryan and Superintendent Frank Hedley. The excursionists marveled from start to finish, the women being especially demonstrative in delight at the smoothness of transit, the spick-and-span appearance of the route and the stations, the illumination, and the atmosphere of the tunnels.

Some of those on the trains were:

Ellis H. Roberts, United States Treasurer.
Robert R. Armstrong, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.
William Sherer, manager New York Clearing House.
S. Wolverton, President Gallatin National Bank.
James R. Branch, Secretary American Bankers' Association.

NEEDLE'S EYE FOR BANKERS.

Luna Park Variety Not Too Small for Rich Men on Camel Back.

Members of the American Bankers' Association, together with their families and friends, numbering all told 7,000 persons, had things all their own way last night at Coney Island, where the show managers had made special arrangements to entertain them.

At Luna Park they were startled on entering "Durbar of Delhi" to find erected in front of them a huge needle of canvas and plaster of paris, with an eye large enough not only for a camel to pass through, but for the passage of a camel with a rich man on his back. The needle was painted a steel color, and every banker in the party was anxious to see the camels go through the eye, and to go through himself. There weren't camels enough in the place to accommodate all who wanted to take the ride, and it looked at one time as if two or more of the rich men would have to ride through at once in order to satisfy all hands.

Two thousand members and guests of the American Bankers' Association and their wives and friends went to the Knickerbocker Theatre last night to see Lulu Glaser in "A Madcap Princess," which is a musical version of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." As many more of them will see the same play to-night, the Knickerbocker having been bought out for both performances.

Souvenir spoons were distributed, and the boxes were decorated with monograms worked in electric lights. A special programme had a photograph of Miss Glaser on the title page. When the curtain fell between the acts waiters passed down the aisles and gave everybody in the audience a little box that was in the form of a miniature safe. When the lock was turned to the combination the safe opened and disclosed a tiny package of ice cream. There were Chinese silk napkins to go with it.

The New Amsterdam Theatre, where "The Rogers Brothers in Paris" is the attraction, was also packed with the bankers.

MANY ELEVATOR ACCIDENTS.

Death of Thirty Persons Since Jan. 1 Stirs Coroner.

At any inquest yesterday afternoon into the death of William Becker, who was killed by the fall of a freight elevator at 265-267 Mercer Street on Aug. 15, Coroner Jackson said that since Jan. 1 there have been thirty persons killed and many more injured by faulty elevators. He believed it was time that something was done to lessen the number of these accidents.

Several of the occupants of the elevator at the time of the accident testified that they were compelled to ride in the freight elevator by order of the Superintendent of the building. Francis E. Ward, the owner of the building, refused to testify, as did the elevator conductor, Leonard Schmidt, as they are under bail on a charge of homicide. The jury returned a verdict censuring the management of the building.

COTTON SPINNERS' CONGRESS.

Plan to be Laid Before Southern Bankers at a Dinner Here.

In order to enable the cotton spinners of New England and Europe to study cotton growing and manufacturing possibilities in the South, there is to be held, probably in Atlanta, an international cotton spinners' convention. Richard H. Edmonds, editor of The Manufacturers' Record, has sent an open letter on the subject to Col. Robert J. Lowry of Atlanta, who has laid the matter before the Bankers' Association, now in session here. Mr. Edmonds and S. F. B. Morse, President of the Southern Cotton Corporation, will give a dinner at Sherry's to-night to the Southern bankers attending the association's meeting, in order to have the proposed cotton meeting discussed.

The Governors of several Southern States, says Mr. Edmonds's letter, have joined in the plan, and favorable replies have been received from many cotton men in England, a member of the English cotton manufacturers' organization having said his associates probably would accept the invitation officially. Southern bankers wishing to attend to-night's dinner have been asked to give their names to E. W. Lane or L. J. Hillyer, care of the Bankers' Association, so that cards of admission may be sent to them.

PARADERS STAB POLICEMAN.

He Tries to Drive Through Line and Riot Follows.

Following the attempt of a "plain-clothes" policeman to drive through the line of an Italian parade there was a small riot at Third Avenue and President Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. The policeman was stabbed five times and the reserves of the Bergen Street Station were called out to quell the disturbance.

About 300 Italians were in the parade, which was being held in observance of a religious festival. Patrolman Andrew Sesselman of the Boiler Inspection Squad, with his driver, Henry Smith, came down President Street just as the procession reached that point on Third Avenue. Sesselman was in a hurry, and signaled that a break be made in the line. The marshal consented to his going through, but other paraders, thinking that the procession would be thrown into confusion, refused to give way. When the driver started to go ahead a half dozen Italians sprang to the horse's head and forced the wagon back. In an instant there was an uproar. Men on the sidewalk began throwing bricks, and the Italians started in to do some brick throwing themselves. Policeman Sesselman was dragged from the wagon, beaten, and stabbed in the left shoulder and right leg. He broke from his assailants and ran into a drug store near by.

Some one had sent word to the Bergen Street Station, and the police reserves came on the run. They soon dispersed the crowd, and arrested two men on suspicion of having stabbed Sesselman. The prisoners described themselves as John Romanneli and Julian Buffo, living in Fourth Avenue, and were locked up. The policeman's revolver was found in the pocket of one of the prisoners. Sesselman flourished the weapon when he was attacked, to scare off his assailants, and it was snatched from him. The policeman was not dangerously hurt.

"Pretty smooth."

ITALIAN SOCIALISTS BEGIN GREAT STRIKE

Government Fights Movement Intended to Involve Country.

SOME FEAR OF REVOLUTION

Fatal Conflicts Between Rioters and Gendarmes—Authorities Suppress News.

ROME, Sept. 16.—To protest against a conflict between strikers and the police, in which two strikers, a Sardinian and a Sicilian, were killed, the Socialists have decided on a general strike throughout Italy.

A general strike is in preparation for to-morrow throughout the peninsula and in Rome, the time for its beginning being set for noon.

The strike in Milan began to-day.

Conflicts have already occurred near Genoa between the populace and the gendarmes. Several gendarmes were mortally injured, and it was necessary to call out the troops, many of whom were wounded.

The Government has taken extraordinary measures to suppress the strike and has stopped all telegrams referring to it.

EXPECT A GENERAL RISING.

Views of Italians Here—An Importer Warned of Impending Trouble.

The general opinion last night among prominent Italians in this city seemed to be that the brief cable dispatch from Rome indicated a general uprising of Socialists throughout Italy. One of those who expressed this belief, a well-known importer, said he knew as far back as three weeks ago that the Italian Government was preparing to combat a Socialistic uprising, and that in consequence of the information which he had received he had canceled many orders for goods, at the same time hurrying along such orders as he knew could be filled within a short time.

"Three weeks ago," said the importer, "I was informed by cable that I had better hurry along my orders, as trouble was expected from the laboring classes in the Neapolitan district. Immediately following the receipt of this cable I received a letter from one of my representatives at Naples informing me that a cable dispatch would reach me just as soon as there was any sign of trouble among the Socialists and Anarchists, who, the letter said, were better organized now than they had ever been before. But the cable dispatch reached me before I got the letter. I did not understand the true meaning of the cable until I received the letter.

"The letter stated that the Socialists were preparing for a general uprising and that they would create much trouble throughout the country by ordering strikes in every city in the kingdom. The plan was to terrorize the capitalists throughout the country and then pillage. There was no mention in the letter of a general revolution, but it is my belief that a revolution will follow the Anarchistic rioting that was planned.

"The Government, I was informed, had been made cognizant of the fact that the Socialists and Anarchists intended to start these riots, and the most stringent measures were adopted to prevent a general uprising.

"I would not be surprised to hear that an Anarchistic order had been secretly sent out to make open war on the Government as soon as the announcement was made that an heir had been born to the Italian Throne. Of course, this is mere guesswork on my part; but I was told in the letter I received three weeks ago that the Government had taken extra precautions to guard Racconigi against any attack that might be made upon the palace. While the King and Queen are loved by most of their people, some of their subjects have been quietly organizing and planning their overthrow with a view to establishing a republic.

Cutthroats Hope for Pillage.

"Among those who have joined this secret movement there are many out-and-out cutthroats who are pretending to be Socialistic leaders, while in reality they are Anarchists, whose sole object is to cause trouble throughout Italy, so that their fellowers may pillage the coffers of the rich. I would be willing to bet half of what I'm worth that the strike described as starting in Milan is a revolutionary movement started by the cutthroat class I refer to. While posing as political lenders, they are really thieves, who for a long time have been anxious to bring about a state of chaos in Italy, so that they may work their game of prey.

"But from the information I have received in the past I am satisfied that the Government is well able to meet the situation successfully, even though a general revolution has really broken out. The agents of the Government have a long list of names of troublemakers, and just as soon as there was the least sign of a revolution the Government officers would make wholesale arrests."

The editors of the Italian newspapers published in this city received copies of the dispatch from Milan, but they will simply print the dispatch to-day without comment. At the offices of Il Progresso it was said that while three columns of to-day's issue would be devoted to the announcement of the birth of an heir to the throne, ten lines would be devoted to the news of the trouble in Italy.

The reason for this, it was explained, was that the paper was sympathetic with the Italian Government and would print nothing that might tend to stir up the Italian Socialists and anarchists residing in America. The Italian newspaper men, however, seemed to think that the trouble at Milan was an attempt to create an outbreak throughout the country.

The Bread Riots of 1898.

The censorship on news regarding the strike in Italy is an indication of a situation of extreme gravity. The last time such a censorship was exercised was during the terrible bread riots in 1898, when a condition practically of civil war existed at Milan and elsewhere, and when nothing less than a revolution was threatened.

It is evident that the brief dispatch from Rome printed to-day is all that the correspondent was allowed to send.

A strike of any magnitude in Italy is an even more serious matter than a similar strike in France, Spain, or any other Latin country. The workingmen, in previous strikes, have displayed a remarkable power of organization, and in 1898 there was every indication that the strikers, most of them Republicans, had made elaborate preparations for a revolutionary uprising. The feeling resulting from these bread riots has by no means been extinguished.

In 1898 it was only when Gen. Pelloux, with half an army corps, marched on Milan from Lodi and cleared out the rebels with round shot that the Government gained control of the situation. For days the insurgents were masters of Milan, and when they were subdued workingmen and peasants, including even laborers employed in France and Switzerland, were hastening to Milan to take part in the uprising.

Want of bread was the cause of the first outbreaks in 1898 in Sicily and the Neapolitan Province, but this was only a pretext in other parts of Italy, where the workingmen went on strike with no other object than to aid in the uprising, each town striving to outdo its neighbor in revolutionary exploits.

A remarkable feature of the outbreak was the prominent part in it taken by the women. At Milan, during two days of sanguinary fighting, wives, instead of restraining their husbands, urged them on, and even rushed in front of the soldiers, calling them cowards and assassins. A large proportion of those killed, who numbered hundreds, were women.

Civil War in Milan.

It was literally civil war which was waged in Milan for two days. The insurgents erected no less than seventeen barricades. Telegraph wires were cut and strung across the streets to impede cavalry charges. Breaking into palaces and other large buildings, the rioters mounted to the roofs and hurled down tiles and stones upon the soldiers. The troops were fired upon from behind window blinds.

At one of the gates the troops had to fight thousands of peasants armed with scythes and hatchets, who tried to join the workingmen in the city. Cavalry charges and volleys from the infantry were used against the insurgents, but the barricades did not fall until cannon were employed.

It was only by measures of extreme rigor that the Government finally quelled the revolt. The Republican leaders in all parts of the country were placed under arrest. Editors were sentenced to from four to six years' imprisonment. Rioters received long sentences with hard labor. A great number of the persons implicated in the uprising fled to Switzerland, and it is to be expected, if the present outbreak spreads, that they will return to fan the flames.

ITALIAN KING'S BOUNTY.

In Honor of Heir's Birth Gives $200,000 for Old Age Fund for Workmen.

ROME, Sept. 16.—King Victor Emmanuel has received the warmest congratulations throughout the Kingdom and also most cordial dispatches from Emperor Nicholas, Emperor William, President Loubet, King Edward, and Emperor Francis Joseph. The Queen of Roumania sent Queen Helena a poem on the event.

The infant Prince will be baptized by Cardinal Richelmy, Archbishop of Turin, and will be christened Humbert.

To celebrate the birth of the Crown Prince the King has donated the sum of $200,000 toward an Old Age Fund for workmen.

BUILDERS SAY IT'S A BLUFF.

Take Little Stock in the Talk of a General Strike.

At the Building Trades Club members of the Employers' Association said yesterday that they did not take much stock in the threat of a general strike of all the unions, including those not connected with the Building Trades Alliance. Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee, said he regarded it as a bluff.

"The strikers can pass all the resolutions they like," he said, "but when it comes to delivering the goods that is another matter. The ironworkers and other unions not involved in the trouble will think twice before they go on strike again after their experience of last year."

There was a further conference of representatives of various building trades unions last night to decide on the proposition of helping the locked-out unions by a sympathetic strike. After a lot of talk the meeting resolved to address all the union men engaged in the building trades on the present situation and ask them to vote on a strike.

The Building Committee of the School Board is still anxious about the tied-up schools. The number of men at work on schools has been diminishing, and so far none of the tied-up schools has been manned. On Sept. 5, 1,939 men were at work on the school buildings, and yesterday the number had dwindled to 1,622. Bids are to be opened on Monday for three new schools—one in Manhattan, one in Brooklyn, and one in Long Island City—with an aggregate seating capacity of 5,000.

The action of the National Association of Plumbers in supplying strike breakers to the Employers Association in place of the locked-out plumbers has so incensed the Building Trades Alliance that its unions threaten to leave the federation unless the men are withdrawn. At a meeting of the alliance yesterday it was decided that an ultimatum to this effect would be submitted to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, which is now in session at Washington.

Nearly all the unions in the alliance are in the federation.

PARKER GETS GORMAN HERE TO HELP LEADERS

Senator Will Stay Until Election—Taggart Wanted Him.

MANY CONFERENCES ARE HELD

Before the Judge Goes Back He Sees Murphy and Hill Together—Tammany Against Grout.

The Democratic nominee for President, Alton B. Parker, had a busy day of it at the Hotel Astor yesterday. Almost from the time he arose he was concerned in conferences with both National and State leaders. Only once did he leave his room during the day, and that was to meet a delegation of bankers that called at the hotel.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Judge Parker, accompanied by Secretary McCausland and Charles S. Hamlin of Boston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in the last Cleveland Administration, left the hotel in an electric cab and was driven to the West Shore Ferry at Forty-second Street. He took the 6:30 o'clock train for Esopus.

The Gubernatorial situation was thoroughly canvassed by Mr. Parker and his friends, and the Presidential candidate went away with some up-to-date data as to the strength and backing of the respective candidates.

The only statement that came directly from Judge Parker yesterday concerned the position of Senator Gorman in the campaign. After declining to discuss in detail any other of the matters that brought him to New York, Judge Parker said that Senator Gorman had consented to take an important place in the management of the campaign, and that his decision was at the earnest request of Chairman Taggart as well as all the other campaign managers. He said that Mr. Taggart would not be supplanted or superseded in any way, and the Senator would not handle any of the details of campaign management. Judge Parker said that Senator Gorman would act in an advisory capacity only, and would remain in New York practically all the time from now until election.

Although he admitted that nearly all of his callers yesterday discussed the various candidates for the Governorship with him, Judge Parker would not comment on the situation, except to say that he was opposed to a decision in favor of any candidate as the result of conferences such as have been in progress at the Hotel Astor. He said that no decision could be reached at this time.

It is understood that several of the men who called on Judge Parker yesterday were summoned to the Hotel Astor by him and that a number of elements in the party that had not agreed very well have been harmoniously blended now, as a result of talks with the head of the ticket.

The first man to arrive at the hotel yesterday was Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany Hall. He called at 9 o'clock and was closeted with the Judge for an hour. Mr. Murphy called again at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and remained until a few minutes before the Judge left the hotel for his home. The other leaders who called were Senator Gorman, David B. Hill, who was present during part of Mr. Murphy's second visit; August Belmont, W. Bourke Cockran, William F. Sheehan, Urey Woodson, Secretary of the National Committee; John B. McDonald, De Lancey Nicoll, Senator Victor J. Dowling, Capt. Charles Campbell, Senator Guy, Thomas F. Smith, and a number of lesser lights, who, however, did not take up much of the Judge's time.

It is said on authority that, as a result of Mr. Murphy's visit, Judge Parker made it clear that no man distasteful to Tammany Hall ought to head the State ticket. On the other hand, it is known that Murphy and his followers will fall into line behind the nominee, no matter who he is. Tammany Hall cannot do otherwise. Murphy is on record as saying that he will loyally support the nominee of the Saratoga Convention next week. It is said, however, that he would oppose the nomination of Controller Grout.

George M. Palmer of Schoharie, the minority leader in the Assembly for several years, was mentioned prominently for the candidate for Governor yesterday. Victor J. Dowling was loud in his praises, and he was named by Mr. Murphy as one of the men that Tammany would support. The others were Edward M. Shepard and Judge Gaynor.

Should the nomination of Grout be forced in spite of Tammany's wishes, Mr. Grout, it is said, would not resign the Controllership until after the election—this because McCarren's sway in Kings County might be seriously damaged if Grout went out of office at this time.

The name of Judge D. Cady Herrick was mentioned yesterday in connection with the Gubernatorial nomination. It was said, however, that his claims were not presented to Judge Parker by any one authorized to represent him.

The Business Men's League is booming Cornelius A. Pugsley of Peekskill for the nomination, and the members say that he is the only man who can carry Westchester County for the Democratic ticket. They point out that Mr. Pugsley was the only Democrat elected to Congress in 1900 between New York and Buffalo. Whatever fight Pugsley's friends will make will be at Saratoga. No one called on Judge Parker yesterday to urge Mr. Pugsley's claims.

Secretary McCausland said just before leaving this city for Esopus that it had been practically settled that Judge Parker will make several speeches in the campaign. This has been strongly urged by Mr. Sheehan. Mr. McCausland said, however, that it was not decided where or when the Judge would speak.

It was said last night that arrangements were being made through the National Committee for the visit of delegations to Esopus. The delegations will be addressed briefly by Judge Parker. This method of reaching the public was adopted by President McKinley during the campaign of 1896, when he was a candidate for the first time. It is not planned, however, to send as many delegations to Esopus as went to Canton.

Judge Parker's reception of the bankers in this city to attend the convention was held at 4 o'clock in the Blue Parlor of the Hotel Astor. As each delegate was introduced by Secretary Woodson of the National Committee, Judge Parker grasped his hand and made some remark in his usual cordial manner. Several women went with the delegates and met Judge Parker. While the reception was going on Senator Hill and Mr. Murphy were waiting up stairs in the candidate's room, and the reception was hurried through on that account.

BOOKKEEPER TO BOOKMAKER.

Floyd-Jones's Employe Is Said to Have Stolen $25,000.

On the complaint of his employer, Edward H. Floyd-Jones, a lawyer at 51 Wall Street, who alleges forgeries and embezzlements amounting to $25,000, Frank O'Donnell, eighteen years old, of 166 Clermont Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Brighton Beach race track. Until ten days ago O'Donnell was bookkeeper in Mr. Floyd-Jones's office. The detectives found him making a book at the track, with half a dozen sheet writers and runners about him. He said he had been doing well at the business since he disappeared from the law office.

O'Donnell failed to appear at the office on Tuesday following Labor Day. Mr. Floyd-Jones, who has been in Europe and at the St. Louis Fair all Summer, returned four days later, and then, according to the complaint, discovered the alleged defalcations. He placed the matter in the hands of the police, and yesterday Detective Flannelly found the youthful bookkeeper in his stand at the Brighton Beach betting ring, with a corps of seven sheet writers and runners working at top speed. When just after the third race the detective told O'Donnell what he wanted, the young man did not seem surprised. He merely asked permission to remain until he could settle his bets on the fourth race.

Flannelly consented and O'Donnell mounted his stool as calmly as if nothing had happened. When the race was over O'Donnell paid the bets against him, made arrangements to close up for the day, and was excessively polite in taking leave of his subordinates. Then he accompanied Flannelly to the train and was brought to Manhattan, where he was locked up at Police Headquarters.

On the way to the city O'Donnell said that since Tuesday, when he established himself as a bookmaker, he had cleared $2,200, $700 of which he made on the first four races yesterday. Flannelly said the youth displayed a big roll of bills as evidence of his story.

According to his employer's complaint, O'Donnell got money by raising the figures of his salary checks, and "doctoring" the figures in the books of the Robert B. Floyd-Jones estate, at Massapequa, L. I. It is alleged that he was able to do this without detection, owing to Edward H. Floyd-Jones's absence for such a long period. O'Donnell had been with the lawyer for several years, and had worked himself up to the post of bookkeeper.

MAJOR TOTTEN BOLTS ODELL.

Can't Stand for the Governor and Gives Up State Ticket.

Major John W. Totten, Secretary of the State League of Republican Clubs, and executive committeeman of the National League of the same organization, is the first bolter against Gov. Odell's machine, made State ticket.

Major Totten last night forwarded to Syracuse, where the League is to meet today to formulate plans for the State campaign, his resignation as secretary and State committeeman.

"I will not stand for Odell and his methods," said Major Totten last night. "Odell has put himself above the party and the leaders, and is grabbing everything in sight. His absolute dictatorship has put the party in a bad way at a time when it needed all the votes it could get, and I consider that the situation in the State has been jeopardized by his actions. So far as the State ticket is concerned, I am through with it. I don't see how any man with a particle of independence can stand for Odell any longer."

Major Totten and Gen. E. A. McAlpin, formerly President of the league, were its founders, and were prominently identified with all its work. Major Totten has been a life-long Republican.

JEROME, ATTORNEY GENERAL?

One Topic of Local Conference, Albany Report Says.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 16.—David B. Hill reached home this evening. He declined to talk for publication about the New York conferences, but said that he would be at his office to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, when the names of the temporary and permanent Chairmen for next week's convention will be announced. Senator Hill, accompanied by a number of prominent Democrats, will leave here for Saratoga on Monday morning.

Despite the statement that Daniel S. Lamont is averse to allowing his name to be presented for the nomination for Governor, the strong sentiment prevailing, it is said here, may still induce him to take the nomination if the convention should select him.

No ticket was agreed upon at the conference in New York. Mr. Jerome was considered for the nomination for Attorney General.

CAUGHT ROBBERS BY WIRE.

Telegraph Operator, Held Up, Flashed Message for Help.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Confronted by two robbers flourishing knives in front of him, Joseph Johnson, a Philadelphia and Reading Railway telegraph operator, ticked a warning to Headquarters, resulting in the capture of the men after a thrilling locomotive ride.

Johnson was at Lofty, a small station on the Catawissa Division. After 10:30 o'clock he heard a noise at the door and saw two men with knives. They demanded all the money, and threatened to kill Johnson.

He kept his finger on the key and flashed a message for help to Tamaqua as he talked to them. The robbers realized what he had done and attacked him and then fled with the money.

A locomotive had pulled in from the north a few minutes before, and a brakeman was dispatched to the office for orders. Johnson told him of the robbery and was informed that the two men had just boarded the locomotive.

Johnson wired Tamaqua, explaining the situation, and was advised to inform the engineer to start immediately with a clear track ahead and run swiftly so that the men could not jump off. Rickert started at full speed, and Johnson sent a message here for the authorities to be on the alert.

Tamaqua headquarters flashed word to all operators between Lofty and here to keep the track of the engine clear. The engine dashed into town, stopping at the crossing, where the engineer had observed a group of policemen in waiting. They surrounded the locomotive, and as the strangers leaped to the ground to escape they were captured.

HILL'S SLATE: GROUT AND GUGGENHEIMER

Senator Piqued by Tentative Talk with Mr. Jerome.

JEROME VERY INDEPENDENT

Wouldn't Promise Not to Attack Any One or Anything If He Was Nominated for Governor.

If David B. Hill has anything to do with the nomination of a candidate for Governor at Saratoga Springs next week it is probable that the friends of District Attorney Jerome will have to feel the brunt of his opposition, according to excellent authority. This is because of the reception accorded the State leader by the District Attorney at the Criminal Courts Building on Thursday morning.

It is understood that the ex-Senator went there primarily to see what Mr. Jerome had to say for himself and how he felt with reference to the Gubernatorial nomination. Before the visitor had been in Mr. Jerome's office five minutes he found that, if anything, the District Attorney felt very independent about it. The Albany leader sounded Mr. Jerome along several lines and on all found him the same. Mr. Jerome was desirous enough of discussing his chances, but didn't discuss them in a manner at all satisfactory to his visitor.

Propositions as to what he would do or what he would not do for the nomination and in the campaign if he was named were put forward. Mr. Jerome viewed them coolly enough, it is said, tilted back in his chair, and, it is understood, told the State leader that he wouldn't do this and would do that and so on to the end of the chapter.

There was no inference or "perhaps" about the District Attorney's answers. Each was straight and decisive. Mr. Hill was not disconcerted, but he was rather given to marveling at the attitude of the man with whom he was conferring.

Mr. Jerome was asked plainly how much he wanted the Governorship nomination. Just how he answered does not appear in the trustworthy reports of the proceedings, but how he answered Mr. Hill's inquiries as to his possible course on the stump does.

In answers to questions, the District Attorney declared flatly that he wouldn't agree to avoid attacking anybody or any proposition he saw fit, that he would make such a campaign as suited his own views, and that he wouldn't be bound by the State Committee, the National Committee, the State Executive Committee, or any individual. He would, he is understood to have said, if he got the nomination, obtain it by no promises whatever of any nature, and that if the Albany leader and the forces he controls wanted to give it to him without any strings, all right; if they didn't, all well and good anyway.

The upshot was that Mr. Hill went away from the District Attorney's office firmly convinced that its occupant was altogether too uncertain a quantity and too much given to his own way to be available to run for the chief office in the State. To say the least, Mr. Hill wasn't favorably impressed. He had sought to offer or at least tender something, or the suggestion of something, and he had an unexpected rebuff.

Those close to the Senator were told yesterday that Jerome would never do if he continues in his present attitude. Thereupon the few whom the Senator honored with his confidence declared that while Senator Hill may not be able to dictate the nomination of the Gubernatorial nominee, he can at least prevent the nomination of any man he doesn't like, want, or think desirable, for that he will control enough of the convention to hold up a nomination no one doubts.

When the close friends of Senator Hill learned of the result of the Jerome conference they gathered closer to their leader, and as a result this slate was agreed upon, with two vacancies, and all kinds of doubt attaching to the chief office, though nevertheless it can be stated that Mr. Grout up to midnight was nearer the nomination than Mr. Jerome, if the nomination shall be decided by the influence of David Bennett Hill:

Governor—EDWARD M. GROUT of Kings.
Lieutenant Governor—RANDOLPH GUGGENHEIMER or FRANCIS BURTON HARRISON of New York.
Secretary of State—JOHN PALLACE, Jr., of Monroe.
Controller—
Treasurer—
Attorney General—CHARLES N. BULGER of Oswego.
Surveyor—RUSSELL R. STUART of Onondaga.

George A. Hall of St. Lawrence was for months Mr. Hill's candidate for the Controllership, but this week Mr. Hall declared he could not think of performing the duties of the office if he should be named.

The Treasurership likewise is left open.

There is no doubt that ex-Congressman C. A. Pugsley of Westchester County could have either nomination if he would take it, but there is not much hope among the Democrats anywhere that the Peekskill banker would accept a place on the State ticket. His close political friends in Westchester want him to run for Congress again in the Nineteenth District. Mr. Hill has had Mr. Guggenheimer in mind for four months for the Lieutenant Governorship. He declares him a highly desirable man for the nomination in the middle week of June, at a time when he was quite confident that he would be able to nominate John B. Stanchfield for Governor.

He has also had Assemblyman Pallace of Brockport in mind for the same length of time. Pallace would be the youngest man on the ticket if the Hill slate goes through.

C. N. Bulger ran for Lieutenant Governor with Cole in 1902 against Frank W. Higgins, now Republican nominee for Governor. R. R. Stuart was the nominee for Surveyor in 1900 on the ticket with Stanchfield and Danforth. It is known that Horatio Seymour, Jr., can have the nomination for Surveyor if he wants it, but, as he has decreed otherwise, Stuart has been slated. Seymour has been an incumbent of the office, and Stuart was one of his division engineers in the eighties.

It is understood that Senator Hill is still against the nomination of Judge Cullen by the Democratic Convention. Close friends of his declared yesterday that he had said to them that Cullen would never be nominated, or words to that effect, if he had anything to say about it.

On the other hand, the very close friends of Judge Parker aver that to refuse to give Cullen the nomination for the Court of Appeals would be a great mistake, perhaps a fatal blunder. These views of the candidate are being put before Mr. Hill daily. If there is anything certain in State politics to-day it is that Mr. Hill's attitude in regard to Cullen if persisted in will bring on a fine old row in the State Convention over the nomination for Chief Judge.

It is understood that Congressman W. Bourke Cockran is being considered for one of the Chairmanships of the convention on Tuesday. Tammany Hall would be content with either the temporary or permanent honor.

The platform will contain scores of references to that adopted at St. Louis and will include excerpts from Judge Parker's speech of acceptance. The gold telegram will be mentioned.

SAYS PEACE MAY COME SOON.

Russian Statesman Also Thinks a Russo-Japanese Alliance Likely.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17.—The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says that a Russian statesman whose name, if revealed, "would wing his utterance with lightning rapidity over the globe," asserted yesterday that it was his impression that the war might end sooner than people imagined, not through mediation, but through mutual recognition of the ruinous nature of the conflict, which would lead to negotiations that would result in a Russo-Japanese alliance.

He contended, the correspondent says, that although Russia in the end could exhaust and crush Japan, yet Japan could hold out long enough to place an intolerable and useless strain upon Russia.

Russia, therefore, it was added, was confronted with the alternative either of Japan's ruin purchased by ruinous sacrifices, or of a treaty of cordial friendship, followed in the fullness of time by that offensive and defensive alliance which for years constituted the ideal of the Japanese Government.

SHAH DECORATES AMERICAN.

Makes a Pittsburg Man One of the Commanders of the Lion and Sun.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—A. A. Reutis, manager of the foreign department of the Iron City Trust Company of this city, has just received the firman from the Persian Government by which the Shah bestows upon him the order of the Commandership of the Lion and Sun. This is the highest decoration awarded to foreigners in Persia.

It has been bestowed in view of the growing business between Persia and the United States. In fact, the carpet import from Persia to the United States is rated at nearly $5,000,000 this year, and many of the buyers went direct to Persia with letters of introduction and recommendation from Mr. Reutis to the authorities.

EX-GOV. MORTON RETURNS.

Comes with Family on Liner for Daughter's Funeral.

The French liner La Lorraine, from Havre, anchored in Quarantine last night. She will land her passengers at her pier in the North River at about 8 o'clock this morning.

Ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton and his family are on the Lorraine. They are going immediately to Ellerslie-on-the-Hudson to attend the funeral of his daughter, Miss Lena Morton, whose body arrived on La Savoie two weeks ago.

The Rev. Charles Wagner, the Alsatian minister, and the author of "The Simple Life" and "By the Fireside," is also on board La Lorraine. Mr. Wagner is the pastor of one of the largest congregations in Paris, and comes to America to lecture in English on "The Simple Life" and "The France of To-day—Its Religious, Social, and Moral Movements."

HURRY AND SEE THE FALLS.

Prof. Gilbert Says They Will Be Gone in 3,500 Years.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 16.—The International Geographic Congress met here today. Commander Robert E. Peary of the United States Navy called the delegates to order and introduced the principal speaker, Prof. Grove Karl Gilbert of Brooklyn.

Prof. Gilbert spoke on the formation of Niagara Falls and the gorge. A picture taken of the Horseshoe Fall in 1827 was shown. There has been a remarkable recession in seventy-five years.

At the end of the glacial period, he said, the land was tilted as a result of the retreat of the ice. If this tilting continues Lake Erie will in the course of time find another outlet, and Niagara River will be dry. This change would be wrought in possibly 3,500 years.

The scientists left for Chicago to-night, where another meeting will be held.

EXPRESS KILLS SEXTON.

Train Runs Rye Man Down in Front of Crowd.

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, Sept. 16.—In the presence of a large number of commuters who were waiting for trains at the station of the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad this afternoon, Nelson Seymour, sexton of Christ Episcopal Church, met instant death. Mr. Seymour was crossing the four tracks through the employes' gate to meet the express agent who had several packages for the church, when a Boston express came along.

He leaned up against the fence which separates the westbound express track from the local. He did not see a New York express nearing him at the rate of fifty miles an hour, and as there was not room enough for his body between the fence and the train, he was picked up by the pilot and tossed high in the air.

Mr. Seymour was forty-two years old. He leaves a wife and one child.

RESCUE BY HUMAN CHAIN.

Policeman Let Down Headfirst to Drag Woman from Ferry Slip.

By forming a human chain Katherine O'Brien, thirty-eight years old, of 236 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, was rescued from drowning last night at the Fulton Street ferry. She was taken from beneath the pier by Policeman Rieley of the Old, Slip Station, who was lowered head foremost from the pier, men holding his feet.

The woman was on the runway and fell into the water. Her screams were heard by Policeman Reilly, who summoned John Kelly and William Mullen, watchmen at Fulton Market. The men procured a rope and attempted to reach the woman, who was under the pier. She was clinging to a pile and several times she let go, but had strength enough to catch the pile again.

Rieley then lay down on the pier and allowed himself to be lowered head foremost, Kelly and Mullen holding on to his feet. A third lowered a lantern so that the policeman could see. Grabbing the woman by one arm, the policeman lifted her from the pile.

Rieley then tied a rope about her body and she was lifted to the pier. She was taken to the Hudson Street Hospital and will recover.

OYAMA'S ARMY NOW THREATENS MUKDEN

Japanese Reported to be Advancing on the City.

FIGHTING ALREADY BEGUN

Wounded Russians Brought In—St. Petersburg War Office Hears of Flanking Move.

MUKDEN, Sept. 16.—It is reported here that the Japanese are advancing on Mukden from the east. A strong force of Russians is ready to meet them.

Early this morning twenty-six wounded men belonging to Major Gen. Mistchenko's Cossack division were brought into Mukden. Particulars of the fight in which they were wounded are not available. It is not clear whether it was a simple outpost affair or the beginning of the real Japanese advance on Mukden.

ST. PETERSBURG, Saturday, Sept. 17, (2:25 A. M.)—The War Office has heard of an apparent Japanese concentration against the flanks of Gen. Kuropatkin's army, preparatory to an advance toward Mukden.

While it is not in a position absolutely to confirm or deny the report, it would surprise the War Office should Field Marshal Oyama have been able, in such a short time, to organize his forces for a serious advance northward.

Gen. Kuropatkin reported yesterday that reconnaissances had established the fact that the Japanese were massing near Yen-Tai and Ben-tsia-pu-Tse, (twenty miles southeast of Mukden.) Bodies of Japanese were also moving in the Liao River Valley.

The dispositions of the Japanese forces are taken to indicate that the Japanese intend, when they advance, to strike from the eastward. They seem to be avoiding the territory west of the Liao River, possibly because it is flat and would give the Russians the advantage of their superiority in cavalry.

A dispatch from Mukden says the Russian patrols, up to the present time, have repulsed all Japanese outpost attacks and that communications with Sin-min-Tin have not been interrupted. Practically all the Russian stragglers, according to this dispatch, have arrived at Mukden.

NEW ARMY FOR JAPAN.

120,000 Men Will Be Ready for Service Within a Month.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Shanghai reports that the Japanese scheme to raise a First National Army of men from thirty-two to forty years of age, a majority of whom have previously served with the colors, will provide a total strength of 120,000 men, who will be ready for service within a month.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Shanghai correspondent telegraphs that, according to trustworthy information from Japan, the First Militia contingent has received orders to prepare to depart for the front.

According to the same correspondent, relatives of officers of the Kanazawa Regiment have been privately informed that all except one of the officers have been killed at Port Arthur.

JAPANESE SLAIN BY JAPANESE.

It Is Said That a Whole Regiment Was Destroyed by Mistake.

MUKDEN, Sept. 16, (Via St. Petersburg, Sept. 17.)—Supplementary details of the battle of Liao-Yang show that there were many narrow escapes, owing to the similarity of the Russian uniforms to those of the Japanese. Serious results were prevented, however, by the Russian officers directing that the men must not shoot except on specific orders.

The Japanese, on the other hand, destroyed the whole of their own Forty-first Regiment by firing upon it in mistake for a Russian force.

Ammunition at Port Arthur Giving Out —Shell Wrecks a Destroyer.

TOKIO, Sept. 15.—Private accounts suggest that Port Arthur is being gradually reduced to extremities.

By The Associated Press.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 16.—The Japanese troops between Sept. 8 and Sept. 10 captured by assault a fort situated on a high hill two miles east of Golden Hill, Port Arthur. The fighting was not severe.

The Japanese were able to remain in the fort because the quality of the powder used at Golden Hill was so poor that many shells fell short and others failed to explode.

The foregoing information was received from an intelligent Chinese, who left Port Arthur on Sept. 12. He had been a dockyard laborer there for many years. He adds that the Japanese are tunneling under the Russian forts, with the intention of blowing them up. He says that the work of tunneling is slow and arduous, but will probably be successful.

The fort which the Japanese captured is not regarded as essential to the defense of Port Arthur, although it is obvious that there will be some disadvantage from its occupation, as the Japanese are constantly receiving heavy guns from Japan, to which the Russians are unable to reply effectively.

The Russians have placed mines under all the public buildings, wharves, arsenals, and everything that could possibly be of use to the Japanese, with the intention of destroying them should the Japanese enter the city.

The house formerly occupied by Viceroy Alexieff was hit by a shell recently and was partially wrecked.

Another shell struck a destroyer which was lying in dock undergoing repairs, knocking it into kindling wood and killing seven sailors. This shell came from the Japanese fleet, which comes in much closer than formerly, daily throwing a few shells. One shell demolished several engines in the dock yard and killed an officer and two men.

The five eleven-inch guns on Golden Hill which were formerly pointed seaward have been rearranged, three of them now pointing landward.

Th Chinese alleges that all of the guns except the ten and twelve inch guns have been removed to land batteries from on board the battleships, where they were of very little use.

Of all the ships in the harbor only six are now fully able to participate in another fight.

A month ago the Golden Hill batteries threatened Shu-shi-Yen. Now, the Chinese says, the shells fall far short of that point.

Ammunition is growing scarcer, but there is plenty of bread. The price of flour is now 9 rubles.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16.—The North China Daily News to-day publishes a private letter from a Chinese interpreter employed from 1897 until the end of last month in the Commissariat Department at Port Arthur.

The writer says that in February last the department supplied daily 33,000 rations to the Russian land forces alone, the naval forces supplying themselves. "But when," he adds, "we departed only 15,000 rations were supplied daily to the whole garrison, including the crews of the iron-clads, who are now manning the forts. There are now 24,000 sick and wounded men at Port Arthur.

"Of ammunition of all kinds there are very small stocks, and there are only five weeks' full rations remaining."

The interpreter also says that the garrison at Port Arthur, the officers excepted, is anxious to surrender.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17.—The Tien-Tsin correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that the Japanese are sending strong reinforcements to Port Arthur by way of Louisa Bay.

"It is stated," the correspondent asserts, "that Gen. Kuropatkin intimated to the Port Arthur garrison that it must resist for a month longer.

"A correspondent who was captured at Liao-Yang, and who went to Yin-Kow, is reported to have been rearrested. The Consul at Yin-Kow has telegraphed to the American Minister at Tokio on the subject."

CZAR CONGRATULATES ARMY.

Says the Retreat from Liao-Yang Was Excellently Carried Out.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A dispatch to a news agency from Mukden says that in a General Order issued by Gen. Kuropatkin today the following message from Emperor Nicholas to the General was published:

"I see from your report that you were unable to hold the fortress of Liao-Yang owing to the enemy threatening to cut off your communications. The retreat of the whole army in such difficult circumstances and over such terrible roads was an operation excellently carried out in the face of grave difficulties.

"I thank you and your splendid troops for their heroic work and continued self-sacrifice. God guard you.

"NICHOLAS."

Commenting on his Majesty's message, Gen. Kuropatkin says it contains a further expression of lofty benevolence on the part of the Emperor, and adds:

"I am quite sure that in the work that lies before the Manchurian army every soldier will put forth his best efforts to achieve victory over the enemy and become worthy of the confidence of the Emperor."

Gen. Kuropatkin ordered that the Emperor's message be read to all the troops with solemn ceremony.

FEARS FOR SACRED CITY.

China Asks Japanese and Russians Not to Fight at Mukden.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17. — Under date of Sept. 14 The Daily Mail's correspondent at Mukden telegraphs as follows:

"On instructions from Peking the Chinese Governor has made representations politely requesting both armies not to fight at Mukden, owing to the danger of the demolition of the sacred tombs.

"No response has been received.

"Rich merchants here are preparing to escape to Sin-min-Tin.

"There is a shortage of rice here."

TOKIO, Sept. 15.—Japanese correspondents state that the forage which escaped destruction by the Russians after the battle of Liao-Yang is sufficient to feed the horses of four divisions for three months.

The iron bridge over the Tai-Tse River is capable of repair.

Order has been re-established in Liao-Yang City, where 400 people were killed during the battle in consequence of the Russian orders detaining non-combatants.

ANOTHER BRITISH SHIP HELD UP.

Collier Bound for Roumania Stopped Off Cape St. Vincent.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 16.—The British steamship Margit Groedel, with a cargo of coal from Cardiff for Sulina, Roumania, reports that she was stopped by the Russian cruiser Terek on Sept. 6 off Cape St. Vincent. The Terek fired three blank shots to bring the steamer about.

Two Russian officers and two armed men boarded the Margit Groedel and overhauled her papers. The Captain of the Margit Groedel was asked to sign a declaration that he had not been put to any inconvenience by the delay. He at first refused, but when told that his steamer would be detained until the arrival of the Russian Admiral the declaration was signed and the collier was allowed to proceed.

One of the Russian officers informed the Captain of the Margit Groedel that there were nine other Russian cruisers in the vicinity.

The Margit Groedel, a vessel of 2,540 tons, is owned by the Groedel Brothers' Steamship Company of London.

REPORTED RUSSIAN LOSSES.

258 Officers and 21,800 Men Said to Have Fallen—133 Guns Captured.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—Exact figures of the Russian losses in killed, wounded, and missing in the operations before Liao-Yang from Aug. 13 to Aug. 26 have been received by the General Staff, according to the Journal's St. Petersburg correspondent.

The losses, it is stated, were 2 Generals, 256 other officers and 21,800 soldiers. In addition, 133 guns were lost.

The material losses include fortifications costing $30,000,000.

RUSSIA GIVES WAY ON CONTRABAND QUESTION

Agrees to Put Food and Fuel in the Conditional Class.

NO RULING ON MACHINERY YET

But It Is Not Expected That America's Contention in Regard to This Point Will Be Successful.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—Russia has replied to the British note on the subject of contraband of war. Her answer was communicated to the British Ambassador, Sir Charles Hardinge, this afternoon.

The Ambassador was informed in effect that the Government had agreed to view as of a conditionally contraband character foodstuffs and fuel, and that supplementary instructions had been issued to the Russian naval commanders and prize courts, calling their attention to the misinterpretation which had been placed upon the prize regulations.

Russia, in Count Lamsdorff's response to Sir Charles Hardinge, in principle meets the views of the American and British Governments regarding foodstuffs and coal and other fuel as being conditional contraband of war, distinctly placing them in the category of articles susceptible of uses both in war and peace, and as such only liable to confiscation when consigned to blockaded ports or destined for the military or naval forces of an enemy.

Shipments in the ordinary course of trade to private persons or firms, even at an enemy's port, may be considered prima facie not contraband, but upon this point a distinct reservation is made. The simple fact of consignment to private persons does not preclude the possibility that the articles are ultimately destined for belligerent forces, and Russia insists that it be not necessarily regarded as conclusive evidence of the innocent character of the goods.

In other words, irregular ships' papers or other suspicious circumstances might vitiate the assumption of innocent character, but where such suspicion is raised the burden of proof to warrant legal seizure is to rest upon the captor. Count Lamsdorff points out, however, that Captains of merchantmen also owe a duty in such cases.

Count Lamsdorff's reply was not presented in written form, but was communicated verbally to Ambassador Hardinge. It will not involve public amendment of Russian contraband and prize regulations, but in effect it becomes an official interpretation of the original regulations made by the commission which considered the subject. As such it will hereafter govern naval commanders and prize courts, which thus far in the war have classed all articles enumerated in Article 6 of the Russian regulations as absolute contraband.

In this way Russia preserves her dignity by not making an open surrender, at the same time consenting to the interpretation asked for by the United States and Great Britain.

However, there is good ground for the belief that the contention of the United States that railway material and certain kinds of machinery be classed as conditional contraband will not be accepted. To that extent Count Lamsdorff's reply to Ambassador McCormick, which is expected to-morrow, may not be satisfactory to the United States.

Count Lamsdorff's victory in this controversy, while not absolutely complete, is perhaps noteworthy as having been achieved against powerful adverse influences. At one time it seemed doubtful whether any concessions could be obtained, but yesterday the Emperor sanctioned the decision communicated to Sir Charles Hardinge to-day.

Count Lamsdorff has received from Ambassador McCormick a supplementary note further amplifying the views of the United States on the general subject of contraband of war and the principles involved in the confiscation of those portions of the cargoes of the steamers Arabia and Calchas bound for Japanese ports.

The new instructions from St. Petersburg will involve a reversal of the judgment of the Vladivostok prize court by the Admiralty court in the case of the provisions confiscated.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17.—The Foreign Office yesterday received a dispatch from Ambassador Hardinge giving Russia's reply to the representations on the subject of contraband of war.

It is stated at the Foreign Office that while anything like a crisis is averted by the reply it does not close up the matter completely, and further discussion will probably ensue.

LONDON PAPERS PLEASED.

All but One Express Satisfaction Over Contraband Decision.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 17.—This morning's newspapers express great satisfaction over Russia's decision concerning contraband of war.

They presume it means that the verdict of the prize court in the case of the British steamer Calchas will be reversed and that the question raised in the cases of the British steamer Knight Commander and the German steamer Thea is still to be dealt with by the Russian commission.

The Morning Post alone, in an angry editorial, reproaches the Government for its failure to secure compensation in the cases of the steamers Allanton and Knight Commander, and declares that the impression its failure has produced in the Far East is that Great Britain is afraid of a quarrel with Russia.

NEW HEAD OF RUSSIAN NAVY.

Avellan May Be Replaced — He Opposed Contraband Concessions.

ST. PETERSBURG, Saturday, Sept. 17, (2:25 A. M.)—A rumor, which it is impossible to confirm, has been in circulation here for some time that Vice Admiral Doubasoff is to succeed Vice Admiral Avellan as the head of the Admiralty Department. In well-informed circles the change is regarded as quite possible.

Should the report prove to be true, there are reasons for supposing the change to be the outcome of the controversy over contraband, in which Admiral Avellan strongly opposed any concessions as the result of the British and American protests.

Admiral Doubasoff is one of the three naval heroes of the Turkish war. Skrydloff, Shestakoff, and Doubasoff were associated in the famous torpedo attack upon the Turkish monitors. Doubasoff is extremely popular in the navy, and is considered to be a man of great force and resolution. He is at present a member of the Consulting Council of the navy.

LIKELY TO HOLD THE KOREA.

British Commodore Believed to Have Received Orders as to Raider.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 16.—Naval men at Esquimault all expect that the Russian auxiliary cruiser Korea will be here soon.

It is understood that Commodore Goodrich received important cable dispatches last night, but it was impossible to get even an inkling of the contents. It is believed they include definite instructions to the Commodore as to what to do should the Korea or any other Russian ship put in here for any purpose. The opinion is expressed by naval men that once Russian vessels get in here they will not get out again until the war ends.

H. M. S. Grafton went into dry dock today for cleaning her copper bottom, so as to have everything ready for a quick movement.

The Flora, according to a statement to The Associated Press, could put to sea in ten minutes. She has steam up and her cable ready for shipping.

The shipping agents here are very anxious since news of the Korea's near presence leaked out. The Russian vessel is regarded as a direct menace to British shipping.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—The Russian transport Lena was taken to Mare Island Navy Yard late this afternoon under escort of the United States cruiser Marblehead.

Last night the wardroom officers of the New York entertained the wardroom officers of the Lena at dinner.

AGAINST IROQUOIS THEATRE.

Chicagoans Trying to Prevent the City from Licensing It.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The feeling against the opening of the Iroquois Theatre next Monday night culminated to-day when the Iroquois Memorial Association issued a formal condemnation of the project and protested against the city's licensing the theatre under the new management.

The petition of the association, which was first circulated last Spring, now contains several thousand names, among them the signatures of more than 3,000 school teachers. The association's officials to-day appealed to the clergy for their aid in preventing the reopening, and it is said several hundred ministers will unite in the protest.

President James J. Reynolds of the Memorial Association asked Acting Corporation Counsel Sexton for permission to have the association's architect, J. E. O. Pridmore, make an inspection of the theatre before a license is granted. Mr. Sexton said he thought the plan would not be opposed.

"If any legal way is found to prevent the issuance of the license," Mr. Sexton said, "I will stop the issuance and cause the matter to be adjudicated. As far as I can see now, if the building complies with the ordinance, a permit will have to be issued."

PAWN TICKETS LED TO JAIL.

Innocent Purchaser Gets Man Who Sold Them After Long Watch.

After a search of nearly two months William J. Morrissy of 150 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street found the man who sold him the pawn tickets that got him in jail.

About two months ago a store in East One Hundred and Twelfth Street was robbed. The police located some of the plunder in a pawnshop. The pawnbroker told the police the name of a bartender who redeemed some of the articles. He was arrested and told the police he bought the tickets from Morrissy. Both men were locked up and discharged after two days. It was shown that Morrissy had purchased the pawntickets from a man who had entered the saloon where the bartender was employed. The bartender needed a pair of cuff buttons and bought the ticket from Morrissy. Since then Morrissy has been looking for the man who sold him the tickets.

Last night he was standing at One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue, when he saw his man.

"I've been looking for you for two months and now I've got you," he said.

Morrissy called Policeman O'Connor and had the man arrested. At the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station he said that the goods had been given to him.

"Well," said Morrissy, "you can stay in jail two days then for some one giving them to you."

PAINT POT AFIRE, 3 HURT.

Painter Caused Trouble in Throwing Away Lighted Match.

During a fire early last evening at 712 East Twelfth Street three persons were burned so badly that they were taken to Bellevue Hospital. They were Mrs. Lena Marks and her one-year-old child, Emanuel, and Isaac Schuster, thirty-six years old, of 714 East Fourteenth Street.

For the past week painters have been at work on the house, which is a four-story tenement. Yesterday they were on the second floor, when one of them threw a lighted match in a pot of paint. The paint blazed up and two of the painters rushed out, crying "Fire." Schuster, who was in the front of the house, rushed in, grabbed the burning pot of paint and started for the hallway.

On the third floor was Mrs. Marks, with seven children, the oldest twelve and Emanuel, the youngest. She seized her baby and started down stairs. In the hall Schuster stumbled and fell beside Mrs. Marks. The burning paint splashed over the woman and her baby, and she rushed into the street, her dress ablaze. Neighbors grabbed the baby from her arms and, placing blankets about her, extinguished the flames. Schuster was also burned.

Immigrant Out of Money Turned on Gas.

Facing starvation Richard Stonyi, a young Hungarian decorator, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in a room in the Hotel Florence, 177 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn. Two months ago Stonyi left his home in Hungary to make his fortune in America. Reaching here, the work he expected to get for the mere asking he could find nowhere. At last his funds ran out, but the proprietor of the Hotel Florence told him he might remain there until he obtained employment. Yesterday, after thinking over his plight for a long time, he went to his room, and a few hours later he was found dead, asphyxiated by gas.

Stole Dead Man's Hat, Police Say.

Edwin Frutchy, thirty years old, a brakeman employed by the Erie Railroad, was found dead last night in his room in the Pennsylvania Hotel, in Jersey City. When the Morgue wagon was taking the body away some one stole the dead man's hat after it had been placed in the wagon. Later Alexander Kennedy was arrested on suspicion, and the hat, the police say, was found in his room.

The schoolship St. Mary's, after a cruise in foreign waters lasting many months, arrived at Glen Cove yesterday. Commander Hanus during the day reported his arrival to the Board of Education.

PEKING, Sept. 16.—If the Chinese at Peking are accurately informed, the interests of Great Britain are well protected in the treaty with the Tibetans.

It is clearly apparent that Great Britain does not mean to be confronted with another situation like that which necessitated the expedition to Lhasa.

The treaty binds the Tibetans to grant trading facilities, to demolish all the forts between the Indian frontier and Gyang-Tse, to repair all dangerous passes on existing routes of travel, and also to pay an indemnity of 7,500,000 rupees ($2,400,000) in three annual payments.

British troops are to occupy the Chumbi Valley until the indemnity is paid and the other agreements are fulfilled.

In addition the Tibetans agree not to sell, lease, or mortgage any Tibetan territory without Great Britain's consent, and they agree not to permit any foreign power to be concerned in the administration of the Government.

SACRED WHITE MICE AT SERVICE.

Uncanny Scenes Witnessed in Great Buddhist Temple at Lhasa.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Lhasa, dated Sept. 9, gives a striking description of a visit to the Buddhist Temple there during the service. The correspondent says:

"The Monks have extraordinary deep, devotional voices, reaching deeper tones than any Western bass. The voices of a thousand monks resembled the drone of a subterranean monster, musically plaintive—the voice of the earth God praying for release to the God of the skies.

"In the inner temple are three enormous images of the Buddhist trinity, set with jewels from foot to crown. In the upper story, in a place we called 'hell,' some Lamas were worshipping the demon protectress of the Grand Lama. The music here was harsh and barbaric. On pillars and on the walls were displayed every freak of diabolical invention in the shape of scrolls and devil masks. The object of this worship was huddled in a corner, a dwarf, hideous and malignant enough for such rites.

"All about the Lamas' feet ran little white mice, searching for grain, with which they are fed daily. They are scrupulously reverenced, as in their frail bodies the souls of previous guardians of the shrine are believed to be reincarnated.

"Some of the rites were conducted in absolute silence. As we watched from a latticed window some acolytes looked up, but the monks sat like stone figures, apparently oblivious of our presence. The reek of candles was almost suffocating. 'Thank God I'm not a Lama,' said a subaltern at my side as we clattered out of this unholy atmosphere of dreams."

SLEUTHS WAITED AND WON.

Say They Prevented $6,000 Burglary by Five-Hour Tarry.

After watching a Broadway building for over five hours last night, so they say, Detective Sergeants Clarke and Peabody prevented a $6,000 burglary by the capture of Manning Langer and Samuel Goldberg, each eighteen years old. The young men were arrested coming out of the building at 751 Broadway, where silk and gloves worth $6,000 were found in the hall. The articles were the property of Goldschmidt Brothers and the Charles Tannert Company.

The detectives say they heard that a "job" was to be "pulled off" by the boys last night and that they prepared for them. The detectives disguised themselves for the event, Clarke putting on a pair of goggles and making himself up as a country visitor in the city. Peabody put on a sweater and an old pair of trousers, and otherwise made up as a farmhand. Then they started out.

Late in the afternoon the detectives saw Langer and Goldberg, whom they followed here and there until, as they say, the young men entered the Broadway building. The detectives say that the boys had a key with which they admitted themselves.

Clarke and Peabody took up a station in a dark doorway opposite the store and waited. They had a long wait for they watched from 6 o'clock until after 11 for their men.

Then the two emerged. They were arrested and held.

SURGEONS DISCUSS CANCER.

Come to the Conclusion That the Disease on the Surface Is Curable.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—There has been a lively debate in the Dermatological Congress on the subject of cancer.

The well-known surgeon von Bergmann contended that almost every case of skin cancer was curable by surgery, while the Roentgen rays and radium effected only partial cures.

As a result of to-day's debate the conclusions were reached that cancers on the surface are curable; that in incurable cases the pain can be lessened and life prolonged, and that the bacillus of cancer is still unknown.

CONTRADICTS BUNAU-VARELLA.

Gen. Holguin Holds This Country Acted Wrongly in Panama.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Gen. Jorge Holguin, one of the commanders of the Colombian troops who marched on Barranquilla when Colombia contemplated an attempt to invade Panama, in an interview printed here answers the letter of M. Bunau-Varilla, ex-Minister of Panama to the United States, maintaining the correctness of the American course throughout the Panama transaction and declaring that President Roosevelt, in protecting Panama against Colombia, performed his bounden duty.

Holguin asserts that M. Bunau-Varilla and the United States adopted an irregular course and declares that Colombia has not abandoned her intention of securing redress.

PLANK FELL WITH HORSE.

"Lovey Mary" and "Tommy" Get a Bad Scare at Savoy.

A horse appears in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" at the Savoy. His name is Cuby and he came pretty near breaking up the performance last night.

Cuby's only appearance is in the first act. There is a plank slanting from below the stage to the street door on which he is supposed to walk out of the theatre. Last night the plank broke and Cuby fell with a crash, going through the floor into the cellar. Mabel Taliaferro and little William Burton Jaynes, who are Lovey Mary and Tommy in the play, were near by and got so badly scared that they couldn't go on for some time. Two firemen were summoned to extricate the animal.

WOMAN DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Found Staggering—Man Arrested by Description She Gave.

While walking through Carmine Street shortly before midnight last night Detectives McCormack and Brynes saw a woman staggering. They thought that she was under the influence of liquor and they took her to the Mercer Street Station, where an ambulance was called from the New York Hospital.

Dr. Shanahan, who responded, said that the woman had been drugged, and after working over her about half an hour revived her.

She said she was Hazel Webb of 103 Macdougal Street. She said that she had met a man at Carmine and Bleecker Streets, and he had taken her to a saloon and had treated her to several drinks. She said that she began to feel as if intoxicated. Then he took her to a hallway, where he robbed her of $18.

The woman gave the detectives a description of the man and they arrested a man who said he was William Staples, forty-three years old, of 133 West Third Street. He was found in Sullivan Street, but no money was found in his possession.

DOZED IN PARK; WAS ROBBED.

Diehl Felt Hand in Pocket—Negro Arrested After Chase.

John Phillips, a negro, was locked up in the Mercer Street Station last night on a charge of grand larceny. He was arrested on the complaint of Charles Diehl of 402 Fifth Street.

According to Diehl, he walked into Washington Square Park and sat down on one of the benches. He was rather tired, he said, and was dozing when a man came to the bench and took the seat next to him. He says he paid no attention to him, and was almost asleep when he was seized by the throat and felt a hand in his pocket, in which there was a gold watch and chain and a pocketbook containing $100. He was then pushed backwards, and the man ran away.

His shouts attracted the attention of Special Watchman Anderson and Policeman McEnerney. They followed the man up Fifth Avenue and arrested him at Ninth Street.

He was taken to the station, where, according to the police, several pawn tickets were found in his possession.

AUTO DRAGS HIM HALF BLOCK.

McDonald Not Much Hurt When Crowd Rescued Him.

James A. G. McDonald of 222 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, was knocked down by an automobile last night in Eighth Avenue, between One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Streets, and dragged half a block before the machine was stopped. The onlookers were sure that McDonald would be dead before he could be pulled out from beneath the wheels. But when the victim had been rescued he began to protest that he was not thinking about dying.

When an ambulance arrived he refused to go to a hospital. There was a party of four in the auto—two men and two women. The chauffeur, Everett Shotwell of 73 West Eighty-eighth Street, was arrested. The women left the machine as soon as it came to a standstill and hurried away.

SUES MEMBERS OF HIS CHURCH.

A St. Louis Pastor Charges Slander and Asks $45,000 Damages.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 16.—The Rev. Charles L. Janzow, pastor of the Bethlehem German Evangelical Lutheran Church, filed suit to-day against eighteen attendants of his church for $20,000 actual damages and $25,000 punitive damages, alleging slander.

He states that the defendants circulated reports that plaintiff distorted the Word of God, taught false doctrines, and was a heretic and false prophet. They also accused him, he avers, of possessing anarchistic beliefs. As a result, he says, he has received numerous anonymous communications threatening his life.

The Rev. Mr. Janzow has been pastor of the Bethlehem Church since 1883. He says the motive of the defendants is to compel him to resign. They are among the wealthy members of the congregation.

TENDER CRUSHES FIREMAN.

Engineer Thrown from Engine Couldn't Get Out of the Way.

George Williams, aged fifty, engineer of Engine Company No. 121, in South Second Street, Williamsburg, was run over by the tender yesterday and badly injured. The company was going to a fire in a seven-story brick factory building, at 272 and 274 Kent Avenue.

In Grand Street, near Kent Avenue, the engine driver turned his three-horse team out of the track to clear a car. In doing so the engine swerved to one side and Williams was thrown off. Before he could get up the team of the tender, directly behind, trampled upon him and two wheels passed over his body. At the Eastern District Hospital his condition was pronounced critical. The fire was extinguished with slight loss.

Senator Burrows says the investigation will be expedited so that there may be a report and action at the coming session of Congress.

FOUR DEAD IN FEUD; TROOPS CALLED OUT

Bloody Battle in Front of a Florida House at Night.

GARRISON ATTACKED BY MOB

First Engagement Was on a Train on Sunday—Both Parties Arm Followers in Private War.

Special to The New York Times.

BAXTER, Fla., Sept. 16.—The Duncan-Altman feud, which began in a fight on a train last Sunday, led to a battle at 1 o'clock this morning, in which two more men were killed and over half a dozen were wounded. This makes the total of dead four since the private war broke out, and some of the wounded will probably die.

The State authorities to-day sent Wilson's Battery of Jacksonville to the scene of hostilities. It arrived at 5 o'clock, and has gone into camp.

The battle this morning resulted from an attack on the house of William Duncan, which has been garrisoned nightly by a posse since the outbreak of the disorder. In the number was Deputy Sheriff Thrift.

Suddenly and without warning there were as many as twenty-five shots from rifles and pistols fired at the house. The deputy called on his posse to assist him, and as they came from the house there was another volley of shots.

Thrift was standing in front of the house. He was shot and lived but a few moments.

The others returned the fire and killed Ellis Dowling, a member of the Altman faction. The mob withdrew to the home of the Altmans, where they are ready to resist any attempt at arrest.

More than a half dozen were wounded, but their names cannot be obtained.

It was in response to an appeal by law-abiding citizens that Wilson's battery was sent here, arriving on a special train about 5 o'clock. The troops have cordoned their camp with sentries.

The Altman faction is hostile to the troops, saying the soldiers have been sent here to uphold the Duncans. Gov. Jennings is not in the State, and the troops were sent here by the Speaker of the House, Cromwell Gibson, who is Acting Governor in the absence of Jennings.

Shortly before dark to-night Sheriff Herndon and his posse brought in seven prisoners of the Altman faction. These men are stretched out on the floor of a shanty under guard of the Live Oak Rifles, the Wilson Battery of Artillery, and the Sheriff's posse.

There are eleven others of the Altman feudists. The men who were sent to see them have just returned and report that they have agreed to surrender themselves, and will come in voluntarily to-morrow and give themselves up.

If they do not violate their pledge this will place all of them in the custody of the officers, with the exception of Jesse Altman, who is still at large, and his whereabouts unknown. He was seen in Baxter to-day, but disappeared shortly before the Sheriff arrived from McClenney. It is thought that he, too, will surrender when he finds that the others have taken that course.

The Duncans, who are large turpentine operators, and the Altmans, who maintain a general store at Baxter, have been in a quarrel for months. The majority of the people in this section of Baxter County took sides with the Altmans, as the Duncans had made enemies in their turpentine operations.

Although the quarrel was a bitter one no overt act occurred until last Sunday, when the Duncans with a number of their negro employes boarded an excursion train on the Georgia Southern and Florida. The Altmans and several of their friends were on board and a quarrel soon arose.

The Altmans stabbed a Duncan negro to death, and when the Duncans interfered the Altmans killed James Duncan. The fight became general, and the train was turned into a shambles.

This riot occurred just over the Georgia line, and for that reason Sheriff Herndon of Baker County refused to arrest the alleged slayers of Duncan and the negro. Since then Baxter and the surrounding country have been divided into two hostile camps.

The Duncans and their negro employes have been under arms, and so have the Altmans and their friends. The Duncans were bent on arresting the Altmans, and the latter were resolved not to be arrested.

Tuesday an attempt was made to arrest the Altmans, but the latter resisted, shooting two members of the posse.

The Duncans are members of the Turpentine Operators' Association, and are being supported by that association.

ODELL AND HIGGINS HERE.

Governor Not Cheerful — Candidate Talks Harmony.

Both Gov. Odell and his candidate, Frank W. Higgins, were in the city yesterday. The Governor was inaccessible and would not talk on politics. He did not seem in a good humor, and left the city a few hours after his arrival here for Monmouth Beach, where he will remain during the remainder of the week.

Mr. Higgins, after commenting on the harmony in the party and what a good augury it was for success, said:

"I did not know until the convention assembled that I would get the nomination. I talked with Senator Platt and Mr. Woodruff both before and during the convention. We have nothing but the best feeling for each other.

"I expect to make several speeches during the campaign, and my headquarters will be in Olean. I will be officially notified of my nomination, but I believe the date has not yet been set. I am here to meet some friends who are coming from Europe to-morrow. As soon as they arrive we will go home to Olean."

The Republican campaign is to be rushed next week, now that the State nominations are complete. On Wednesday Camp Roosevelt, the successor to Camp McKinley, will be opened in Harlem by Samuel Strasburger. The entrance will be in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and behind this building, on lots in One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street, an immense tent will be erected capable of seating 6,000 persons.

Chairman Cortelyou returned to this city yesterday after his trip to Chicago. He refused to comment on the political situation other than to say that his trip had been very satisfactory, and that conditions in the West were fully up to expectations.

Sereno E. Payne, who visited headquarters yesterday, predicted that the State of New York would go for Roosevelt by 75,000. He would not even abate his estimate when reminded that the election was still nearly two months off.

PLATT STRATEGY EXPLAINED.

Col. Dunn Reveals Real Mystery of the Senator's Tactics.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Col. George W. Dunn, who returned from Saratoga to-day, said of the nominations made there by the Republican State Convention:

"The principal object of Senator Platt and myself was to hold the convention where it was, so that either Higgins or Woodruff would be nominated, instead of some other man. Either one of them was perfectly satisfactory to us. It is an excellent ticket, and we are all going to stand by it.

"From twenty-five years' acquaintance with Frank W. Higgins, I want to say that if he is elected he will be Governor every minute and no one else. I have seen him in positions where it took iron nerve to hold his ground, and he had it all the while. I trust that every Republican friend of mine in the Southern tier will give Frank W Higgins as loyal support as they would any man of their own choice."

SEES FAIRBANKS AND DAVIS.

Washington Gets a Look at Both Vice Presidential Candidates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Washington had the special treat to-day of welcoming and speeding away both the Vice Presidential candidates. Both went to West Virginia, Mr. Fairbanks to make speeches, Mr. Davis to enjoy a rest in his home at Elkins.

Senator Fairbanks arrived at 9:38 and was driven at once to the Baltimore and Ohio station. He is well known to the general run of people in Washington, and all along his way from the car out to the carriage, and later at the other station, he was greeted with a general murmur of recognition.

Once or twice there were faint attempts at applause. The tall and solemn Hoosier bent and bowed to right and left and lifted his hat.

The special train bearing the Republicans had hardly left before the regular 10 o'clock train pulled in and Mr. Davis came into the station to take the train for home.

Special to The New York Times.

CUMBERLAND, Sept. 16.—Senator Fairbanks met a cordial reception from about 15,000 people during his ten-minute stay here this afternoon. He spoke from the rear platform after Senator Scott introduced him, referring to him as his party's standard bearer in 1908. While Mr. Fairbanks was occasionally cheered, there was an apparent lack of enthusiasm.

Ex-Senator Davis, the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, did not hurry in going from the Baltimore and Ohio to the West Virginia Central depot this afternoon, stopping on the street to talk to old acquaintances, and when he arrived at the latter depot he found that the train had pulled out for Elkins.

But he had his car cut off the train at Ridgely and brought back by special engine. He then boarded it, and was able to overtake the regular train at Pinto, where his car was attached to it. There was no one at the depot here to greet the candidate, who walked from one station to the other carrying his grip, his coming having been unheralded.

ELKINS, West Va., Sept. 16.—Mr. Davis returned at 9:30 o'clock to-night in his private car Graceland from his Eastern trip. He was feeling well physically, but shows much worry over the condition of his son, John T. Davis, who is very ill with typhoid fever at Davis Memorial Hospital. Senator Davis stopped at his private station and drove at once to Graceland.

Newark Republicans Nominate.

NEWARK, Sept. 16.—The Republican City Convention was held to-night. There was no opposition to the renomination of Mayor Henry M. Doremus or of Water Commissioner Augustus F. Eggers. Dr. Joseph Fewsmith, whose term as Trustee of the City Home expires this year, would not accept a renomination, and Henry F. Willard was named in his place.

Dollar Dinner for Watson.

Thomas E. Watson, People's Party candidate for President, is to be the guest of honor at a "dollar dinner" to be given him here about Oct. 1. The date will be set to suit the convenience of Mr. Watson.

ANOTHER LYNCHING ARREST.

Hotel Proprietor Charged with Complicity in Huntsville Affair.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 16.—The second arrest in connection with the lynching of the negro, Horace Maples, was made to-day. Thomas N. Riggins, proprietor of the Stegall Hotel, was placed in jail charged by indictment with murder.

Ben Hill was the first and only other person indicted who has been arrested so far. Several others are believed to have taken flight.

Dog tents were pitched to-day and the militia is prepared to stay an indefinite time. Their presence has put a stop to all talk of trouble. The Grand Jury resumed its work on the lynching to-day.

Guarded by squads of military, Riggins and Hill marched into the Circuit Court room to-day and had a preliminary hearing. Soldiers in a civil court room have not been seen here since the days immediately following the civil war.

Riggins's trial will take place Sept. 28 and Hill's Sept. 21. A special jury has been ordered for each occasion. Lawrence Cooper, attorney for Riggins, created somewhat of a sensation when in addressing the court he questioned the constitutionality of the act allowing soldiers in a civil court room. He made an impassioned speech against the presence of the militia.

Solicitor Pettus replied to Mr. Cooper with the statement that the militia were not aliens, but natives of Alabama, and sent here by their Governor to maintain the laws of the State.

Judge Speake characterized Mr. Cooper's speech as incendiary, and reminded the attorney that what he said was liable to arouse the passions of the people. Judge Speake assumed responsibility for the presence of the military.

The Grand Jury returned nine other true bills to-night against alleged members of the mob. This makes nineteen indictments.

DEMOCRATS LIKELY TO CARRY WEST VIRGINIA.

Prominent Republicans Abandoning Their Party.

SPLITS IN TWO COUNTIES

Peculiar Republican Attitude Toward the Negro—Want the Democrats to Disfranchise Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PARKERSBURG, West Va., Sept. 16.—In attempting to forecast the political future of West Virginia it must not be forgotten that she is just as much a part of the Old Dominion, and therefore of the South, as she ever was, notwithstanding imaginary boundary lines. It is true that in the last two political campaigns the Republicans have been successful, but not by overwhelming majorities, and then by methods of corruption upheard of before in the political annals of the State.

The coal fields, mining districts, and lumber camps of the State have been overrun by shrewd operators and manipulators from Ohio and Pennsylvania, who, regardless of their political affiliations, are here simply to take advantage of the high tariff rate on the products that this State is rich in, and direct their men to vote accordingly, several times, if necessary. These men, however, are estranged from the party of protection this year, because of the great wave of tax reform sentiment that has been sweeping over the State, culminating in the recent special session of the Legislature that enacted this sentiment into some laws reaching these monopolies by way of local taxation.

Before the Republican nominating convention that named the State ticket was held the farmers of the State were very much in favor of the tax reform scheme promulgated by the State machine, one provision of which was to take the State tax all off the land and relieve the farmer in other ways. Since the recent special session of the Legislature was held and some of the tax bills were passed, it has been discovered that the farmer has bought the customary gold brick, and that the benefit to the farmer from the tax reform plan of the State House machine is largely mythical.

Now they are up in arms over the deception that was practiced to give W. M. O. Dawson, the machine candidate, the nomination for Governor, and many Republicans will resent it at the polls.

In Kanawha County, that usually gives 2,000 Republican majority, the Republicans have two tickets in the field, and in the Congressional district in which that county is situated two Republican candidates have been named, and both say they will stick till the day of election.

In this County of Wood there are two Republican legislative tickets, though this latter matter may be harmonized.

REPUBLICANS LEAVING PARTY.

Many prominent Republicans have gone over to the Democratic Party in this State since the Wheeling Convention, and the discontent with Republican rule is widespread and growing. Among the converts to the Democratic ranks from the Republican Party may be mentioned E. H. Fitch of Cabell County, one of the most eloquent Republican spellbinders in the State, who made a speech at the Democratic State Convention here announcing his conversion to the Democratic faith; John S. Farr, one of the Presidential Electors on the Republican ticket; Nelson B. Whittaker, formerly a Republican State Senator from Ohio County, and a man of wide influence. J. S. Darst, candidate for the nomination of State Auditor, is on the fence, and Henry Schmulbach, the Wheeling millionaire brewer, who was a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed N. B. Scott, is also said to be contemplating a change of political allegiance.

The candidacy of H. G. Davis for Vice President on the National Democratic ticket was undoubtedly a ten-strike for the Democracy in this State. It will make that party thousands of votes in West Virginia.

Everybody likes the old man, both for his sterling and absolute honesty and integrity and for his kindliness of heart and demeanor. The people, common and otherwise, love him and revere him.

His record is clean. Every Republican vote in his county, and all other votes, is counted just as it is cast. He sees that it is done that way.

There is not a Republican in West Virginia who would not be perfectly satisfied to allow Henry G. Davis to be the Returning Board for the whole State and certify the election returns without anybody else seeing them. They know that he would be so honest in seeing that every vote was counted just as it was cast that he would favor the opposition in a matter of controversy rather than his own party.

He has a wonderful aptitude for detail work. He learned that on the railroad. He is seeing that every county in the State is being thoroughly organized, and he is paying the bills himself.

In this work of organization he is backed by one of the most astute political managers in the State, Chairman John T. McGraw. This is the McGraw who came within one vote six years ago in a so-called Republican State of being elected to the Senate over Nathan B. Scott.

ELKINS NOT TALKING.

Senator Scott has been quoted as saying that West Virginia will be carried for Roosevelt by 7,000. This is a decrease of 14,000 in McKinley's majority of four years ago.

What has Senator Elkins said? Nothing. There is a well-defined suspicion that the senior Senator would not be heart-broken to see his father-in-law in the Vice Presidential chair. It is commonly said that Mrs. Hallie Elkins will see to it that "Uncle Steve" does not hurt "Papa" very much.

It is thought that Gov. A. B. White will be a candidate for the Senate before the next Legislature, and he is an aggressive fighter if ever there was one. So there is some apprehension among the friends of Senator Scott over the Governor's supposed attitude. Gov. White has made some bitter enemies in his party, who would rather vote the Democratic ticket than the Republican if they thought Gov. White would profit by it in any way.

The negro is cutting a figure, too, in this State. A great many Republicans will vote in November to eliminate him from politics. For that is what voting the Democratic ticket means.

This was plainly and overwhelmingly shown at the recent Democratic State Convention here, at which every delegate wore a "White Man's Party" badge, and that sort of a plank would have been inserted in the State platform unanimously had not a message from David B. Hill at the last moment advised against it, on account of the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate coming from this State.

"The Republicans are tired of the negro because they have to buy him at every election, and the Democrats are disgusted with him because of that fact and for the further reason that they don't like him anyhow. There are 14,000 negroes in this State, and the Democrats see danger in a larger number, while the Republicans are content to see them disfranchised, provided the Democrats do it.

It is somewhat remarkable to note this changed attitude of the Republicans on the negro question, but that their position is now one of marked hostility to the black man there can be no mistake.

So after looking over the ground carefully and taking cognizance of the situation somewhat methodically, the conclusion must inevitably be that the Republican Party stands in great danger of losing West Virginia in the coming election, and that the Mountain State will swing again into her old-time moorings and take her place with the Solid South.

Man Reported Dead Rushes Into Church and Claims His Bride.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Sept. 16.—Mary Cerwick had two suitors in Austria, George Heinz and Andrew Mayock. She accepted the former and agreed to marry him when he came to this country and provided a home for her. Miss Cerwick arrived in Freeland unexpectedly last month. Her sweetheart was working in another town, but the girl was told by a relative, so it is alleged, that Heinz had died suddenly. The grief of the would-be bride was great. Mayock, the rejected suitor, now came on the scene, and the girl finally agreed to marry him.

The marriage was to have taken place today in the Polish Catholic Church. Just as the priest was about to unite them a man rushed into the church, crying:

"I forbid the marriage—the girl is engaged to me!"

It was Heinz, who had heard of the contemplated wedding that very morning, and had hurried to the church at once.

Miss Cerwick ran to him and the priest declared there would be no marriage. Heinz and the girl came to Wilkesbarre later in the day, procured a license, and will be married to-morrow.

WILL PROSECUTE LYNCHERS.

Georgia Attorney General Will Take Case If Grand Jury Indicts.

ATLANTA, Sept. 16.—Gov. Terrell said the civil authorities may yet take a hand in the Statesboro affair.

"If the Bullock County Grand Jury will return indictments against a member or members of the mob which burned Reed and Cato at the stake I will request Attorney General Hart to attend the session of the court and aid in the prosecution of the men who trampled on the laws of Georgia," said Gov. Terrell. "It is not within the province of the Attorney General to take the initiative, but if Bullock County will do its part the people may rest assured that everything will be done to bring the offenders to justice."

The State Constitution prevents the Governor from acting directly against the Sheriff or any one who might have been connected with the crime. The county officers can only be removed by the Grand Jury for malfeasance in office.

JUSTICES IN FISTIC DUEL.

Meet in Omaha Street and from Words Quickly Come to Blows.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 16.—Personal differences of long standing between two local Justices came to a climax this morning when C. M. Bachman and "Little Bismarck" Alstadt met outside their offices, which adjoin each other.

Bachman accused his rival of talking to his detriment behind his back. The testimony of eye witnesses differs as to who first struck the other. Before the combatants could be separated several blows had been landed. Bachman, who is Acting Police Judge, will cause his antagonist to be brought before him on a charge of assault. Justice Alstadt announces that he will file a complaint in the County Court.

AGAINST FRANCHISE TAX.

Savings Banks Are Working to Have Law Repealed.

The State Association of Savings Banks is working to secure the repeal of the franchise tax on savings banks, and has appointed a committee, with William H. Wood, President of the Bowery Savings Bank, as Chairman, to prepare arguments dealing with the question for distribution throughout the State prior to the coming election.

Until 1901 savings banks were exempted from taxation. In that year, however, the policy was abandoned and a State tax imposed equal to 1 per cent. of the bank's surplus or guarantee fund and undivided earnings.

WHY BRYAN IS FOR PARKER.

Still for Free Silver, but the Issues of To-day Overshadow It.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Sept. 16.—In a speech here last night William J. Bryan reiterated his faith in bimetallism, and said:

"You ask me why I, a free silver man, can support a man who is opposed to this principle and a platform that is silent when it should have spoken. I reply that I love peace and the gospel of peace better than I do all the gold and silver in the world.

"I went to St. Louis," said the speaker, "and found some people who wanted a gold plank in the platform, and if they had placed that in there I think I should be talking on the money question to-night. I have not given up the idea of fighting for silver, and I think the day will come when the plank will again be a part of the platform.

"Our candidate does not stand with us on this and other vital questions, and for that I am sorry, but there are conditions facing us to-day that place us so that we can afford to ignore for the time being the issues which have been so close to our hearts and stand with our candidate on other and even more important questions which, I think, threaten the very foundation of our free Government."

FAVOR JUDGE NEWBURGER.

Friends Advocating Him for Supreme Bench Vacancy.

There will be a vacancy on the Supreme Court bench this year, occasioned by the retirement on Jan. 1 of Justice John J. Freedman, who then will have reached the age limit. A successor to Justice Freedman will be elected in November.

The Democratic County Convention to nominate a candidate will be held Nov. 6, and nomination is equivalent to election. The man most prominently mentioned for the place is Judge Joseph Newburger of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Newburger's friends declare that, while there are other candidates in the field, none has a more valid claim than he. Judge Newburger, who is fifty-one years old, has been prominent in Tammany Hall for many years. He was born in this city and studied law at the Columbia Law School. In 1890 he was appointed to fill an unexpired term in the City Court. After five years' service there he was elected a General Sessions Judge in 1895.

There is no such thing with Judge Newburger as "law's delay." During the nine years he has been on the General Sessions bench he has disposed of some 10,000 cases, among them those of Dr. Kennedy, Sam Parks, Lawrence Murphy, and Robert A. Ammon. He has been very fortunate, too, in having had very few reversals in cases tried before him. His friends are confident he will receive the nomination.

The tribe will increase this Fall.

The reasons follow. They're not dull reading:

First is a collection of brand new Norfolk Double-breasted Jacket Suits, for boys of eight to sixteen years. They are made of all-wool mixed cheviots, silk-sewed and strongly made for school use. Each suit has an extra pair of knee trousers, making the suits an exceptional value at $7; but we have priced them at $5 a suit.

The other offering is a collection of about one hundred odd suits from last season's stock. They are all in the proper weights for Fall and Winter wear; are good-looking, well-made, serviceable suits, that were priced last season at from $5 to $9. The sizes are broken; but include those from eight to thirteen years, and fifteen and seventeen-year sizes.

Men's Neckwear at 25c

These attractive Four-in-hand Scarfs for men, are made from the ends of silks used in the regular half-dollar goods. There are two hundred and fifty dozen Scarfs in the collection, fifty dozen of which are made of black barathea.

They are fine Scarfs to buy for 25c. Broadway and Ninth st.

Men's Suspenders at 25c

This is the same story as the scarfs. The webbings are plain and fancy lisle thread of the same quality as used in the regular fifty-cent suspenders; the ends and odd pieces being made up by the manufacturers for us to sell at 25c.

Broadway and Ninth street.

Fall Waists for Women

The heavier waists for Fall wear are shown in fine variety. One group of particular interest today, is composed of waists made of cotton vestings and fancy cheviots, in various neat effects, some in white with figures of black or colors; some in stripes or plaids, some in rich solid effects in fancy colorings.

All are smartly tailor-made, plaited, stitched and trimmed with buttons; some with stock collars with embroidered turnovers.

They are priced at $2.75 each, though they are worth much more. Second floor, Tenth street.

$1.50 CORSETS
For a Dollar

The reason for this saving of a third is the fact that these fine Corsets are made for us at a sharp concession by the maker; and we call them

The Wanamaker Special No. 983

They are intended for medium and long figures; are moderately long from the waist-line up, and extremely long over the hips; producing gracefully sloping lines. Made of fine batiste, trimmed with wide lace and ribbon.

$1—but you couldn't duplicate them for less than $1.50 elsewhere.

Second floor, Tenth street.

The Easy and Comfortable Stetson Derbies

In three ways the Stetson Derby Hats for men are supreme. First they are lighter in weight than all other Derby hats; they are soft and flexible on the head; and in the Clear Nutria Derby, they present the finest quality produced in a Derby hat today.

The man who wears a Stetson Derby does not have a hard red ring around his head, which stops circulation, and helps to make a man bald.

The man who has never worn a Stetson Derby, of course cannot realize the difference, but the man who has worn one Stetson, can never be induced to wear one of the heavy, stiff Derbies of other makes.

They are shown in all the new Fall blocks at $3.50 and $5; in both black and brown—the Stetson Clear Nutria in black only—the best Derby made—at $6.

"Wanamaker Special" Soft Hats for young men, in pearl, tan, and new browns, made especially for us by Stetson, at $3.50 and $5.

Other Soft and Stiff Hats in complete variety of shapes at $2 and $3.

Men's Hat Store, Second floor, Ninth street.

TURNOVER COLLARS
That the Papers Are Talking About

The Shopping Editor of the "Times" is not influenced by a store's desire to sell something, in writing up items of interest which she sees.

These Collars attracted her attention, and she wrote of them because they are worthy of special notice.

The following is quoted from the "Times" of yesterday:

IN THE SHOP

The prettiest things for the money in the way of small collars are pretty turnovers, a little deeper than the ordinary top collar, and made of muslin, lace insertion and edging. The muslin is sheer and fine, the insertion put on up and down the collar at intervals, and a full edge of the lace finishes it. They cost 25 cents apiece.

Of course the item did not tell where the collars could be bought; that would have made it advertising—we supply the omission.

These Collars were made in our own factory, and, of course, are original in style, as well as unusually low in price. 25c each.

We are also showing 25c Collar-and-Cuff Sets, made in our own factory, that are really worth double the price. They are made of sheer embroidered lawn, in a variety of pretty patterns. The Collars are 1¾ inches deep, and the Cuffs 3 inches deep, as is the new style this Fall.

At 15c we show fine embroidered lawn Collars, 1¾ in. deep, with a quarter-inch hemstitched border, in several different patterns; really worth 25c.

Broadway.

Women's Handkerchiefs

Two specially interesting groups of pure linen Handkerchiefs that should attract women today:

First is a collection of very thin sheer hemstitched embroidered Handkerchiefs, that have just arrived from Belfast. They are in fifteen different patterns, each handkerchief mounted on a card. The price is 50c each.

Another group is composed of all-linen Handkerchiefs in colored novelty effects, which sell regularly at 50c each; today they are 25c each. Only three hundred handkerchiefs in the lot.

Women who want inexpensive, serviceable all-linen handkerchiefs will appreciate the plain hemstitched handkerchiefs, at 85c a dozen. They are worth a half more. Broadway.

On a special counter in the Tenth street aisle will be found this additional group of Women's Unlaundered Hand-embroidered Handkerchiefs, regularly worth 25c each, today at 15c each.

Handsome Walking Suits
For Women

Here is such a collection as makes a representative exhibition of what American manufacturers have made this season in Street Suits for women. The prices range from $12.50 to $50 a suit. But Saturday's short story is confined to two popular styles at medium prices:

One suit is made of the new herringbone cheviot, in black and blue. The coat is twenty-seven inches long; the seams are all finished with wide strappings; the collar inlaid with velvet; braid-trimmed, belted back, satin-lined. The skirts are nine-gored, with all gores plaited to the knee; unlined. The price is $16.50.

The other style is made of handsome cheviot, with 27-inch fitted jacket; stitched revers of dull taffeta silk; attractive cloth vest; new wide sleeves and velvet collar. The gored skirts are finished with side plaits; unlined.

Price, $22.50.

Second floor, Broadway.

$1.25 CHEVIOTS
At 65c and 75c a Yard

These fabrics are being sold today all over the country at $1.25 a yard. They are of the present season's manufacture, but too many of them were made, and the surplus was offered to us in order that we might distribute it quickly, and without disturbing the regular trade.

The Cheviots are in herringbone and diagonal twilled weaves, covered with small mohair figured nubs in self colors—some showing dashes of white as well.

The color-range is exceedingly large, and includes all the new popular colorings:

Light brown, medium brown, dark brown, cardinals, garnets, dark tan, cadet blue, light gray, royal blue, navy blue, hunter's green, dark green, reseda, plum, black.

50 inches wide,

65c and 75c a yard, instead of $1.25. Rotunda.

EDISON PHONOGRAPHS
On the Club Plan

The most superb piano demands, for the music it gives, the accurate touch of the hand that plays it; and the Edison Phonograph, while in itself the most perfect piece of mechanism for reproducing sound, doubles its superiority over all others by reason of the perfection of the Edison Gold Moulded Records, which are so vastly superior to all other records.

By the Edison process, a gold mould is made from the master record that is absolutely perfect; and in this gold mould all other records are formed with a perfection that has never been known before. They are absolutely true and uniform, and reproduce all music of instruments and the human voice in a manner superior to all others. The effects are really marvelous.

By the Wanamaker Club Plan you can buy an Edison Phonograph, in the various styles, by the payment of one dollar down, and ten per cent. of the price each month, afterwards.

Edison Gold Moulded Records, although the finest that are made, are sold at 35c each.

FULL ELEVATED TRAINS CRASH ON LOFTY CURVE

Rear-End Collision in Brooklyn in Broad Daylight.

CAR HUNG ACROSS STRUCTURE

Dozen Passengers Hurt by Flying Glass —Motorman and Conductor Arrested, but Not Held.

A rear-end collision occurred between two trains at about 7 o'clock yesterday morning on the Fifth Avenue line of the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad at the curve at Third Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street, the highest point on the road. It caused a panic in the crowded cars and resulted in slight injuries to about a dozen passengers. One of the cars was derailed, and it was regarded as remarkable that it did not plunge from the structure into a deep railroad cut seventy feet below.

One motor train ran into another, which was standing on the curve. It is asserted that the motorman of the rear train was signaled to stop, and passengers on both trains declared that it was inexplicable to them that he failed to see the train standing ahead of his own.

A five-car train, on its way to the bridge and filled with passengers, was rounding the curve from Third Avenue into Thirty-eighth Street, when it suddenly came to a stop. It was said that something went wrong with the controller box. While the motorman and an electrician were tinkering with the controller another train bound for the bridge came along. This train was in charge of Motorman John H. Phillips and Conductor Philip McAleer. Persons who were on each train say that they saw a brakeman waving a flag from the rear of the first train. The second train, however, did not stop, but, traveling at a slow pace, ran into the first train. Passengers on each train, seeing that there would be a collision, had already jumped from their seats and were making for the doors.

The force of the collision was such as to throw many of the passengers to the floor, and there was panic in several of the cars. The guards, however, kept their heads, and succeeded in calming the frightened passengers. About a dozen men and women were cut by flying glass from the broken windows, but none was seriously hurt.

The forward wheels of the first car of the rear train jumped the rails, and the car was thrown diagonally across the track, the platform hanging over the edge of the structure. Alongside the elevated road in Thirty-eighth Street is a deep railroad cut, through which surface cars are operated. The possibility of one or more of the cars toppling over into this cut added to the fears of the passengers. The rear part of the last car of the first train and front platform of the second train were wrecked by the collision.

A few moments after the collision the first train was able to proceed to the Thirty-sixth Street station, where it discharged its passengers. Passengers on the second train walked the track to the station. It required more than an hour to place the derailed car back on the tracks. The second train was then run into the repair yard. While this was being done traffic on the line was at a standstill below Thirty-sixth Street.

The motorman and conductor of the second train were arrested, but were discharged for lack of evidence.

THINK HE IS HARLEM BURGLAR.

Man Surprised in Woman's Apartment Captured After Lively Chase.

A man who gave his name as Walter Summers and who, the police say they believe is one of the men responsible for various flat burglaries committed recently in One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, near Eighth Avenue, was arrested after a lively chase yesterday afternoon.

Summers was detected yesterday in the apartment of Mrs. Katherine Booth, at 2,119 Eighth Avenue. Mrs. Booth, with her daughter, Mrs. Millie Fiske, and the latter's six-year-old daughter Clara had been down town shopping. They returned home about 5 o'clock, and the little girl, as soon as the door was unlocked, ran into the parlor. From that room she looked into her mother's room and saw Summers hiding under the bed. Her screams brought Mrs. Booth and Mrs. Fiske. The two women reached the room just as Summers emerged from his hiding place, and then they, too, began to scream.

Summers begged the women to keep quiet and assured them that he would do them no harm. Then he bolted out of the flat into the hall, and ran down stairs to the street door. Mrs. Booth and Mrs. Fiske followed him and, their cries for help brought together a great crowd, which started in pursuit of the burglar. Policeman McBryan of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station was one of those who joined in the chase. For several blocks the chase lasted, but at Seventh Avenue and One Hundred and Fourteenth Street Summers had to dodge an ambulance and McBryan got him.

Summers showed fight, and McBryan finally had to bring him to terms at the point of his revolver. Among the robberies in which the police think he was concerned were those last week in the flat of Mrs. Joseph Sprowles, 255 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, who lost about $700 worth of jewelry, and in the apartment of Mrs. William C. Mandt, at 646 East One Hundred and Forty-first Street.

STOLE SEVEN RATTLESNAKES.

Somebody Bereaved Burton Royce, the Pied Piper of the Berkshires.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Sept. 16.—A box containing seven large live rattlesnakes, including one of the rare black species, was stolen a few nights ago from Burton Royce of South Egremont, in the Berkshires. He had hoped to sell the reptiles to a museum for $100.

During the recent dry spell the rattlesnakes that infest Mount Everett, usually hidden in the rocks, came out in numbers to get water, even into dooryards at the foothills on the South Egremont side of the mountain.

A few mornings ago a woman saw an immense rattler curled up on her doorstep. The family summoned Royce, the rattler catcher of that section, who easily captured the snake.

Royce has had a harvest of late. He was seen one day with five big rattlers which he had killed hanging down his back. He sells the oil and skins.

CHILDREN FIND SUICIDE.

Unknown Man Had Cut His Throat with Penknife at Woodhaven.

Little children gathering golden rod in Sutter's Wood, Woodhaven, L. I., yesterday were startled by the discovery of the body of a man resting against the roots of a tree. The throat of the man was cut from ear to ear. At his feet lay a two-bladed pocket knife, and near his left hand was a hand mirror.

The children ran, screaming, into Woodhaven, and gave the alarm. Police Sergt. Wetzler of the Richmond Hill Station had the body sent to the morgue of Coroner Rouff. The body is that of a man apparently about thirty years of age. He was smooth shaven, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, and well dressed in a blue sack suit, black felt hat, black lace shoes, and black striped shirt. There was nothing about the body by which it could be identified.

ELIAS P. SMITHERS KILLED.

Prominent Philadelphian Meets Death in Trenton by Falling Down Stairs.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 16.—Elias Primrose Smithers, ex-Register of Wills of Philadelphia, plunged headlong down a steep stairway in the Hotel Sterling last night, and suffered injuries that caused his death to-day in Mercer Hospital.

Mr. Smithers, who was a lawyer and resided at 1,841 Master Street, Philadelphia, drove to Trenton last night from Asbury Park on his way to his home, accompanied by H. L. Hartman, his law partner, and registered at the Sterling. After dinner Mr. Smithers, who was sixty-one years old, started down the stairs to the lower floor. The stairs are steep, and in some way Mr. Smithers slipped. He was unconscious when his partner reached his side at the bottom, and it was found that besides a fractured skull he was suffering from internal injuries. He died early to-day.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Elias P. Smithers was born in Milford, Sussex County, Del., on July 31, 1843. His father was a sea Captain and a leading citizen of the town, where the family had lived since early in the eighteenth century. When the son was fifteen years of age the family moved to this city. He entered the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated with honors in 1869. Mr. Smithers early took an active interest in politics, and became well known as a worker for the Republican Party. In 1873 he was rewarded by an appointment as Assistant City Solicitor, holding this position two years. In 1883 he was elected Common Councilman from the Twenty-ninth Ward, and was re-elected as each term expired until he was made Register of Wills in 1894. Since 1898 he had devoted himself to his private practice, taking up almost entirely civil and corporation litigation, in which he attained distinction.

Mr. Smithers was a Director of the Union Trust Company, a member of the Union Republican Club, the Continental and Columbia Clubs, and the Masonic fraternity. He married in 1870 Miss Anna L. Mason, a daughter of Thomas L. Mason, and had no children. His wife died several months ago.

McADOO REPORTS ON CRIME.

25 Homicides and 253 Burglaries Since Aug. 1—Getting After Captains.

Police Commissioner McAdoo yesterday made public reports from all of the police Captains in the city on the robberies, assaults, felonious assaults, and homicides that have occurred since Aug. 1, together with the results in every case.

The returns are as follows:

Since Aug. 1 there have been 24 homicides, for which 23 arrests have been made; 253 burglaries have been reported, with 97 arrests; 68 robberies, with 57 arrests, and 95 felonious assaults, with 93 arrests.

Commenting on this record, Commissioner McAdoo said: "It was not quite so bad as some people seemed to think. There have been arrests in every homicide case but one, which, it seems to me, is doing pretty well. Of the burglaries, many of them were flat burglaries, and in most of the cases little or nothing was stolen. Of course, this class of crime is one of the hardest to uncover, but there has been no disposition on the part of the police to shirk their responsibilities. The showing in the other cases needs little comment. It speaks for itself."

The Commissioner has made a new rule for the Captains, somewhat similar to that made by his predecessor, Gen. Greene. The latter ordered the commanding officers to report every detail of their work in writing, but this Mr. McAdoo thinks a trifle too exacting. He has ordered, therefore, that each Captain make a report in writing to him every morning, stating the hours he has spent on patrol each day, the hours in the station house, and the places which he has visited while on patrol. The Inspectors are now required to make a similar report.

More humiliation is in store for the Murphy Detective Sergeants, who have been ordered to do Roundsmen's duty in uniform, in the uniform itself. Instead of gold bars on the collar and arm, the unfortunate Detective Sergeants will wear bars of silver, with cloth stripes instead of mohair on their sleeves, while a mohair stripe instead of the prevailing cloth, will be put on the trousers leg.

WOMAN STABS AT BULLFIGHTER

Cervera's Widow Attacks Man on Trial in St. Louis Court.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 16.—Mme. Mariana Cervera, widow of the Spanish bull fighter, who was killed in St. Louis last June by Carleton Bass, the American matador, attacked Felix Roberts, one of the alleged bull fighters on trial in the Circuit Court at Clayton this afternoon with a cane having a sharp dagger point. Roberts saved himself by a quick motion of his hand, brushing aside the cane with a dexterity attained in the arena.

Witnesses of the attack say that Mrs. Cervera walked quietly from the courtroom to the bench upon which Roberts and several of his companions were seated, and addressing him in Spanish, struck at him with the pointed cane.

Mme. Cervera refused to discuss the matter, merely remarking: "I'll get even with him yet."

Men understanding Spanish who were seated beside Roberts at the time say they judge from the words used by Mme. Cervera a moment before the attack that she believed Roberts had been talking about her.

ATTACKS CHILD LABOR LAW.

Gov. Murphy's Father, as Defendant, Holds Jersey Statute Ineffective.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 16.—Counsel for the shoe manufacturing firm of Johnson & Murphy, in which the father of Gov. Franklin Murphy is a partner, and Anton F. Dieterle, a box manufacturer, defendants in a prosecution under the child labor law of 1903, made a savage attack on that statute to-day in the Second District Court, saying that it had never taken effect at all, and that any proceeding must be under the old act of 1883.

It was argued that the law of 1903 provided that it should take effect "in September," without specifying the year, and hence could never become effective. The difference in the statutes as applying to the present contention is that the act of 1883 provided for a criminal, and that of 1903 for a civil, prosecution. The latter, however, is far more stringent in its provisions. Counsel in this case are to submit briefs.

POLITICIANS MIXED UP IN QUEER COURT CASE

Bribery Explains Timely Absence of Girl, It Is Said.

AUNT ARRESTED AT LAWYER'S

Says District Leader Promised Her $150 to Keep Girl Away While Two Prisoners Got Free.

Orders were issued last evening for the arrest of two men of political prominence in connection with a very queer police proceeding in which, it is alleged, a woman accepted an agreement by which she was to get $150 for keeping her niece out of court until two men who were accused of attacking her got free. The woman, Mrs. Kate Kiernan, who is said to live at 1,649 First Avenue, was arrested yesterday as she was leaving the building at 132 Nassau Street, where she says her lawyer's office is.

Assistant District Attorney Krotel, who has been in charge of the case from the first, says he thought that the agreement might be found on her. The woman says the lawyer has it. According to Mr Krotel, however, she made a clean breast of the whole affair in the presence of a witness.

"The whole story will come out in court," he said last evening. "I may say that she said a man representing himself to be a district leader signed an agreement to pay her $150. She says that that agreement is in the possession of her lawyer. One of the reasons for arresting her immediately after she had called on the lawyer was the hope that she might have taken the agreement from him, and that it might be found on her. The lawyer is of exceptional standing in the profession, and I doubt not that he will present the agreement in court to-morrow."

Mrs. Kiernan was arraigned in the Centre Street Court yesterday afternoon on the charge of compounding a felony. She was held for examination to-day. The girl in the case, Miss Tessie Conaty, who says she lives at 1,075 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested last evening at 501 East Fifty-fifth Street, and was held as a suspicious person.

Miss Conaty appeared in the police court last week as complainant against two young men, who described themselves as Jacob Strobel and James Geraghty of 9 Chambers Street. She said that they and two other men attacked her at 13 Chambers Street, the old building of the Down-Town Tammany Club, the headquarters of "Tom" Foley's organization.

When the men were arraigned before Magistrate Pool their counsel asked for an adjournment, and the girl was sent to the House of detention. The next time that the case came up, it was adjourned without a hearing, but as Mrs. Kiernan was in court and promised to have the girl in court at the next hearing, Miss Conaty was paroled in her custody. When the case came up again Miss Conaty failed to appear. A bench warrant was issued for her arrest. Patrolman Schmidt testified that he could not find the girl at the address given by Mrs. Kiernan, nor could he find Mrs. Kiernan. Magistrate Pool discharged the prisoners then, Deputy Assistant District Attorney Krotel consenting. A policeman is said to have told the Magistrate that there was a vacant lot at the Myrtle Avenue address. If he did he did not tell the truth.

Several days later Mrs. Kiernan went into the court and told Chief Clerk Lewis that a man representing himself as a policeman had given her $50, and had promised her $100 additional to keep the girl from testifying. She went away before Magistrate Mayo took the bench. It was after Mr. Krotel heard of this incident that he began another investigation of the case.

Asks for Three More Fireboats.

Fire Commissioner Hayes yesterday sent a letter to Mayor McClellan asking for more fireboats. In it he calls attention to the "urgent need of additional fireboats" and requests that an appropriation of $375,000 be made for the three new fireboats, the amount asked to cover every detail of constructing, equipping, and fully completing them.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

Pritchard, Twice Approached by Wire Tappers Had Suspect Arrested.

Albert Brennan, who told the police that he lived in the Hotel Imperial, at Broadway and Thirty-second Street, was arrested yesterday for what the police say was an attempt at the old wire-tapping game.

The police assert that for over two weeks Brennan has been trying to convince A. K. Pritchard of 1,001 Van Alst Avenue, Astoria, that he was the head operator of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and able to secure advance information on the races. On Wednesday Pritchard says he won $100 on one of Brennan's tips, and that arrangements were then made for Pritchard to bet $6,000 on a horse that ran yesterday. Instead of betting the money, Pritchard followed Brennan to the house at 48 West Thirty-seventh Street, where Brennan was arrested.

After the arrest was made, Capt. Cottrell and three detectives found nine telephones, which were not connected. There was also a telegraph instrument, which was not connected with outside wires. A small dry battery was found under the table. Wires from the instrument led to another instrument behind a screen, where there was another sending instrument. Pritchard says that about three years ago three men attempted to obtain $200 from him by betting on the races, but were discovered to be frauds before he gave his money to them.

GIRL, ASSAULTED, DIES.

Found Unconscious Under a House at Anniston, Ala.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNISTON, Ala., Sept. 16.—Miss Bessie Roberts, sister of Naval Constructor Gaines Roberts of New Orleans, who was found bruised and unconscious under a vacant house in the outskirts of the city late yesterday afternoon, died to-day without regaining consciousness.

Mystery surrounds the affair. Miss Roberts had been terribly beaten and had lain under the house for three days and nights. At last children at play near by heard groans and found her.

The young woman left the home of her brother late Monday afternoon, and was last seen at the street car transfer station. When she failed to return her brother supposed she was at the house of her aunt in a suburban town, where she had intended going. Miss Roberts was assaulted and robbed, left for dead, and her body placed under the house to hide the crime.

Inquest Into Cemetery Mystery.

LYNBROOK, L. I., Sept. 16.—An inquest was held to-day into the death of the unknown young woman whose body was found April 2 in the woods near Evergreen Cemetery, Hempstead. Dr. J. H. Benton of Freeport and Walter H. Kent, a chemist, testified that traces of carbolic acid appeared in the stomach of the dead girl, and that there was an abrasion on her forehead that might have been made by a blunt instrument. The hearing was continued until a date in October to be fixed.

JERSEY REPUBLICAN PUZZLE.

Now Declare for Equal Tax So Railroads Won't Be Angry.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 16.—State Republican leaders who have had plans for the nomination of ex-Senator E. C. Stokes as the candidate against C. C. Black for Governor were disconcerted yesterday by the enthusiasm with which the Republican County Convention last night passed a resolution demanding that the State Convention adopt an equal taxation plank, and that it be specific as to the character of the act which should provide for it.

Mr. Stokes, who is understood to be the preference of the railroads, prefers to have the subject dismissed with a general and not a specific declaration. Essex, however, is the most important Republican centre in the State, and the leaders are convinced that its demands for something definite cannot be ignored. They fear, however, that if the convention commits the party to anything too radical, the corporations will not be as active in the Republican behalf as they have been heretofore. The dilemma is serious enough to have prompted a conference of party leaders here to-morrow to see how near they can come to constructing an equal tax platform without offending the railroad corporations, who would be directly hit by an open declaration.

Charles C. Black, the candidate of the Democratic Convention, received yesterday a number of dispatches from Republicans congratulating him on his nomination. He will be formally notified at his home on Jersey City Heights next Tuesday.

DIED IN THE POORHOUSE.

Napoleon Shipley, Oil Speculator, Lost a Fortune.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—Napoleon Shipley, ex-Postmaster of Washington, D. C., and for years one of the most successful and largest oil speculators of the country, died yesterday at the City Poor Farm, Marshalsea, Penn., aged eighty-five years. His large fortune was lost through bad investments, over $200,000 being sunk in a single oil venture.

Shipley was prominent in political circles at the National capital at the time of the civil war, and when he died had well-to-do relatives in Baltimore, Cleveland, Parkersburg, Pittsburg, and New Orleans. His body was claimed to-day by his son.

Admits He Beat Rhode Island Victim Found Dead in Massachusetts.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 16.—John Allingham, who was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having killed Mrs. Mary Crowley at Attleborough, Mass., to-day admitted to the police that he quarreled with the woman and assaulted her with a club. The body was found across the boundary in Massachusetts, a path from the Crowley house leading directly across the line.

On the strength of a decision by Attorney General Stearns that the murder took place in Rhode Island Allingham will be arraigned in the District Court here to-morrow morning on the charge of murder.

SAYS BOYS ROBBED EMPLOYER.

Harness Manufacturer Has Roommates Arrested, Also Alleged "Fence."

On the complaint of Henry Aschenbach, a harness manufacturer at 71 Warren Street, that $5,000 worth of costly harness had been stolen from his factory, Louis Ertel, eighteen years old, until lately employed by Aschenbach, and Fred Kankel, nineteen, a driver, both roommates in a furnished room house at 93 Third Avenue, were locked up in the Fifth Street Station last night charged with grand larceny.

At the same time detectives arrested Harry Freedman, twenty-two years old, a peddler, with a store at 55 and 57 Forsyth Street, on the charge of receiving stolen goods. It is alleged that Freedman was the "fence" for the plunder secured by the two youths, a large part of it having been found in his place.

COURT OFFICER'S ERROR LETS PRISONER ESCAPE

Alleged Forger Disappears as Jury Debates His Case.

RECAPTURED THROUGH WIFE

Leaving Criminal Courts Building She Joined Fields at Newark—He Cuts Detective Who Nabbed Him.

While a jury was deciding his fate on a forgery charge William J. Fields, alias Gillespie, escaped from the Criminal Courts Building in some mysterious way shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His wife and a sister-in-law were in the building awaiting the verdict. The jury had just retired and the prisoner was led from the court room, which is on the second floor. On the mezzanine floor below are the prison pens, and at the top of the stairway Court Officer Degnon yelled to Officer Frank, who he thought was below, that the prisoner was coming. Frank says he was not there. At any rate Fields was not seen again until Detective Flay recaptured him about 5 o'clock in the afternoon as he was entering the house of his father-in-law at 59 State Street, Newark, accompanied by his wife.

The prisoner drew a knife and made for Flay when Detective Sergeant Long of Newark went to his assistance. Flay was cut on the hand while Fields was also wounded. Mrs. Fields joined in the fight to assist her husband, but the detectives shoved her aside. Fields is in jail at Newark awaiting requisition papers.

When Mrs. Fields left the Criminal Courts Building in this city she was shadowed by Flay. She boarded a Lackawanna train at Hoboken and alighted at the Plane Street station, Newark.

She walked up the track, and then dropped from the embankment into a yard and went through to State Street. Flay, realizing her intention, cut around the block and was in State Street as quickly as she was. Half way to the house Fields joined his wife, stepping from a sheltering doorway.

The trial was before Judge McMahon, in Part I. of General Sessions. The hearing of evidence ended about 12:30 o'clock, and the prisoner was led out in charge of Court Officer Degnon. The route to the prison pens led through two hallways and then down a stairway. If one did not go down the stairway the way would lead through a door into the room of Part II., which was not being used yesterday. It was here that Mrs. Fields and her sister were waiting.

Degnon, according to his explanation afterward, acted as he had always done. He led his prisoner to the top of the stairway. Court Officer Frank was at the bottom—or at least Degnon thought he was.

"Prisoner to await jury's verdict," Degnon declares he said, addressing the officer below.

When the jury returned Degnon went to the pen to get Fields, but the prisoner was not there. Capt. Wheelock is in charge of the court prison, and it was to him that Judge McMahon addressed himself.

"Is the defendant in court?" he asked, in formal tones.

"He has escaped, your Honor," said Capt. Wheelock, and Frank followed with his statement that he had not received the prisoner.

Judge McMahon then dismissed the jury, on the ground that the case was a mistrial, and pretty soon both Fields's wife and her sister appeared in the courtroom, acting as if they did not know the man had escaped. As the room in which they had waited had been vacant a long time, the floor was coated with dust, and the detectives found footsteps leading to a hallway window, which is three stories from the ground. The women declared they had not seen Fields pass through.

Fields was arrested on June 24 because his picture was in the Rogues' Gallery. He was about to be dismissed when Inspector McCluskey remembered that he had had a talk with the Superintendent of the Pinkerton Detective Agency about a man sought by the American Bankers' Association. Sure enough Fields proved to be the man wanted on a charge of defrauding the Mount Morris Park Bank out of $115.68. The trick was new to the detectives. It was alleged that Fields would buy two articles at a time from some store, pay for both, and then return one, asking that a check be sent to him for the returned article. It was said that he used this check for his copies for the forgeries.

In the Mount Morris Park Bank case it was alleged that he bought two pictures from a dealer in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and through an accomplice got both the signature of the dealer and one of his letter heads.

Fields up to a few months ago was employed by the Prudential Insurance Company at Newark as an agent. He boarded at the home of L. A. Koehler, and on April 2 last got into trouble about a check. When he left he was accompanied to this city by Dora Koehler and they were married at the Little Church Around the Corner on April 4.

DROVE AROUND TOWN, DEAD.

Just Before Entering the Carriage Overhiser Wrote His Will.

WILLIAMSPORT, Penn., Sept. 16.—C. Fred Overhiser, a well-known manufacturer and a member of the Common Council of this city, died in a sudden and startling manner to-day. Entering his carriage, he drove down town and transacted some business, stopping at his office, where he wrote his will, and left it exposed on his desk.

Shortly thereafter he was observed driving past his residence, his strange appearance drawing the attention of the family, who were startled because he did not stop. They ran out to the vehicle and found him sitting upright holding the reins, but dead. He was fifty-one years old. Death was due to heart disease.

DIES ON OPERATING TABLE.

Appendicitis Patient at St. Francis's Hospital Expires Under Chloroform.

As the physicians in St. Francis's Hospital, in Fifth Street, were about to perform an operation last night on Peter Hubert, forty-four years old, of 1,174 Madison Avenue, the patient died, it is said, from the effects of the chloroform which had been administered as an anaesthetic.

Hubert had been admitted to the hospital a few days ago suffering from appendicitis, but, owing to his weak condition, the operation was postponed until last night. Dr. Muller and his assistants had given the man the chloroform, and were about to commence the operation, when they noticed he was sinking. He died within a few minutes. The Coroner's office was notified, and an investigation will be made.

TAGGART SEES WORKERS.

Democratic National Chairman Busy in Indiana.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16.—Thomas Taggart, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was in conference to-day with Democratic workers from all parts of Indiana at the Democratic State Committee rooms and at his hotel.

State Chairman O'Brien was one of those with whom Mr. Taggart conferred. In private conference with State Democratic leaders the National Chairman expressed confidence that Democrats would carry New York and Indiana. Mr. Taggart will go to French Lick to-morrow night, and on Monday he will go to Chicago. After remaining in Chicago two or three days he will return to National headquarters in New York City.

Asked if Western headquarters would be established in Chicago, Mr. Taggart replied:

"That will not be determined until I return to New York."

A reporter approached Chairman Taggart and read the following question to him: "Is it true that you are to be shelved in the West and that Senator Gorman is to supersede you at National Headquarters?"

Taggart smiled and answered: "Ask Gorman."

The Chairman made quite a hit to-day in his talk to the representative Democrats from all over the State, assembled here in conference. He has never been known to Indiana Democrats as a speechmaker, but in his talk to-day he concisely covered the whole political situation. His speech was a surprise to many and was most effective and encouraging. Every county in the State was heard from in the conference, which was addressed by leading Democrats of all shades of opinion.

PARKER'S PHYSICIAN DEAD.

The Judge Will Act as a Pallbearer To-day.

ESOPUS, Sept. 16.—Judge Parker reached home at 9:15 o'clock to-night. He was so busy in New York that he had no time for dinner, and the West Shore officials had a special buffet car attached to the train for the use of the Judge and his party. Mr. Hamlin accompanied the candidate from New York to Esopus, and is a guest for the night at Rosemount.

While Judge Parker was in New York Dr. Jacob Chambers of Kingston, who was the Parker family physician, died. The Judge will be one of the pall bearers at the funeral services to-morrow afternoon.

Three trains of Tammany braves were expected to stop for a few minutes at the Esopus depot Monday next en route to the State Convention. Whether they will journey over to Rosemount to be greeted at the depot by the candidate is not decided.

DIPHTHERIA ALARMS NEWARK.

Health Board to Inoculate Freely to Stop Disease.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Sept. 16.—The Board of Health will adopt drastic measures in an effort to prevent the spread of diphtheria in this city. There has been an increase in the number of cases in the last two weeks, and it is feared, now that the schools have opened, that a still greater number of cases may be reported. In the week ending Sept. 3 there were twenty-seven cases of diphtheria in the city, and in the week ending at noon last Saturday fifty-three cases were recorded. So far this week there have been fifty-one cases.

The authorities will demand the extensive use of antitoxin. They also propose that whenever one member of a family is suffering with the disease that every other inmate of the household shall be inoculated.

TO HOLD CONVENTION OF WORLD'S COTTON MEN

Move for Spinners' Conference at Sherry Banquet.

INVITATION TO ENGLISHMEN

Southern Bankers Prominent in Scheme Which Was Proposed by New Cotton Corporation.

The first step toward holding an international convention of cotton spinners in this country this Fall was taken at a banquet at Sherry's last night, when a resolution was passed inviting the cotton spinners of England to come across the water. The dinner was tendered by S. F. B. Morse, President of the Southern Cotton Corporation, and Richards Edmunds, editor of The Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore. Fifty Southern cotton growers and spinners who are here attending the Bankers' Convention were present.

The keynote of the banquet was sounded by George S. Graham, a Philadelphia lawyer, who reminded the Southern bankers that any form of enterprise must not be regarded as sectional, but that the entire country was interested in the South and with the South. He reminded them that it was almost superfluous to invite the Englishmen, because they were unalterably united anyway, in business as well as in patriotism, and feared neither "a black cloud nor a yellow peril."

The resolution inviting the cotton manufacturers to this country was unanimously adopted, after having been presented by L. P. Hillyer, cashier of the American National Bank of Georgia. It was as follows:

Bankers from the cotton growing States attending the American Bankers' Convention having heard that it might be possible to induce the cotton manufacturers of Great Britain and the Continent of Europe, either as an organization or as duly appointed delegates, to visit the United States and make a personal study of the cotton growing and manufacturing possibilities of the South, at a special meeting held for that purpose desire by this resolution to express their earnest hope that the spinners of Europe may visit this country this Fall, promising on behalf of every business interest a hearty welcome.

John Skelton Williams of the Seaboard Air Line Railway was the toastmaster of the evening. He urged the Southern bankers to support the proposed convention, citing the Panama canal as a reason for a coming cotton boom in the South. He asserted that the canal, when completed, would open up the way for a sale of millions of bales of cotton, more than now are sold in the open market.

In his speech depicting the opportunities which the South presented for the development of the industries of the country, John Disminks of St. Augustine asserted that the negro was not necessary to the South's prosperity. "We have found," he went on to say, "that they do not do the work they did in 1860, and that the white man does infinitely better."

That the English cotton spinners will come here is already assured, inasmuch as a letter was received a few days ago from the cotton spinners of England indicating that if they were invited they would be glad to come to this country this Fall. It is more than likely that they will visit the S. Louis Exposition while here, but their chief interest will be in the cotton-growing industries of the South.

MRS. FISKE HAS DRIVER HELD.

Actress Goes to Court Against Man Who Beat Horse.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, the actress, went to the Jefferson Market Court yesterday afternoon as the complaining witness against Benjamin Grosburg, a truck driver, whom, she alleged, she had seen cruelly beating a horse that he was driving.

When Magistrate Moss asked Mrs. Fiske to tell her side of the case, the actress said:

"I was being driven near Thompson and Houston Streets shortly before noon when I saw the prisoner whipping his horse most unmercifully because the animal would not pull the heavy load he had on his wagon. The poor beast was decrepit, covered with ugly sores, and in my judgment was totally unfit to be worked. I sought Agent Noble of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and asked that the driver be arrested."

Grosburg was held in bail of $1,000 for trial.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 16.—For the first time in history the Democratic city and county officials to-day accepted an invitation of the management of the Colored Fair Association and attended the carnival in a body. Judge Watts Parker adjourned Circuit Court at noon in order to allow the attorneys and court officials to be present.

The entire party was entertained at luncheon in the clubroom, and for several hours champagne was opened by the negroes in honor of the occasion. Speeches were made by the officers of the Fair Association and responded to by the city and county officials. The Colored Fair Association was organized in 1889, and each year the management has extended an invitation to the officials, but heretofore the invitation has been declined with thanks.

TROLLEY CAR HELPS AUTO.

Extends First Aid to Machine Jammed in Fence.

A trolley car last midnight extended first aid to an injured automobile which had vainly attempted to penetrate the wooden barrier running alongside the tracks of the New York Central Railroad on Jerome Avenue, near One Hundred and Sixty-first Street, and hung when half way through.

George Guttenberg of 310 East Twenty-second Street was driving the machine when it became unmanageable. With him was August Kranich of 1,231 Riverside Drive. Kranich jumped when he saw that the auto was beyond control, but Guttenberg clung to the steering wheel. He was jammed against the barrier and badly bruised. On the other side of the barrier was a ditch twenty feet deep.

The police thought if the auto was left in its perilous position it might fall in, and a passing trolley car was hailed.

A cable was passed from the trolley to the auto, the power was turned on, and the machine pulled back to solid ground.

THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH.

What One of the Race Has to Say on That Subject.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with great interest the speech of Clark Howell in THE TIMES of even date, and was very much surprised and gratified to read that he told an audience at the Waldorf-Astoria last night of the existence of a better element of negroes in the South. Surely the Democratic Party is very badly scared when it will allow its foremost orators to make such uncharacteristic statements. I further note the gentleman speaks eloquently of what might be accomplished through the co-operative efforts of the better element of both races. The negro would hail with the greatest delight the day and time when the South would extend the hand of genuine sympathy and encouragement untarnished by selfish motives; when it would be possible for the races to work in harmony and unity in that land.

But for the last forty years Mr. Howell and his people, except in a few rare instances, have assumed an attitude toward the negroes in the South that has made it very difficult for either race to do its best. The gentleman must have been trying to be amusing when he speaks of the better element of the South wishing the negro well. He certainly must know of a church in Alabama which has recently demanded the resignation of part of its membership for participating in the burning of a murderer down there. And surely it is not unreasonable to think the best element of a community is its church members.

How can the gentleman reconcile these, and hundreds of other similar actions, with his speech at the Waldorf-Astoria last night? And are not he and other gentleman orators of the Democratic Party doing everything possible to stir up race prejudice and keeping alive sectional animosities for political purposes? As a negro, and speaking from our standpoint, we do not believe that President Roosevelt has any more love for the negro than he has for the Jew, the Swede, the Italian, or any other of the many nationalities which go to make up this great Nation. He is not trying to place the negro in power in the South or anywhere else. He is not trying to make the negro rule over the white man in Alabama any more than he is in Massachusetts. He is simply doing that which Mr. Howell and his associates in the South could imitate with great profit to all concerned in the Southern States—that is, pursuing a just, honorable, straightforward, and upright course with the negro citizens of this country. It is the only course that can ever bring help to the negro and honor to the Nation.

The South has been told many times, and I thank God it is true, that it cannot go up and the negro remain down. You must take him up with you, or remain down with him, and the statesmen of the South may as well accept the truth now that there is not, and never will be, enough of intelligence, genius, or wealth to advance one and at the same time retard the other, all the writings and speeches to the contrary notwithstanding. PHILIPPINE COMMERCE CONTINUES TO INCREASE

United States Lead in Amount of Merchandise Sent There.

STATISTICS FOR NINE MONTHS

Volume of Carrying Business Under the American Flag Steadily Grows—Trade with Other Countries.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—During the nine months ended March last the total commerce of the Philippine Islands shows an increased value of more than $1,000,000, according to a statement given out to-day at the Bureau of Insular Affairs.

The statement says that the Philippine import trade advanced nearly $2,000,000 in value, and that a slight falling off is shown in the exports, as a result of decreased shipments in copra and sugar, although hemp and tobacco were exported in larger amounts than for the corresponding three-fourths of the previous year.

Excluding gold and silver and United States Government purchases, the Custom House returns give the total value of merchandise imported for the nine months ended March last at $25,027,021, and the exports at $22,236,169, a 7 per cent. increase in imports and 2 per cent. decrease in exports.

The rice-growing sections of the British and French East Indies have enjoyed most of the increase in trade, the latter territory sending three-fourths of the $10,000,000 worth of rice received.

Except for those countries from which rice is obtained, the statement says that for the first time since American occupation the United States leads in the amount of merchandise sent to the islands, and that the outgoing trade with the principal countries shows a decline in the value of shipments to the United States, more than $700,000 of the loss being credited to sugar exports and $800,000 to hemp.

More than one-half of the imports consisted of food and animals, while the exports were chiefly agricultural products, hemp exports amounting to $16,000,000, in round numbers. The figures on the carrying trade show an increase in volume of business done under the American flag, the amount carried to the islands being $1,535,027, while $2,227,805 of the exports left the islands under the American flag. British vessels took $18,172,819. Importations of flour, meats, and live stock increased, while there was a falling off in receipts of liquors and beverages, owing to local brewers and distillers having increased their output.

Imports of cotton goods dropped from $5,138,112 to $3,568,992; iron and steel imports rose to $1,914,511, a gain of $500,000, the United Kingdom supplying practically all of the $214,179 worth of sheets and plates imported. French merchants are said to control the jewelry trade. The sugar trade declined from $2,479,011 to $1,827,074, the entire output being sent to Japan, Hongkong, and China, no portion being exported to the United States

Leaf tobacco exported in 1904 amounted to $875,977, a substantial gain, Spain and Austria being the principal buyers, while exports of cigars increased to $712,052, Hongkong and the British East Indies buying more than one-half the amount.

Americans made up more than one-half the total arrivals, as shown by the immigration figures, the larger portion being classed as professional men.

TO RELIEVE CONGESTION.

Plan to Reduce Crowded Conditions at Bridge Entrance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As THE TIMES is the most influential newspaper in New York, the writer desires through its medium to offer a few suggestions to the city authorities that if carried out, would eliminate most of the congestion that exists at the entrance of the Brooklyn Bridge and vicinity, especially at the interesection of Park Row, Duane, Chambers, and New Chambers Streets—which will be aggravated when Elm Street is opened for traffic.

To begin with, the streets named cross one another like the letter X, and as the point of intersection is not more than thirty feet in width, the traffic from four different directions concentrates at the narrowest part, causing a continuous jam, necessitating the services of five policemen to keep traffic open.

To make matters worse, the car tracks of the Chambers Street horse car line cross each other at this narrow point, which is entirely unnecessary. By simply reversing the direction in which the cars are run—west on Duane Street, east on Chambers Street—and compelling all vehicles on those two thoroughfares to travel in the same direction as the horse cars, instead of in both directions as at present, half of the congestion would be removed.

New Chambers Street being practically the only outlet to the lower east side, the authorities should endeavor to reduce the annoying and vexatious delays to the traveling public by trying to remedy present conditions. By widening some streets and extending others, which could be done now at a comparatively small outlay, this could be accomplished. The money required for the improvement would be soon returned in taxes, for it would open up a section for business that is sadly neglected, for the reason that there is no way of reaching it conveniently.

By widening New Chambers Street at the intersection of Park Row, taking about twenty-five feet from the north side and fifty to seventy-five feet from the south side, and extending Duane Street at an angle past the Munro Building, through the blocks from Rose Street to Vandewater and Vandewater to Cliff, (making a continuous thoroughfare,) and widening Hague Street from Cliff to Pearl, much of the congestion that now exists could be avoided.

Another improvement that suggests itself could be made by cutting off the northwest corner of Spruce and Gold Streets and the southeast corner of Gold and Ferry Streets, (making a continuous street of Spruce and Ferry;) this would divert some of the traffic from Park Row and the Bridge entrance. Then if the Belgian pavement on Frankfort Street, (alongside the Bridge,) was lowered to the street level, making a plaza, Rose and Frankfort Streets would be relieved.

Other improvements might be mentioned, but if those herewith suggested were carried out they would not only stimulate and revive a section of the city that is now absolutely "dead," but would also benefit the entire traveling public. M. G.

THE SOUTHERNER WAS FIRST IN A BIG GALLOP

Three-Year-Old Easily Won Mile and a Quarter Handicap.

CHOICES BEATEN IN FOUR RACES

Linda Lee and Castalian Were the Long Chance Winners of the Day at the Brighton Beach Track.

A programme of purse races made the day's sport at the Brighton Beach track yesterday, and not even the enthusiasm of the betting element served to elevate the six contests of the card to the dignity of real racing. The weather was fair and the track good, but the absence of a stake feature seemingly was responsible for a big drop in the attendance. For want of a better contest, the race in the mile and a quarter handicap became the event of the afternoon, though only four horses ran for it. The rejuvenated four-year-old Hurstbourne, with the top weight, 124 pounds, starting favorite. Hurstbourne proved a disappointment, however, for after following in a good pace for a mile, he seemed to decide that a place in the rear was quite good enough for him, and though Martin went at him with whip and heels, he refused to try against the leaders, and Dekaber, second to Little Em through all the early running, went on at the finish and in a smart fight to the winning post was first a head before the three-year-old Ostrich.

In four of the six races of the card the best backed horses were beaten, the only winning favorites of the day being Jocund in the second race and The Southerner in the fifth. The Southerner always was the choice for his race, and after opening at 13 to 5 started at about 2 to 1 and galloped in an easy winner after Garnish made the early pace.

For the last race of the day J. E. Madden started a time-worn good thing in Linda Lee, which went back in the betting to 10 to 1, and then closed with a rush at the end and won by a head from Santa Catalina, Lucy Young, the pacemaker in the early part of the race stopping to a walk at the finish. One other long chance winner of the day was J. W. Colt's Castalian in the six furlongs selling race, for which Castalian started at 15 to 1 in a field of fourteen horses, the three-year-old Auditor being the favorite straight through the betting. Castalian broke back in the crowd, but went through his field with a rush and showing first in the first half furlong, held command to the end, winning ridden out by two lengths from Counterpoise, the second choice. MAJOR DELMAR FAILED.

Son of Del Mar Trotted an Unpaced Mile in 2:02¾.

READVILLE, Mass., Sept. 16.—Major Delmar failed by three-quarters of a second to beat the unpaced trotting record of 2:02¼ to-day at the Readville track, principally by reason of a somewhat heavy track and a stiff breeze that sprung up suddenly after the horse had started. When the son of Del Mar reached the three-quarters pole in 1:30¾, it looked as if the record would go, but the breeze and track proved too much of a drag. The times were 0:30¾; 1:00¾; 1:30¾; 2:02¾.

Gallagher was a strong favorite in the fast pace, but Nathan Straus outbrushed him in the last part of both heats. Summary:
